WINTER-FLOWERING ROSES

SPECIALLY LOW PRICES TO CLOSE OUT STOCKS REMAINING UNSOLD

We have a particularly fine stock of the newer and leading standard varieties in 3½ and 4-inch pots ready for immediate planting. The prices quoted below for 3½ and 4-inch stock are as low as the prices at which 2¼-inch stock is usually sold.

The demand for Ophelia is very heavy. If you want to plant this valuable new rose, do not delay placing order. While we have a nice stock of it at present, at the rate it is selling we are likely to become sold out before long.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Asters

It is unwise to figure on sufficient rainy spells at this season of the year and much safer in this case to rely on the hose for aster success than on the heavens until the first center bud appears, however, not much watering will be necessary and should not be applied unless the first part of the season proves uncommonly dry. But as soon as the buds begin to form and right along through the entire picking season great quantities of water are needed for the bringing forth of large and perfectly formed flowers, such as alone will make the growing of asters profitable. Where the field is a large one this could not be done anyway. The best plan then to follow is to water one part or section of the field one day, another the next day and so on, until at the end of four or five days the entire field has been gone over, when, should the weather continue dry, the process should be repeated.

Callas

Callas that have bloomed or been growing all winter should have a rest during the summer, which allows them to recuperate up new vigor for another season's flowering. They will ripen up better when placed in a warm sunny position until they need to be shaken out again the last of July or the first half of August when they can be potted up. Calla tubers are so inexpensive that it hardly pays to raise one's own stock, but if a quantity of the smaller offsets are planted out in rich ground they will increase in size surprisingly and can be potted up early in September, if carefully lifted, so as to keep the roots intact. Well watered and stood for a few days in partial shade they will grow right ahead and soon fill the pots with roots, or they can be planted in 3-inch pots and later shifted into 5-inch and plunged out of doors and they will make strong plants by end of September.

Chrysanthemums

Those who grow chrysanthemums in the house from first to last can give them better attention at all times. Do not neglect giving them a good syringing early every morning, which will allow the foliage time to dry out nicely before night-fall, but during dark or cloudy weather keep the plants as dry as possible. It should always be remembered that these plants will never stand humid or stagnant atmosphere. So first of all see that they have plenty of fresh air. During the hot weather, damping down will be necessary two or three times a day on the walks or paths. Go over the beds every day and water the dry places. Do not let the plants get overrun with fly before using effective means to keep them under control.

Adiantums

Now is the time to make new beds of adiantum for future cutting. No asparagus, no matter how soft and feathery will ever take the place of adiantum and every retail grower who can provide a house in which he can maintain a temperature not less than 60 degrees during zero weather, should devote some bench room to its culture. Stocks out of 2½ inch pots is all right but better and quicker results will be obtained by making use of larger plants. The present is as good a time as any to prepare for planting out, and even if you should not get as large and as fine fronds as your wholesaler supplies, you will appreciate having a good number of plants to cut from next winter. The adiantum like most members of the fern family, flourishes in mellow loam. This with a fair amount of well-rotted cow manure and a little sharp sand will do nicely. Provide good drainage and allow about one foot of space between the plants.

Pansies

To have pansies for winter flowering now is the time to make a sowing. Sow broadcast in a cold frame where the soil has been worked and raked until it is fine and mellow. Sow not too thickly, cover with fine soil and press firmly all over with a board, then water gently with a fine hose. Keep shaded until they begin to come up. When seedlings have made growth so they can be nicely handled they can be transplanted into other frames. The soil should be made rich and quite a bit of leaf mold mixed in. They can be planted from 6 to 8 inches apart each way. The pansy is quick to germinate and during the few days intervening between sowing seed and the little plants showing through the ground keep the beds constantly moist. Evening and morning watering may not be enough. Water ten times if necessary and never let the surface of the bed become parched.

Solanums

In order to have these in good sized plants by the fall they will want constant attention. Where they are planted out go over the ground every week and hoe and cultivate them. Keep the plants pinched back regularly so they will form bushy plants. Those that are grown under pot culture will want shifts from time to time.

Next Week: Carnations; Calceolarias; Easter Lilies; Mignonette; Orchids; Repairing Bollers and Piping.

The
 six months

Our readers will kindly take notice of the index to the contents of Vol. XXI, which accompanies this number of Horticulture. One would scarcely realize from a casual perusal of the contents as they appear from week to week the vast amount of useful horticultural literature that has been thus assembled during the short space of six months, and all delivered at your address every week for the sum of fifty cents. Surely no valid complaint can be made that the horticultural press does not give the subscriber his full money's worth. We are aware, of course, that there are journals which give greater bulk than Horticulture, but in the words of one of our friends, "they are not Horticulture and cannot take its place." Horticulture's contents have a distinctive permanent quality and it is not without a certain grateful pride that we send forth this tabulated summary of our work for the first half of the year 1915.

 fitness

Secretary Saunders' recommendation to the American Peony Society that it discountenance the placing on the market of any new variety of peony until it has proven its superiority to varieties already disseminated will meet with universal approval. The only possible dissenter to the carrying out of this principle might be the man with a pet production which to his magnified vision will loom up with an effulgence invisible to anyone else. For peonies, sweet peas, carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, dahlias or any other genus of flowers which is being developed by the hybridist, the fond worker who can see only the virtues and none of the defects in his "creations" will continue to be the big stumbling block but the time has come when each and all must submit to the cold-blooded scrutiny of the special society judges and without the sanction of such one's pets are not likely to travel very far from their birthplace.

 efficiency

A strong note in the Nurserymen's Convention at Detroit last week, as indicated by the reports which have reached us, was the need of "a better national association." It is a more hopeful sign in the case of an individual or an organization that dereliction or other imperfection be acknowledged from within rather than charged from without. We make no indictment against the nurserymen's organization when we say that this point was well taken. There is no association with which we have to do that could not materially raise its standard of efficiency and be made far more useful than at present. It only requires that this fact be felt and confessed and that the upbuilding and improvement be seriously taken in hand forthwith. If we were disposed to pick a flaw in the body above mentioned we might say that a little less conservatism and a more enterprising attitude towards the new and improved garden material continually being brought to light by hybridists and collectors would undoubtedly be welcomed by the garden loving public of this country.

Lively times ahead

The coming fall promises to be one of the liveliest, if not the very liveliest, thus far in the matter of flower shows. Apart from the usual multitude of annual fall exhibitions by local societies we now find four very ambitious projects in the field for this year, all aiming to be more or less national in scope, namely, in Cleveland, Rochester, Chicago and San Francisco. All these are scheduled for October and early November except Rochester, which is a September proposition. All hope to attract trade exhibitors from far and near and it certainly will keep any exhibitor of trade stock hustling to cover all the ground that it will be to his direct interest to reach. To the S. A. F. is due the credit for having initiated these trade enterprises and proved their value commercially to both those who want to sell and those who wish to buy, and particularly for having made the discovery of the value of the trade annex in a public flower show as a revenue producer and assistant annihilator of that dread bugbear known as a deficit. But our country is growing very rapidly horticulturally as well as otherwise and any trade dealer who seeks to maintain a position of national prominence will have to dig down deeper and deeper into his pockets and draw more heavily on his resources of energy and enterprise as the years pass. To trade paper advertising and the trade exhibitions must he resort and that liberally if he expects to hold his main line of attacks.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

The sweet pea exhibition held in the Palace of Horticulture, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, June 11-13, under the auspices of the American Sweet Pea Society and under the management of F. G. Cuthbertson was a wonderful show and pronounced success. On Friday, the Exposition officials recognized the occasion and designated the day as "Sweet Pea Day," sending Commissioner Chas. Vogelsang, who, in a neat speech presented the president with a bronze plaque in commemoration of the event. They also furnished a brass band of forty pieces. Papers were read by F. G. Cuthbertson and Mrs. Scannavina, president of the State Floral Society.

The show was extremely popular and thousands of people visited it, packing the aisles from morning until ten o'clock at night on each of the three days. A more successful show has never been held in California. Nothing but sweet peas were shown. The management had to change the date hurriedly twice on account of the weather, and it says a good deal for the enthusiasm of the California growers that such a show was attained. The vestibule of the Palace of Horticulture was filled to overflowing with magnificent sweet pea blossoms. Perhaps the greatest feature of the show were the floral designs which reflected great credit on the local florists.

During the afternoon Commissioner Vogelsang, representing the President of the Exposition, presented Lester L. Morse, as president of the American Sweet Pea Society, with a bronze plaque. President Morse replied and expressed his pleasure at being able to hold such an exhibition at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

The judges for the gardeners' and amateur classes were Fred H. Howard, of Howard & Smith, Nurserymen, Los Angeles; Emory E. Smith, of Emery & Smith, San Francisco; John McLaren, superintendent of parks, San Francisco. The decorative classes were judged by G. A. Dennison, Chief of Horticulture. During the afternoon the show was turned over to visitors, and from all accounts, the California Sweet Pea Show has come to stay.

Following are the prizes awarded:

Championship of California: This was won by David Bassett, gardener for Louis Stern, Menlo Park, Cal., with well grown examples of Elfrida Pearson, Illuminator, Margaret Atlee, King Edward Spencer, New Margaret Madison, Nubian, King White and Mrs. Cuthbertson. Second prize went to Mrs. R. Greig, Berkeley, Cal. Third to Mrs. R. P. Reed, San Francisco. The competition in this class was very keen and the judges were given considerable work to arrive at their decision. This was the "star" class of the exhibition.

The Burpee first prize for twelve varieties of Spencers went to Emile Ralston, San Jose, Cal.

Peter Henderson prizes for six vases Spencers: 1st, E. A. Richards, Berkeley, Cal., with the varieties Mrs. Cuthbertson, New Margaret Madison, King White, Nubian, Margaret Atlee and King Edward Spencer; 2nd, S. M. Spaulding, Menlo Park, Cal.; 3rd, Joe Penick, Stamford University, Cal.

American Sweet Pea Society prizes for vase of lavender Spencers: 1st, S. M. Spaulding with Asta Ohn; 2nd, Roy L. Donley, Berkeley, Cal.

Waldo Rohbert prizes for Pink Spencers: 1st, David Bassett with Elfrida Pearson; 2nd, Mrs. T. Sachau, San Leandro, Cal., with New Miriam Beaver.

C. C. Morse & Co. prizes for Grandifloras: 1st, John Smith, Berkeley, Cal.; 2nd, E. F. Delzer, Menlo Park, Cal.

Braslan Seed Growers Co. cup for twelve Spencers: 1st, David Bassett, Rosabelle and Mrs. C. W. Breamore were especially fine in this class.

Best vase of Red Spencers: Mrs. T. Sachau, San Leandro, with King Edward Spencer.

Best vase of Spencers in the exhibition: John Smith.

Most gracefully arranged vase of sweet peas, mixed colors, Miss Evelyn McLean, San Francisco, with a dainty combination of New Margaret Madison and New Miriam Beaver. The competition in this class was very keen and the exhibits attracted a great deal of attention during the afternoon.

For the President's silver cup there were four entries. Prize was awarded to the Francis Floral Co., San Francisco, for a jeweled bridal parasol design. The design stood ten feet high and each section of the para-was a different color of Spencer Sweet. The other designs were as follows: DeLuano, Rossi & Co., "Liberty Bell," standing about 5 feet 6 inches high, and worked in White Spencer, Helen Lewis, King Edward Spencer and Constance Oliver. Frank R. Clark of the Blossom Shop, "Tower of Jewels." Mrs. R. E. Darby, "Horn of Plenty."

In the class open to seed growers and seedsmen, C. C. Morse & Co. put up a magnificent collection, covering 200 sq. ft. and representing 200 varieties of Spencers. The exhibition was the best ever seen on the coast and perhaps the finest ever put up in America.

New Miriam Beaver occupied the center and showed off to splendid advantage against the black velvet background. Countess Spencer and Margaret Atlee made the two corner posts for the exhibit. The new variety, Scintillator, a cream ground Aurora, aroused great interest. The jury recommended that an award of merit be given to this variety. To add interest to their exhibit, Messrs. Morse & Co., showed a small vase of the original blue and purple sweet pea, then to represent a stage ahead a vase of Grandifloras and a vase of giant Spencers, having stems twenty-five inches long and large, beautiful blossoms. This exhibit was awarded the gold medal of the British National Sweet Pea Society and was recommended by the jury of awards for a medal of honor from the P. P. I. E.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co. of Philadelphia, Pa., were awarded the silver medal presented by the British National Sweet Pea Society for their splendid display, covering 100 sq. ft., nicely set up by Mr. Ellings, of the Lynch Nursery Company, Menlo Park. The center portion of the exhibit was entirely given over to Burpee & Company's novelty "Fiery Cross." The jury of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition recommended that a gold medal be awarded to Messrs. Burpee & Co., for their exhibit. The collection included about fifty of Burpee & Company's leading novelties and especially fine vases of Margaret Atlee, Thomas Stevenson, Helen Grosvenor, King Manuel, Stirling Stent and King Edward Spencer. Messrs. Burpee & Co. are to be congratulated on the spirit they showed in arranging for this exhibition at so great a distance from Philadelphia. An award of merit was voted for "Fiery Cross."

The L. D. Waller Seed Co., of Guadalupe, Cal., put up a very fine exhibit. In spite of the long distance which the flowers had to travel, they arrived in fine condition. The silver gilt medal was well deserved.

Waldo Rohnert exhibited a collection of fifty varieties, standard sorts.

Ant. C. Zvolanek, Lompoc, Cal., showed a collection of early flowering Spencers and general Spencers, gathered from his exhibit in the gardens of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. The varieties of winter flowering Spencers were very attractive.

Newport Show Postponed.

Owing to reports from different sections of the lateness of the season for sweet peas, we have decided to postpone the exhibition at Newport until July 15th and 16th. The final schedule is now ready for distribution.

HARRY A. BUNYARD, Secretary.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

The 40th Annual Meeting of this Association which was held at the Hotel Cadillac, Detroit, on June 23, 24 and 25, was very successful in attendance, business and recreation. Mayor Marx voiced a cordial welcome when President Chase called the opening session to order, J. Pitkin of Newark, N. J., responding. Among the informal proceedings were a trip through the parks on Wednesday and an entertainment at Lake St. Clair on Friday.

The report of Secretary Hall, which follows, shows the progress of the organization during the past year.

Annual Report of Secretary John Hall.

Your Secretary is pleased to report a more prompt response from members to the exhortation contained in the announcement of this convention, and to state further that the registration in the badge book for 1915 is the largest ever published with the exception of the years 1906 and 1913; also the amount of cash turned over to the treasurer is the largest during the same period with the exception of 1913. Four hundred and twenty-six names appear in the badge book for this year, and a leaf insert containing others received too late for publication, has been printed for use of members, thus bringing the total membership on the 15th day of June to 435. $3,130 were sent to the treasurer up to June 3.

The income from memberships and badge book for the past ten years are as follows:

1907	2,867.80
1908	2,883.60
1909	2,786.30

1911	2,771.85
1912	2,747.70
1913	3,314.15
1914	3,077.15
1915	3,130.90

The record of deaths during the past year is quite lengthy:

1914—Aug. 26, Hiram T. Jones, Eliabeth, N. J.; Sept. 3, Leigh Overman, Spokane, Wash.; Sept. 8, Peter Rohleder, Tippecanoe City, O.; Sept. 20, Albert Van Balen, of Felix & Dykhuis, Boskoop, Holland; Dec. 14, Joseph G. Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Dec. 17, Mrs. Jessie F. Moss, Huntsville, Ala.

Y.; May 4, Eugene Willett, North Collins, N. Y.; June 3, Henry J. Weber, Nursery, Mo. We mention also the following: Mrs. V. A. Vanicek, Newport, R. I.; Mrs. D. S. Lake, Shenandoah, Iowa; Mrs. Charles Ilgenfritz, Monroe, Mich.

The financial statement of the secretary is thus:

RECEIPTS
June 16, 1914. Balance in bank....	$81.13
March 16, 1915. Membership and accounts due	241.25
June 2, 1915. Membership and badge book advertisements.....	2,808.50
Totals	$3,130.90
Disbursements	$3,130.90

A personal reference in closing: We desire to make reference to the conference between the Executive Committee and ourself following last year's meeting, when the matter of appointment of secretary was left to those gentlemen. The consideration shown me and the kindly treatment accorded, prompt me to desire to express my appreciation and thanks, resulting in my continuation in office for the year. We have endeavored to perform the duties of the position faithfully, and if it is the pleasure of the Association to continue the relationship we promise fidelity to the best interests of the organization.

Many valuable papers were read on topics of vital interest to the nursery trade. Optimism was the key-note throughout.

Officers were elected as follows:

President, E. S. Welch, Shenandoah,

YARRAWA

The SWEET PEA Par-Excellence
For Winter Flowering Under Glass

We were awarded Certificates of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, and at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915.

YARRAWA is absolutely fixed—and true to color and type.

YARRAWA is an excellent good "floor," invariably giving an excellent result of itself whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds.

YARRAWA has the best foliage and rank strong growth of the summer flowering type and is a true winter blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20th and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex, or double flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is most pleasing shade of bright rose pink, with light wings.

As the supply of seed will be limited we advise ordering early.

Floradale-grown seed exclusively

ROCHESTER PLANS BIG FLOWER SHOW

Rochester, N. Y., is arranging for a big flower show from August 30 to September 11. It is to be held under the auspices of the Rochester Exposition, declared to be the biggest municipal exposition in the United States, now in its eighth year and attended annually by upward of 250,000 people. This is the first year of the flower show, and if it meets with the same success as have the other departments of the exposition, the Rochester Flower Show will soon be recognized as a national event.

The exposition includes many of the best features to be found at big state fairs and is attended by people from all over the country. Co-operating with the management of the exposition is a committee of five members of the Rochester Florists' Association, which has an enviable record for the artistic nature of its flower shows. The members of the committee are George B. Hart, chairman, who is the president of the local Florists' Association; Charles H. Vick, of James Vick's Sons; Harry E. Bates, of Lord & Burnham Co.; Fernando J. Keller, of J. B. Keller's Sons, and A. H. Salter, of Salter Brothers. Until last year, Mr. Vick was superintendent of the flower show at the New York State Fair at Syracuse and is well known to growers and florists everywhere. This year he is devoting his entire energy to the Rochester Flower Show.

It is the hope of the committee to make Rochester the meeting place for the grower and the florist, the seedsmen and the importer. As an inducement for the big growers and seedsmen to exhibit their plants, flowers and other products at Rochester, the committee makes the very attractive proposition of free space for all exhibitors. There is to be absolutely no charge of any kind for space or entry fees.

One of the best buildings at Exposition Park, which is owned by the municipality, has been assigned to the flower show. It contains upward of 20,000 square feet of unobstructed floor space, with high skylight roof, well equipped with water and sewer outlets; in fact, having been constructed specially for exhibition purposes, it is provided with every convenience, and those who go to Rochester will undoubtedly find it to be the most ideally adapted hall for a flower show that they have yet encountered.

Not only does the committee purpose to exert every effort to have the biggest growers in the country make exhibits, but they also intend to see that the retail florists and others interested in the trade go to Rochester. It is believed that the Rochester show will furnish a splendid opportunity for business, bringing the growers and retailers together to get acquainted.

The city of Rochester has a population of 250,000, with another three-quarters of a million within a radius of fifty miles. With this immense population and with the personal invitations to be sent out to the florists of all the eastern states, there will undoubtedly be a big attendance. Not only the interests which appeal to the growers directly, but also to their families, will be an extra inducement to visit the Rochester show. The Exposition's motto is "entertaining, educational and inspirational." Its Horse Show is second to none in the country. The best known stables in the country exhibit their blue-ribbon horses. The Art Loan Exhibit brings together oil paintings and water colors by the famous artists of America. The display of fruits and vegetables is unrivalled in this country. The central location of the city, with its numerous railroads, affords excellent facilities for easy access; its excellent park system, its beautiful drives, its fine residential sections, with their lawns, shrubbery and planting, will attract growers both private and commercial, as well as the trade in general.

HONOR FOR A ROSE LOVER.

The gold medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has been bestowed upon Miss Sarah B. Fay, of Woods Hole, Mass., by vote of the garden committee in recognition of her devotion to the rose. The committee visited Miss Fay's rose garden on Thursday, June 24, and found an unprecedented display of H. P. and H. T., and other June roses, probably the most extensive collection of established plants in this country, comprising many thousands of specimens in many hundred varieties. There is also a superb collection of rambler roses, but these were not in bloom at the time of the committee's visit. The estate has been under the care of M. H. Walsh for many years, and while the cultural success is, of course, due to him, yet his achievement is owing to Miss Fay's support and encouragement and would not have been possible were it not for her devotion to the rose, and so the highest award in the Society's power was most worthily bestowed.

BOTANICAL GARDEN AT FREDERICK, MD.

Frank C. Hargett, has been named superintendent of the Educational and Botanical gardens of Frederick, Md. Besides being in charge of the gardens Mr. Hargett will conduct experimental work with valuable plants and flowers in Frederick. Observations and returns from these experiments will be filed with the United States Department of Agriculture. Plants and flowers from all sections of the world will be placed in this garden by the governmental authorities for experimental purposes.

The board of trustees of this new institution are William F. Gude, Washington; Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanical Gardens, and Mayor Lewis H. Fraley, of Frederick, Md.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

The thirty-third annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association held in San Francisco the week of June 21st was largely and enthusiastically attended. The party of eastern delegates, about sixty, arrived Saturday night after a pleasant side entertainment in Southern California, where they were met by President L. L. Morse of this city. Monday evening a reception was held for the delegates at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morse with about 95 present. The convention was called to order Tuesday morning at the Palace of Horticulture on the exposition grounds. The officers made their reports, new members were proposed, and Prof. H. E. Van Norman, Dean of the California State Farm School at Davis, Cal., read a paper on "The Value of Technical Training for the Seedsman."

Wednesday morning a bronze medal was presented the association on behalf of the Exposition, and short responses were made by President Morse and First Vice-President Lupton on behalf of the eastern delegates. At Wednesday's business session, the following new members were admitted: C. E. DePuy Co., Pontiac, Mich.; Pacific Seed Co., Caldwell, Ida.; Valley Seed Co., Sacramento, Cal.; Vogeler Seed and Produce Co., Salt Lake City, Utah; Waldo Bohnert, Gilroy, Cal. Papers were read as scheduled. "Horticulture in the Hawaiian Islands," by Prof. John N. Gilmore, Agricultural College, University of California; "Seed-Growing in the Northwest," by E. C. Johnson of the Portland Seed Co., Portland, Ore.; "Flower Seeds in California," by L. C. Routzahn of Arroyo Grande, Cal.; and a paper by Mark L. Germain of Los Angeles, Cal.

The annual banquet on Wednesday evening was a very enjoyable affair. It was held at the club rooms of the San Francisco Commercial Club in the Merchants Exchange building, and the place was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Watson S. Woodruff made an ideal toastmaster, amusing the 125 diners between courses in original manner. The typical Californian menu was appreciated by all. Contemporaneous talks were given by L. L. Morse, F. W. Bolgiano, E. L. Page, K. B. White, S. F. Leonard, M. L. Germain, L. C. Routzahn, L. S. Payn, J. Charles McCullough, W. C. Langbridge, R. Simmers, F. Leckenby, E. O. Pieper. In appreciation of his services as president, L. L. Morse was presented with a handsome watch.

The final business session was held on Thursday morning. Officers were elected as follows: President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; first vice-president, Kirby B. White, De-

An informal meeting to discuss the Hoffman failure was held at the Flower Market, on Monday, by some of the heaviest creditors. The plan of the receiver to sell the business is not looked upon with favor and will be blocked if sufficient opposition can be assembled.

Penn the Florist had three electric truck loads of flowers for the Lowell wedding at Mattapoiset. Stopping for gasoline on the way the decorators were surprised to find how well known this house had become throughout the country districts even, through Penn's liberal newspaper advertising policy.

Sweet sultan, larkspurs, gypsophila and water lilies are favorite window decorative material at the present time. The water lilies are seen in many varieties and are the central feature in many window displays. Galvin is using Cyperus alternifolius in association with them, with excellent effect.

A fire, which started from some unknown cause in the shed in the rear of the building at 647 Warren street, Roxbury, occupied by William C. Bowditch, a florist, did considerable damage Wednesday afternoon when it spread through the entire block between 645 and 663 Warren street, scorching the rear of the buildings.

It is stated by August Poehlmann, whose foreman he was 22 years ago, that Mr. Dreher was the first man in the west who knew how to grow roses successfully on a large commercial place. He brought to them the system of feeding roses which has been employed there ever since. He spent his last five years in Denver, being in the employ of C. T. Maler and Emil Glauber, until his last illness.

New York.—Charles E. Applegate, retail florist, of Brooklyn, is looking for jewels said to be worth $2,000 which disappeared from the pocket of a coat while the suit was being rehabilitated at a tailor's shop.

PHILADELPHIA.

Commodore Westcott's family are sojourning at Wildwood on a brief vacation.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. announce that after July 1 store closes at 5 p. m. Saturdays at 1 p. m. July 5 all day.

Samuel S. Pennock accompanied by his oldest son Charles spent a few days at Cornell and vicinity recently. They took in the rose show there—among other interesting things—and returned home on the 26th.

Pennock Bros. executed an important order for Thousand Islands this week. The week previous Battles had the Duke wedding near New York. These are just straws giving a slight indication that Philadelphia is on the map and that her flower trade is more than local.

The florists are still busy explaining how they lost that ball game to the seedsmen at the recent club picnic. "Bum umpiring," "ringers," "hard luck," etc., but none of them will admit that the seedsmen had the better team. Maybe another game would clear the air.

MicHELL's will have another big gathering of the clans similar to that of two years ago at Andalusia. The date is set for August 28th. Particulars later. Nearly 1000 attended the last lawn and inspection party. It will be a holiday for the whole store and nursery employees as well as for their friends and invited guests.

I once heard our esteemed editor accused by one of his censorious friends of being "young in years but old in crime." After reading his charming account of the Westcott celebration at Waretown on the 18th, I think this should now be amended to elderly in years but young and lovely in spirit. His "fine Italian hand" has lost none of its cunning.

John Habermehl is the proud possessor of a diamond scarf pin presented to him by Miss Marie Louise Wanamaker, granddaughter of Hon. John Wanamaker, "to remind him of her wedding day"—which took place at St. Mark's Church on the 28th. Mr. Habermehl did the church decoration and also that for the reception later (114 tables) at the Wanamaker country residence at Jenkintown.

H. A. Dreer, Inc., has arranged with the Bureau of City Real Estate, Philadelphia, to improve one of the large plots in front of Convention Hall; and now a force of workmen are preparing the ground and making attractive flower beds. These will be cared for during the summer and fall, and it is Dreer's intention to make a suitable display on this plot during the National Flower Show, which will be held in Convention Hall next march. This, of course, is in addition to the display which it is their intention to make in the building during the flower show.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Adolph E. Gude, Jr., son of Adolphus Gude, has gone to Lompoc, Cal., where he will spend his summer vacation on the sweet pea range of A. C. Zvolanek. Ernest Gude son of William F. Gude, is a member of a surveying party now in Ohio.

Two beds, each about 30 x 100 feet are being placed on the west slope of the Capitol grounds, being a part of the floral scheme incident to the coming encampment of the Grand Army in September. The beds represent the Grand Army badges and are made up in the colors of that organization.

A new greenhouse is to replace the old one now on the reservation of the Marine Corps, Comptroller of the Treasury Downey having ruled that current appropriations are now available to cover the cost which will amount to between $250 and $300. It is to be used for housing the plants used on the reservation and parade grounds.

George W. Hess will soon go to New York City preparatory to sailing for New Orleans, La., to become the guest of Senator Broussard. Mr. Hess, who is the superintendent of the United States Botanic Gardens, expects to be gone a month or more and while in the South will look about with a view to obtaining specimens of southern plants not now represented in the collection at the Garden.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Last week's record was a bright one, considering the season, and stock found a fair market as a rule. This week the summer dullness has settled down with crushing weight and with a suddenness unprecedented and unlooked for. There is "nothing doing" for the time being and it is fortunate that the receipts are being reduced from day to day in the wholesale establishments. Peonies are finished and the rose and carnation growers are sending in much reduced quantities. Carnations, however, are in immovable surplus and the quality is not any too good. Sweet peas are very fine. So are cattleyas, but they are plentiful and nobody seems to want them, which is unfortunate and much to be regretted from many viewpoints. The quality of the roses coming in is excellent and the rose seems to have at least as good an outlook for the next few weeks as any other item on the list.

BUFFALO Quite a satisfactory week's business was had the previous week. Weddings, school commencements, etc., greatly helped to swell the week's receipts. The supply and quality of flowers was good considering the severe hot weather the growers had to contend with. In the rose line My Maryland was the leader and Shawyer second and at times not enough of the choice stock could be had. Killarney is running small and of poor color. Red Killarney is fair; Sunburst, Taft and Ward excellent, and sales on all roses has been exceptionally good. Friday and Saturday saw a good cleaning up of carnations, although prices were not high. Lilies are over abundant. Some choice indoor America gladioli are excellent; lily of the valley and lots of outdoor and indoor sweet peas have had a fair sale.

CHICAGO Last week closed with a little spurt of business. Buyers were out in force, keen to see bargains, and a lot of stock moved out of the wholesalers' way. Prices varied greatly, but the average was low, the wholesalers recognizing the fact that summer is here and the retailer is taking chances on selling again. The quality all around is all that can be desired. No extreme heat has reduced the vitality of stock and a fair amount of sunshine has kept color good. Peonies might be said to be all cut now, the few that straggle in being poor, and cold storage stock is showing up very satisfactorily, evidently not having been damaged to any extent by the frost. Prices hold up the best on peonies. American Beauties are of extra good quality and the long ones are in excess of the short lengths. Of carnations and roses in general there is any amount and the price depends upon the quantity you want and how good a talker you are. The miscellaneous stock is so large at present that some consider it a detriment to the market.

CINCINNATI The market is going through the usually quiet spell for early summer. The call for stock is very weak and unsteady, while the supply, on the other hand, is large and comprises heavy offerings of all seasonable flowers, most of them of general high quality.

NEW YORK Business has practically shut down with the regular retail trade of the city and what sales are made are mainly to the small traders, at prices fixed to fit the emergency and the persuasive powers of the buyer. The situation is less embarrassing than last week—not because sales are more active but on account of the very material shortening up of supplies, as is usual at this date. It will require a considerable reduction in the cuts, however, before the proper balance between supply and demand will be re-established.

PHILADELPHIA There was a more cheerful atmosphere in the wholesale cut flower centers here when your correspondent made his weekly Monday visits on the 28th. The over-supply of the previous two weeks was not so pronounced and the depressing fog was largely dissipated. Of course, this is not saying much, as business is slow, taking it all round. But the season is advancing and the Fourth is almost upon us, so a great deal can not reasonably be expected in the way of flower business. High grade roses were not nearly so plentiful, the bulk of the stock being short and under standard. Carnations are getting smaller, the supply less, and the shipping quality of the stock is not very good. Cattleyas have been in increased supply and prices have fallen considerably. Lily of the valley sells well—better than usual for the season; there seem to have been more indoor seedlings in late June this year, which called for lots of this item. A marked improvement is reported in the lily situation. The glut is over and prices are again to nearly normal. (Continued on p. 18) stemmed gladioli are a strong feature of the market both in quantity and quality and they go well. The same may be said of the large flowering delphiniums, although we cannot expect these to remain with us much longer.

With the exception of the inevitable funeral work, which, from the florists' point of view is "remarkably good," the season is over, the harvest practically ended. Outdoor larkspur, coreopsis, foxglove and delphinium are at their best but it is the sweet peas that are taking better than anything else and meeting a ready sale at fair prices. Gladioli are also in demand but the prices are pathetically low. Carnations are still fairly good, but with the exception of ramblers, which are fine, but without sale, the roses show the effect of the warm weather. American Beauties are all off.

June business among the retailers was a little above the average of former years owing to the many Exposition functions in addition to the usual work for school exercises, weddings, etc. Stock continues plentiful and most lines show excellent quality. The offerings of gladioli are very heavy, but they manage to clean up at low prices. Good carnations are rather scarce. Dahlias are more abundant, especially Delice, which show good quality and meet with much favor. A few yellow callas are offered and are easily disposed of at higher prices than can be obtained for white. Unusually fine supplies of Lilium giganteum for this time of the year are coming in from down the peninsula. The market is well supplied with good roses and the short-stemmed specimens are almost in excessive supply. Some nice Irish Elegance is appearing and the limited supply is readily absorbed. Cecile Brunner still gives good satisfaction both in quantity and quality. Taft sells well, and Sunburst is popular. Greens are plentiful.

The market continues in an over crowded condition which promises to last for some time. There are plenty of fine roses and carnations, with prices exceedingly low. Sweet peas and gladioli are giving the wholesaler some trouble now as the glut is on since the outdoor gladioli came in. The growers are complaining of too much rain which has caused outdoor stock to suffer much of late.

Last week was a very quiet one. There is far more stock coming in than the market can possibly absorb and more than half of it is finding its way to the trash piles. There are plenty of good quality flowers, although the locally grown roses and carnations are not much as to size. These are easily supplanted by those from the northern ranges where the retailer or the customer is willing to pay a slightly advanced price. There are more than enough gardenias to fill all demand. TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The enclosed report from the different cities gives an idea of what we are expecting at Ft. Worth. These reports are just from the larger towns—to say nothing of the towns where there are only two or three florists. The outlook is certainly bright for a record breaking attendance.

R. C. KERR, Pres.

Houston, Texas. After a canvass of the florists of Houston, I find that all but two will be in attendance at Ft. Worth.

—Paul M. Carroll.

San Antonio, Texas.—I have talked to the florists of San Antonio. They are all enthusiastic about the Ft. Worth convention—90 per cent. of them will be on hand.

—F. C. Suchy.

Austin, Texas.—I phoned all the florists of Austin; every one to a single man says he is planning to go to the convention.

—Chas. Alb. Jr.

Waco, Texas.—I hope there will be no big business in Waco during convention week, for every florist, and most of the employees, are planning big on the convention.—T. J. Wolfe.

Sherman, Texas.—Sherman florists and nurserymen will be at the convention with bells on.—A. F. Koehle.

Galveston, Tex.—Galveston florists are going to lock up shops July 6th and 7th, for they certainly expect to attend the Ft. Worth convention.—Mrs. M. A. Hansen.

Alvin, Tex. Alvin is a small town, but, believe me, we will make a large showing at the Ft. Worth convention. I think every florist is going.—Mrs. J. W. Carlisle.

Corsicana, Tex.—The florists of Corsicana are anticipating a fine time at Ft. Worth.

—Wm. Clowe.

Denison, Tex.—Denison florists will be in Ft. Worth during the convention.

Miss Allie Bird

Dallas, Tex.—The Dallas Florists' Club will go to the convention in a special interurban car. I know of no one who expects to stay at home. I will bring four employees besides myself. Otto Lange.

El Paso, Tex.—It is a long jump from El Paso to Ft. Worth, but we feel the trip and expense worth while. Count on a good delegation from El Paso.—Patten Floral Co.

Ft. Worth, Tex.—Everything is in readiness for the convention. I have had notice of shipments of many exhibits. Convention Hall is in shape and ready for the 20,000 Florists. Clubs are reported. The Chamber of Commerce and merchants of the city are going to cooperate to the fullest extent. Everything looks bright for grand time. W. J. Baker.

Obituary

Louis Dreher.

Louis Dreher, an employee of C. T. Maler and Emil Glauber, died at Denver, Colo., last week. He was at one time foreman for Poehlmann Bros., Chicago. See Chicago news notes.

Fritz Demond.

A sad ending of a day's outing was the death of Fritz Demond, who was drowned while in bathing, Sunday, June 27. He was employed by N. Meyers in his greenhouses at 207 Asbury avenue, Evanston, Ill.

Mrs. Percy D. Witney.

Percy D. Witney, superintendent on the estate of Mrs. Thistle, Madison, N. J., and president of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the death of his wife, which occurred on Sunday, June 20, after a lingering and painful illness.

Edward M. Murray.

Mr. Murray passed away suddenly on the 26th ult. after an operation at the Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia. He was associated with the Wyatt Flower Store at 236 North 13th street, for the past twelve years. Previous to this he had been at Stahl's. He was 41 years of age and while not prominent in club and society work was highly trusted and respected by his immediate circle. Interment was at Holy Cross Cemetery, on the 30th.

William Bufo.

Word of the sudden death of Wm. Bufo passed through the Chicago market Friday morning. He had been at his place at A. Lange's as usual on Thursday, June 24, and on his way home suddenly died at the corner of Randolph and Clark streets. Mr. Bufo was 37 years old and had been with A. Lange six years, who with his fellow workers took charge of the funeral. He came from Germany fourteen years ago and went into business on Wentworth avenue which he afterwards gave up. Mr. Bufo is survived by a widow and six small children.

Mrs. Wm. Schray.

Mrs. Schray, widow of the late Wm. Schray and mother of Julius and Emil Schray, who comprise the firm of Wm. Schray & Sons, died at her home, 4101 Pennsylvania avenue, St. Louis, on Saturday, June 26, of heart failure. Mrs. Schray has been sick for the past two years with rheumatism. She was 75 years old, born in St. Louis and was up to the time of her illness some help to her sons in the business. The funeral took place on June 29 from the home of her son, Julius Schray. Quite a few members of the trade were present to extend their sympathies and sent fine floral tokens.

William Bickerton.

William Bickerton, for years a well-known florist of Salem, Mass., died on June 25 after a long illness. He was born in Shropshire, England, May 13, 1838, and learned the machinist trade there. When he was 21 years of age he came to this country and began work as a florist and landscape gardener. For several years he was gardener for Mrs. Gardner on Lafayette street, and the beautiful appearance of those gardens is still remembered by older citizens of South Salem. Mrs. Gardner died in 1888, and Mr. Bickerton then began business for himself, which he continued until about 10 years ago, when he was obliged to give up on account of illness. Mr. Bickerton married Miss Emma Sockett, a native of Shropshire, in their native town 60 years ago, but she died April 21 of the present year.

Albert E. Oliphant.

Albert E. Oliphant, Washington, D. C., and who has worked on the President's domain for a period of thirty-three years, passed away at his late home, 3033 Eleventh St., after a protracted illness. Mr. Oliphant was about fifty-four years of age. He joined the forces at the White House when a young man and for a number of years had direct charge of the flower gardens and conservatories. Some years ago, by reason of his long service, he was promoted to the position of foreman of the grounds. During his many years connection with the White House he made thousands of corsage and other bouquets for the use of its occupants, as well as decorating the rooms on innumerable occasions for receptions and other social events. He knew well the families of the presidents from Arthur to Wilson. Mr. Oliphant is survived by his wife and three children. Upon hearing of his death, condolences were sent to his family by officials of the White House and others.

Thomas Foulds

After two years of failing health, the veteran gardener, Thomas Foulds, passed away at his home in Amherst, Mass., on Friday, June 18th, at the age of 69. He was born in Lancashire, England, and received his early gardening training in that country. He came to the United States about the year 1867 and for a time he lived in the west, but came back to Philadelphia to be head gardener, first for Charles H. Rogers, and a few years later for the late William M. Singerly. About the year 1884 he started in the florist business at Gwynedd, Penn., and built up a very successful business. About eight or nine years ago he sold out and came to Northampton, Mass., where for a time he had charge of the grounds of the Peoples' Institute. Finally he assumed charge of the Leonard estate in Amherst, which position he held till his death.

He was a true gardener, always faithful to his employers, and cherishing an intense love for his profession. He was the originator of the well-known Major Bonnaillon chrysanthemum. The grounds under his care always reflected a master's hand, and the plants and flowers seemed to thrive with unusual vigor. Indeed the flowers he loved so well seemed to have reflected their sweetness and beauty into his own nature and character—kindly, quiet and unassuming, with the dignified bearing of the perfect gentleman. He was twice married, and leaves a widow, two daughters, and three sons. The funeral was held in Grace Episcopal Church, Amherst, and was largely attended by the townspeople of Amherst, the Odd Fellows and Rebekahs of which he was a member, and the florists and gardeners in this section of Massachusetts. His life and character was an inspiration to all who had the privilege of knowing him.

Clubs and Societies

NEW BEDFORD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A well patronized rose show under the auspices of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held in the Free Public Library Building on June 25.

The growing interest in these shows is shown not only in the increasing numbers who visit them, but in the many amateurs who exhibit or who desire to do so. Indeed, there were so many entries at this particular show that the committee had to refuse almost half of them.

The most conspicuously beautiful display was that of Galen N. Stone, mgr. Arthur Griffin. His Canterbury bells won a special award of merit. His flowers were so cleverly arranged that each one showed to the best advantage, and that in itself is an art not always displayed by some of the finest growers. Many hybrid roses and hybrid perpetuals, teas and hybrid teas were displayed and the general exhibition of outdoor perennials which were unusually fine. The judges were C. W. Young and James Garthley.

Special recognitions were as follows: Tripp cup to Miss Alice Stackpole. Awards of merit to W. K. Smith for tuberous begonias, Alice Stackpole for Austrian copper rose, L. J. Hathaway, Jr., for sweet williams, Mrs. E. C. Jones for sweet peas, Joseph Figueiredo for roses, H. A. Jahn for larkspur, A. J. Fish for climbing roses, Galen Stone for gaillardias, Canterbury bell, larkspurs, F. H. Taber for rose J. B. Clark, Mrs. Horatio Hathaway, gard. Dennis Shea, for cut flowers, and H. E. Converse, supt. D. F. Roy, for general exhibit. First class certificate to C. W. Young for new hybrid strawberry (Marshall > Big Ben). The regular prizes were won by H. E. Converse, A. Nolet, Margaret Anthony, J. C. Forbes, F. G. Tripp, Alice Stackpole and W. F. Turner.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

The executive board of the American Dahlia Society, consisting of the president and others, met at the secretary's office, New York, on Saturday morning, June 26. Many new members were reported and finances are in good condition. Pres. Vincent produced a tentative schedule of premiums which was adopted with some few amendments as far as it was possible to go, as many of the parties offering prizes had not stated the amount and others are to be heard from. The advisability of issuing some sort of publication or treatise on the list of varieties, their growing, etc., as soon as practicable was discussed, also the question of trial grounds in different sections of the country.

In the discussion regarding the Fall Show strong objection was raised to having it at the Bronx, the committee as a whole deciding to request the Council of the Horticultural Society of New York to obtain the use of the Museum of Natural Science for the Dahlia Society. An offer was also received from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society offering their hall, etc., in Philadelphia for the show.

An adjourned meeting was held in the afternoon at the Bronx Botanical Garden, jointly with the Council of the Horticultural Society. The undesirability of the Bronx was talked over both in regard to getting the exhibits there, and the doubtful outlook for getting a justifiable attendance. The Council agreed to try to obtain the Museum location and the result

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the meeting on June 25 President Mason had on exhibition a very fine collection of roses, comprising 45 varieties. President Mason is much pleased with the growth made by Nova Zembla which in his opinion is equal to Margaret Dickson and Karl Druschki. President Mason was awarded a first class diploma, and H. L. Ritson received honorable mention.

Alfred Dixon, W. W. Hunt and Mrs. William H. Palmer have been appointed a committee to draw up resolutions regarding the death of the late James J. Goodwin, a life member. The June Flower Show cleared about $80, all expenses paid. The next meeting will be held in September.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The Horticultural Society of New York had an attractive free exhibition of seasonable flowers at the Bronx Botanical Garden on June 26 and 27.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held at 96 Westminster street, Providence, on Monday evening, June 28.

The Cincinnati Florists Society members will be the guests of Max Rudolph at his home on July 12th, when the annual meeting of the society will be held.

The annual rose show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural Hall, Worcester, Mass., on June 24. Roses, herbaceous perennial flowers, strawberries, cherries and early vegetables were shown in profusion.

A large delegation of members of the National Association of Gardeners expects to attend the annual Sweet Pea Show of the American Sweet Pea Society to be held on July 15 and 16 at Newport, R. I. Those going by way of New York will leave on the Fall River line of steamers on Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock from Pier 14, foot of Fulton street, North River. As this is the vacation season and passenger traffic is heavy, it is suggested that staterooms be secured in advance. Advices from Boston say that a big delegation from the New England city will also journey to Newport to attend the Show.

M. C. EBEL, Secretary.

The New Hampshire Horticultural Society held its annual summer meeting at the State College, Durham, more than 200 attending.

President E. T. Fairchild addressed the gathering. After the inspection of the college the visitors were taken in automobiles to the experimental orchard, where Prof. J. M. Gourley explained the work the college is doing there. Lunch was served on the lawn in front of the Agricultural building. There were addresses by Wilfrid Wheeler, secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, and William N. Craig of Brookline, Mass. Miss Sarah L. Bates assisted by Miss Mary Sanborn, gave a demonstration of canning.

THE EAVE

ONE of the many vitally important parts in Greenhouse construction that we have perfected is the eave.

It took many years of experience to produce this, the one perfect eave.

The Metropolitan Eave is made of cast iron, will not rust, and is so constructed as to eliminate shade. It is ice-clearing, carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and what's more, almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw about two inches from the end, is all that is required to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary. The eave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping, and does away with zinc glass stops. It is made for both round and flat posts.

This Is But One Of The Many Improvements We Have Made In Greenhouse Construction.

Put your Greenhouse problems up to us.

Wide Spacing Of Rafters How Our Construction Takes Care Of It

FOUR years or so ago, with the hearty cooperation of one of our customers, we put up for him a big iron frame house with the rafters spaced 11 feet 1 inch instead of the usual 8 feet 4 inches.

We didn't make any noise about it at the time, because we first wanted our construction engineers to watch its action through a season or two.

In the meantime, we started making a series of tests of various kinds, so as to find out just how wide rafters could be spaced and still be entirely safe, without having to make the structural members too heavy.

Finally, we called a meeting of our experts from all our factories; and together with the heads of our sales offices, we discussed various sides of the question. This discussion went on not for a day only—but off and on for the best part of a week.

After repeated tests, we believe this truss to be one of the strongest for greenhouse construction. It is the one we use on our wide spacing of rafters.

As a result of this getting together of the sales heads, who best know the requirements of you growers; and the construction experts from all our factories, who know roof stress and strains like a book; we were able to get a thorough understanding of all sides of the proposition, and are now spacing the rafters on 12 feet 6 inch centers.

As a result, we are at present advising our customers to build their houses with a rafter spacing of at least 12 feet 6 inches.

This makes 9 lights of 16 inch glass between rafters. We stick to the 16 inch lights, because we have every reason to believe that until there is some radical improvement in glazing methods, wider ones cannot give a continued satisfactory job.

We have told you all these details, because we believe you are interested in knowing about the thorough way we go about construction changes.

It must be evident to you that when we do finally recommend a certain thing, that thing can be counted on as being certain.

A certainty sometimes costs more at the start. But uncertainties are sure to cost more at the end.

If you are ready to talk about building a house that is certain—say when and where and we'll be there.

No. 2. This is the special malleable iron fitting that forms the two members of the truss with the strut and cross tie.

No. 3. The rafters are bolted together by a one-piece steel plate, to which the upper part of the truss and the cross tie supporting rod are secured.

No. 1. Double malleable fitting joining the column to the rafter and truss.

Be sure and state the number of plants in a row, as we furnish as many rings in each connected strand as the grower has Carnations cross-wise of his bench.

These Carnation Supports overcome the objectionable features of all other makes.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Proverb

Carnations

Most carnation growers are now busy planting. Some may have planted a house or two earlier but this is the beginning of the real housing period. As soon as the benches are emptied clean them and give a good coating of whitewash. After applying the whitewash fill the benches at once. Do not leave them exposed to the sun and air for a week or two if you want them to last. Give the plants six inches of rich soil. I cannot see where anything is gained by planting carnations in three or four inches of soil. See that the plants are not set too deep. Deep planting is the cause of a great deal of stem rot. Water at the base of each plant and give frequent sprayings until the plants take hold. Keep the soil moist on top by heavy sprayings but continue to water at the base of the plants for a few weeks to prevent the soil becoming sour, and to encourage root action.

Calceolarias

Calceolaria hybrida makes a very imposing plant when grown right. The seed can be sown from now up to the first week in August for next season's trade. Get a very sandy mixture of soil and some clean leaf mold. Give the pans a good watering so as to have them wet through then scatter the seeds thinly over the surface. Press the seed gently into the soil with brick or piece of board. They require no covering of soil. Lay a pane of glass over the pans and place in a frame where the shade should be heavy at first and towards fall it should become lighter. Avoid extremes either way in watering as these young plants are very susceptible to damp. The loss through damping off is lessened by timely shifting from box to box. When they have made from four to six leaves they should be potted into small pots still using a light sandy mixture. They should have a fine syringing overhead several times a day in bright hot weather.

Easter Lilies

Much of the plant growers attention now centers in the stock to be had in readiness for next Easter. Without question lilies hold the foremost place. Get good strong bulbs which are the best in the end. For winter flowering the bulbs should be potted and started just as soon as they can be procured. There is a good demand for lilies all through the winter and a few dozens a week are acceptable to every country florist who has design orders to fill. The bulbs generally used for early forcing will do well in five-inch pots singly, or larger ones to a six-inch pot. Use good fibrous loam and some well rotted cow manure. The potting soil should be rich but without green manure. In potting the tops of the bulb ought to be just level with the surface of the soil.

Mignonette

Those who want to cut good mignonette should not delay in sowing the seed. One very successful grower of mignonette sows the seed in three-inch pots, a few seeds in three little groups in each pot. It is safer, however, to sow a pinch of seed on the bench or bed where they are to remain and flower. One foot of space each way is not too much room to give the plants. As is well known the mignonette is a difficult plant to transplant and if the soil drops off the roots the little plants are a long time in making a start. A dozen plants may come up where you sowed your pinch of seed and will not harm anything till the little seedlings are an inch high; then you must pull up all but the strongest plant. The chief enemy of the young mignonette is the larva of the sulphur-colored cabbage butterfly which lays its eggs in August and September. As soon as you see that the butterfly is abroad spray the plants lightly and then dust them with powdered hellebore.

Cypripediums

Cypripediums are now in active growth and as the roots fill the pots and pans nicely a little weak liquid manure once a week should be applied. Avoid the use of all chemicals. A little later as the roots become more matted the strength can be slightly increased. Ventilate freely on every favorable opportunity. Keep the plants free from thrips by sponging occasionally with a weak solution of tobacco water and give light fumigating once or twice every fortnight to keep off the pests. Watch the plants so they do not suffer for water but do not keep them wet all the time as the compost will become sour. A moist atmosphere during all seasons is essential to their well being. In wet weather admit air freely, otherwise the fleshy leaves are very liable to rot or become spotted.

Repairing Boilers and Piping

Now is the time to look over the boilers and piping and do whatever repairing is needed. The season of cold weather may seem far off but it will slip around before we know it. With leaky boilers or pipes it will be impossible to keep up the right temperature.

The
welcome rain

This section of the country has good reason to be thankful for the copious rains of the past few days. The deficient rain fall of the winter and spring, following two years of light precipitation had given much concern and another dry month would have been a costly experience. As a result of the recent down-pours the country has taken on a rare beauty. Trees, lawns and gardens are dressed in fresh vivid green, such as is seldom seen in July and the summer visitor this year will find Boston and all the country around more charming than ever. A heavy cut of hay and other field crops seem now assured. The money value of the rain, so much needed, far outweighed the disappointment of the holiday interruption.

An interesting paper

We commend to the attention of our readers and advise a careful perusal of the address of R. C. Kerr, as president of the Texas State Florists' Association. It is a well-considered and very earnest presentation of the various phases and needs of commercial floriculture as it exists today, not alone in Texas, but in practically every section of the country. Mr. Kerr's advice then, can be read with profit by all, wherever located, who have the welfare of their business at heart. To one suggestion only would we take exception—that of an all-South association. In our humble opinion the establishing of sectional divisions other than state organizations, except as integral parts of the national society, would be a step in the wrong direction, tending to weaken the latter in the supremacy which is its strongest asset.

it work?

The nurserymen have taken a radical step in the new form of constitution and by-laws which they have adopted. The result of the working out of these important changes in the government of the Association will be watched with interest by other organizations of like character. The work which must be undertaken by any national society worthy of the name becomes each year more and more serious and costly and how to get the needed money for such legitimate purposes without unfavorably affecting the membership is a problem. The proposition to gather and compile yearly statistics of available stock in the hands of member growers with a view to an elimination of surplus nursery products and a better adjustment and balance of supply and demand suggests some far-reaching possibilities but, obviously, the project must have the co-operation and support of a large majority of the nursery concerns in order to be effective.

Summer
trade prospects

Visiting Newport and other places of summer resort we find every available living space taken up for the season. Whatever money is spent by Americans for summer recreation this year will be spent in their own country but just how much that fact will benefit the flower and plant business remains to be seen. It is an open secret that economy has been an influential factor with the annual summer sojournings of many American families in Europe and it is not expected that these people will do much in the way of lavish spending at home this season. In Newport nothing sensational in floral decoration is anticipated by the florists. Small affairs will be the rule but should there be an abundance of such, as is hoped, they will yield more profit and general satisfaction than are usually derived from more pretentious undertakings. Altogether the outlook is not bad and it is greatly to be desired that the realization may far exceed the most sanguine forecast. The horticultural industries are certainly all in need of a good boost.

Selaginellas

The genus Selaginella, often known to gardeners as Lycopodium, to which it is closely allied, is a very extensive one containing as it does over three hundred species. Many of these are important garden plants: several species being especially valuable for carpeting the surface of the soil where large plants, such as palms, are planted out, or for growing under the benches, thus providing a beautiful mat of green. Others are well adapted for growing as specimen plants in pots, pans, or hanging baskets. Their range is very extensive some of them being hardy, but the majority require greenhouse conditions and as by far the largest number of them are found in the tropics, the warm house is the place where they are most in evidence.

The Selaginellas are of fairly easy culture, requiring to be grown under moderately moist conditions in a light, rich soil, preferably containing a proportion of peat. In general those that are suitable for growing in pans require to be propagated afresh every year if the best results are to be obtained. The cuttings, which should be two or three inches in length, may be taken in February or March, inserted in the pans in which they are to remain, and kept close and shaded until they are rooted. In making up a hanging basket of Selaginella it is better to start the cuttings in a pan and obtain strong plants before transferring them to the basket. The kinds that are suitable for carpeting will usually take care of themselves once they are established, but it may be necessary at intervals to replant if they show signs of becoming brown and worn out.

The following are amongst the best of the garden Selaginellas.

S. uncinata. This plant is usually known in the trade as S. caesia; it is perhaps the best of them all for a basket plant. The long graceful shoots are produced in great abundance and the coloring of the leaves is of the most exquisite character, changing from a metallic bluish green to a beautiful copper color. It may be grown under either cool or warm house treatment, but it does best under tropical conditions. The photograph shows a plant growing in the Brooklyn Botanic Garden in a 12 inch basket; it is over 3 feet in length and almost 2 feet in diameter.

S. Kraussiana is another species suitable for baskets, although this does not produce shoots anywhere near the length of the preceding. It is of rather compact growth and is of a beautiful dark green color. This is the plant so valuable and so often used for carpeting under benches. It does well under cool house conditions.

S. Martensii and its varieties are all good carpeting plants for the cool house. It is a vigorous grower, rapidly covering the positions assigned to it. A variety having silvery variegation is particularly worth growing.

S. cuspidata is a tropical species of tufted habit. The leaves are pale green in color, the lower ones having silvery edges. This also is an excellent carpeting plant.

S. Emmeliana is a tropical species of more or less upright habit with feathery fern like growths which are very graceful. Unfortunately it is somewhat slow growing, but the appearance of a well grown pan amply compensates for the extra care necessary to obtain good specimens. The variety, known as S. Emmeliana aurea, having leaves of a golden yellow, is a desirable variety.

S. caulescens known in the trade as S. amoena is another species having erect stems, which are from 6 to 12 inches long. The coloring is bright green and the plant is distinctly fern like. It should be grown under stove conditions.

S. grandis is perhaps the finest of the erect growing Selaginellas. It produces stems, which under good conditions attain a height of 2 feet, covered with bright green leaves. To have this plant to best advantage it is necessary to grow it in a wardian case in a tropical house, covering the surface with living sphagnum.

S. Willdenorii, which often goes under the trade name of S. caesia arborea, is a climbing species of great merit. If planted out in a warm house and given liberal treatment it will often make stems of 20 feet or more in length. The leaves of this species have the metallic sheen which is so attractive, varying in color from bluish green to copper.

S. Lepida, the well known "Resurrection Plant" often obtainable in a dry state in stores that specialize in novelties. It is not of particularly handsome appearance, but is worth growing as a curiosity.

This does not, however, mean exhaust the list of Selaginellas which are valuable for greenhouse decoration. There are many other species and varieties of merit, and it is to be hoped that in the future more interest will be taken in this genus of elegant and attractive plants.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

The new constitution adopted by the American Association of Nurserymen at its Convention in Detroit provides for two classes of members, viz.: Active or voting members, who shall be actively engaged in the nursery business; Associate, or non-voting members, embracing horticultural implement makers, dealers in supplies, and those in the allied trades.

The annual membership fee for active members will be $5 with additional dues based on the amount of annual business done by each. For instance, $10,000 to $20,000, the minimum, would pay $5 additional, while the maximum of $100,000 or over would pay $50 additional dues.

Members in 1915 will constitute the membership of the association upon payment of the fees as per new schedule, and thereafter all applicants shall be elected by the association by a majority vote; or, where applications for membership are made at a time other than at the annual meeting, the executive committee may, upon a majority vote, elect such applicants.

All exhibitors of products on manufactured goods must be members of the association, and the charge for exhibitors will be determined by the executive committee.

Perhaps one of the most important provisions in the by-laws is number five, a portion of which reads:

"If, in their (the Executive Committee) judgment, it is deemed advisable they may cause to be gathered and compiled once a year, statistics showing the available stock in the hands of member growers and shall use every means at their command to bring the buyer and seller together upon fair and reasonable terms. It shall be within the province of the executive committee, after carefully considering the matter of supply and demand, to make such recommendations to members of the association as, in their minds, seem wise, just and desirable, looking to the stimulation of trade and the elimination of surplus nursery products."

Further, it is provided that if such statistics and recommendations are prepared the executive committee shall cause to be printed in convenient form said statistics and recommendations, copy of which shall be furnished to every member of the association.

Another important item of business transacted was the passage of a resolution looking to the establishment of a court of arbitration before which may be brought questions in dispute between members, in connection with shipments of stock purchased, such as complaints regarding size and shape of stock, etc., and the reductions claimed for such things, etc.

In the list of new officers as published last week, the following were omitted:

Executive Committee—One year: J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo. Two years: J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Henry B. Chase, Chase, Ala. Three years: J. T. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Texas. T. J. Smith, Geneva, N. Y.

The permanent time for holding the annual meeting is fixed for the third Wednesday in June in each year.

Under the new constitution the secretary is "chosen by the executive committee, and shall hold office subject to the approval of said executive committee." John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., was chosen by this committee to succeed himself.

WAKING THEM UP.

The St. Louis Florist Club's secretary has sent to each member the following very pointed and impressive communication:

Who's Who in the Florist Club and Why?

Who is to Blame?

These question require a genius to proclaim.

Why don't more of our members attend the Florist Club meetings?

Why can't you be present at this week's meeting on Thursday afternoon, July 8th, at 2 o'clock, and help us in nominating a good and efficient set of officers for the coming year?

Why is it that the same 25 or 30 regulars are always present at our meetings?

Why don't the other 75 per cent. come and enjoy our interesting meetings?

Why can't they come and assist the officers who are trying to hold up our reputation as being the best and largest attended Florist Club in the country?

Why can't they as well as others arrange their business affairs so as to spend a few hours each month with friends in the trade?

Why have we existed 29 years when others have failed?

Why not let us count on you to attend this meeting and help us answer the above questions?

Why not confer this one special favor on the officials and other members, and be present?

Respectfully,

J. J. BENEKE, Secretary. JULES BOURDET, President.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

Field Day at Newport, R. I.

CHANGE OF DATE IMPORTANT NOTICE

After notices for the Field Day at Newport, R. I., for July 8 had been mailed, word was received that the Secretary of the American Sweet Pea Society had changed the date of the exhibition to July 15 and 16. It has therefore been decided to postpone the field day until Thursday, July 15, 1915, leaving the South Station at 8.43 A. M. A number of members have written or telephoned their intentions to go on the original date, July 8. We hope all such will be able to go on July 15. There will be a drive through Newport, stopping at leading estates; a shore dinner is also being arranged for. A large attendance is certain. Write at once to the Secretary if you will go, and don't forget the ladies.

W. N. CRAIG, Sec'y.

MINNESOTA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

It was richly worth a trip of nearly 500 miles to visit the summer meeting of this society, held on June 12. I have attended many gatherings of this nature, but never saw anything to compare with this. The exhibition of peonies and perennials was magnificent. One man had 175 kinds of peonies alone, comprising the latest introductions from the best propagators of Europe. The Brand Nursery Co. had the finest exhibition of native born ever shown. Some were of immense size and of marvelous beauty. One variety they had sold close for $5 per root. The American Peony Society was put far back in the shade by this exhibit. The large building of the Agricultural College was completely filled, besides crowding the stairways and anterooms. Nowhere on earth have I seen anything to compare with the peonies raised in the region of the twin cities.

An immense crowd were gathered; the day was perfect. A picnic dinner was held on the beautiful grounds. After that came speeches, short and sharp. Mr. Brand told how to raise peonies from seed. The writer spoke of the iris as the flower of the future the family in bloom more than two months; the ease of propagating new varieties and their marvelous adaptation to the semi-arid regions, where other flowers cannot grow. He spoke of their fragrance and alluring loveliness and their use as a flower for Decoration Day, when the varieties of the red, white and blue made suitable bouquets for soldier's graves.

The show of columbines, coreopsis, delphiniums, oriental poppies, pyrethrum and Shasta daisies was very fine. Altogether it was a very pleasant and notable gathering comprising an immense crowd, from the twin cities and the surrounding country. The flower growers of this section have spared no pains to get the very best and they have succeeded grandly. The rich soil and congenial climate are favorable to the highest development of perennials.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

President Vincent announces the pleasing fact that the Horticultural Society of New York has been able to make arrangements with the authorities of the American Museum of Natural History for the installation of the exhibition of the American Dahlia Society at the Museum on September 24, 25 and 26. The Council of the Horticultural Society has passed a resolution appropriating the sum of $100 for premiums to be offered at the Dahlia Show. James Stuart, chairman of the exhibition committee of the Horticultural Society, has called a meeting for July 14, when the details of the schedule will be considered.

TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

A HANDSOME WISTERIA.

This youngest and liveliest of the State Florists' organizations has been holding a meeting at Fort Worth this week as indicated in our advance notices in recent issues. Next week we shall be able to give an account of the proceedings. For the present our readers will find in the address of President Kerr plenty to interest and perhaps a new light on the present condition and promise for the future of floriculture in a section of the country hitherto in semi-obscurity.

PRESIDENT KERR'S ADDRESS.

Ladies and Gentlemen, Members of the Texas State Florists' Association.—Ever since you paid me the great honor of electing me to the highest office within your gift, I have anticipated this hour, not so much to harvest the honors and privileges extended to your presiding officer as for the opportunity to express to you my deep felt gratitude and appreciation of your kindness and good will toward me.

Our First Year's Work.

The twelve months past since we last met have been busy ones for those entrusted with the affairs of our organization. Your standing committee have also been faithful to their trusts and duties, as their reports will reveal to you. We have progressed and increased our influence to such a degree that a review of the year's proceedings might well be devoted to laudations rather than to suggestions or criticisms.

It is certainly gratifying to note the widespread interest in our organization the first year. When we consider the comparatively short time the Texas State Florists' Association has been in existence, it is remarkable what an immense growth it has made and what a power for good it has become. The large gathering here today is self-evident testimony of the fact that the florists of Texas are awake to the importance of organization. Organizing as we have done has not come voluntarily, but the necessity of the times demand that we must pull together if we expect the accomplished results. One of our most valuable assets is to get together and get acquainted. How many florists have you met at our two conventions, that you had heard of, or done business with, but had never seen until met in the convention hall? This alone is worth our time and expense of this organization. Let us keep up this good work and enthusiasm.

Texas to the Front as a Flower Market.

This organization is only one year old, and in that short time we have done wonders toward making this a better flower market. There were more flowers shipped to the outside market this year than the past five years combined. We have grown more and bought less this year than any one year previous, and at the same time business has been normal—which goes to show what real good can be accomplished by real co-operation.

The picture which appears herewith is reproduced from a photograph sent to us by Edmund Lawrence, gardener to Mrs. A. V. Schlaet, Westport, Conn. Concerning this beautiful Wisteria, Mr. Lawrence writes as follows:

Please find enclosed a photograph of a Wisteria chinensis in my Italian garden which is one of the many climbers around the 150 ft. pergola, forming a semicircle. This plant had 649 perfect clusters measuring from 17 to 29 inches in length. The photograph does not show all of the blooms, there being a large number over the top of the pergola. Gardeners say they have not seen anything like it around this locality. My culture, is to cut the tap root at the right time and to prune top growth severely in growing season.

That Experimental Range of Glass for Commercial Cut Flowers.

Prof. Kyle will tell us today what the possibilities are for this experimental station. I believe that it is the consensus of opinion that the florists of Texas are entitled to some means of carrying on practical experiments with commercial cut flowers.

The great amount of money spent each year for flowers is amazing, and to think that about 90 per cent of this is going out of the state is certainly something that needs remedy. Every florist in the state of Texas should be vitally interested in this movement and avail himself of every opportunity to help the good work along. I believe our best means of securing this experimental range will be through the Horticultural Department at College Station—this being centrally located. I would like to see a good strong committee appointed to work on this matter and keep hammering away until we accomplish what we want.

The Annual Flower Show

We consider our first annual flower show a grand success. It demonstrated to us that this is the best means of educating the public in the proper use of flowers, also for creating a greater demand. It is also a great education for the florists. Every designer and grower produces the best that he has—and then as the saying is, "No man knows it all." Then in this way good ideas are both scattered and gathered and taken home and put into practical use. I believe that the members will all agree that this is really the most important work of our association. I sincerely trust that the committee appointed for the ensuing year will work vigorously to see that this year's show will be larger and even better than last year's.

The Southern Trade Paper.

Every florist in the South should rally to the support of the "Southern Florist." This is our official organ and should be the means of communicating and carrying on our work. It is filling a long felt want. I want to state here that we could not be without the other trade papers, as they cover a field that we cannot cover, and the "Southern Florist" is not considered a competitor by the other papers. Every florist should contribute articles, also send in all news items from their respective towns. Practically every florist in Texas is a subscriber, and we have a wide circulation throughout the South. If you are interested in the welfare of the Southern florists, you will rally to the support of this organ. But, being a subscriber is not all; we need material to keep the South posted.

It is not my intention to criticize the other papers, but up to the last few months how many articles pertaining to Southern Florists, or Southern Floral Culture, have you noted in these papers—and why? It is not because they are not interested in us, for they are; vitally interested in every section of the United States; but the real reason is that they are experiencing the same trouble we are having right now, and that is in getting the florists of the Southern cities to report and co-operate. They stand ready at all times to publish the news and any other articles submitted to them. We believe we have solved a problem by establishing a trade paper in our midst. Let every florist in the South realize that this medium is their paper and is working for their interest, and go home determined to take more interest in the future welfare of an organ that is working for their good. Let me pause here long enough to say—that this organization, nor any of its members (except Mr. Tackett), is not financially interested in this paper. It is only our moral support that we pledge.

The Florist Business on a Higher Plane.

The florist business as a general rule is considered about a third-class business, and about three cases out of four it is true. This is our own fault. We fail to conduct our business in a way that makes an impression on the business world. We are too busy outdoing the work that a $2.00 man can do, instead of work at the desk figuring profits and loss, store management, keeping a large and seasonable stock, discounting our bills, stimulating a demand for flowers, etc. It is my frank opinion that if the florists will use their heads more and muscles less, their green-houses will show a gain instead of a loss. It is high time we are waking up to these things, and I believe this organization will bring about an improved condition.

Our Local Clubs.

When we first began on organization work, the plan was to organize clubs in each city and centralize these with the state organization as a central body. While the local clubs have not been as active as they should, the reports show that we have accomplished a great deal. We should realize the importance of the local clubs and stir up more interest and enthusiasm the coming year.

Remember the local clubs are no place to get together to discuss prices or control trade; nor is it the place to settle personal grievances. The florists should come together at the local clubs to work along lines to stimulate a greater demand for flowers and plants—such as pretty yard contests, co-operative advertising, stirring up interest in civic beautification, etc. The clubs that are working along these lines are accomplishing results. If your local club is lifeless, diagnose the case and see if the above mentioned does not apply.

Membership.

Every florist in the state of Texas should belong to this state organization. If you are not a member you are the loser. Cast your lot with the organization that is going to be the making of the florist business of Texas. In one short year we have made wonderful progress, but we need all of you, and you need us. If you have not taken out your membership—do so today before leaving the hall.

Affiliation with the S. A. F.

One of the most important matters for this organization to consider at this time is the best means of working with the S. A. F.—the parent body of all floricultural bodies of the United States. We are all vitally interested in the welfare of that organization, and we should take some steps toward stimulating more interest among the florists in the state of Texas. If it is possible, I would like to see our dues raised so as to include the S. A. F. membership. If we have one hundred such members, we are entitled to a member on the Board of Directors. Let us show the florists of the United States that we mean business; that when we start to do a thing we do it right. If it is not possible to include S. A. F. membership in our dues, then do the next best thing. But we must wake up to the importance of the co-operative organization. Remember, there is good to be derived for you personally.

Trade Exhibits.

It is certainly gratifying to note the very excellent display we have for our second convention. It shows that the wholesale concerns over the country realize that Texas is a great market; and are interested in us, and are willing to contribute toward helping to make this convention a success. I believe every member should show his appreciation by reciprocating when in need along these lines. Always keep your eyes on the concerns that show a tendency to help our organization—we can help them in return. I ask that a vote of thanks be extended to every concern who has contributed to this convention in the way of exhibits.

The Possibilities of an All-Southern Organization.

Before my trip to attend the meeting of the Board of Directors of the S. A. F. at Chicago, March 1, past—I made a pretty thorough canvass of the South, to sound out the florists on the advisability of an all-Southern organization. The florists throughout the South are in favor of such an organization as soon as business conditions are improved. I believe that in the course of a few years the time will be ripe. When we strike we want to make sure of success—just as our Texas organization has done. Until that time we await developments.

Conclusion.

However, I am not here to take up too much time. I think, perhaps, I have talked already as long as I should. I am not sure but what I am in the position of the fellow of whom I heard this story: "Bill had been courting Sally for some time. One evening under the influence of the moonlight, during a stroll in the park, Bill proposed to Sally, and she accepted him. They walked on for some time, nothing further being said on the part of either one; and Sally becoming a little alarmed said, 'Bill, why don't you talk some more?' Bill said, 'Well, Sally, I've been thinking maybe I talked too much already!'"

Now, let me thank you as a club, and individually, for your staunch allegiance to me as your president. When the great roll call comes and the hearts of all are known, you will find your names standing out as immortals on my heart. No vocabulary at my command can fully express to you my appreciation of your faith in me, and I want you to know that all you may credit me with doing has been done through your understanding and belief in me. No matter what may come between you and me in the future, you must know that your friendship, your organization of this club, and your spontaneous unanimous election of me as your president will be as a beacon light to me through all the years to come.

OYSTER BAY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay (N. Y.), Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday, June 23rd. Fifty-eight vases of flowers, five dishes of vegetables, three dishes of fruit were on the exhibition tables. The judges reported as follows: Society's prize for roses, Jas. Duckham; peas, Frank Petroccia; strawberries, Arthur Paten. Howard C. Smith prize for sweet peas, 1st, Jas. Duthie; 2nd, Jas. Duckham. James Duthie prize for sweet peas, 1st, Frank Kyle; 2nd, C. E. Moyses. Honorable mention for climbing roses by John Sorosick, orchids by Jno. Ingram, iris, by John Ingram, and delphinium by Frank Kyle.

H. Gibson made a very interesting report on the visit of a delegation of gardeners, from Oyster Bay, to the Ward estate at New Rochelle. Mr. Woolson and Mr. Duthie gave humorous talks. It was decided to hold the annual outing in August, notice of time and place to appear in notice of next meeting.

CLEVELAND FLORISTS' CLUB.

Secretary Frank A. Friedley has sent out the following notice to the club members:

July meeting of the Florists' Club postponed from Monday, July 5th, to Monday, July 12th. Full announcement of the Annual Picnic will be made at that time.

Remember at the last meeting of the Club it was decided that all who participate in the Ball Game must be members of the Club. Foot races and all other sports open to all.

This letter is being mailed to all florists in Cleveland. If you are not now a member of the Cleveland Florists' Club you owe it to yourself and your business to join. We now have 133 live, active members. The dues are $1.00 per quarter. Send in your name and belong to the liveliest, most up-to-the-minute Florists' Club in the country.

We expect during the next few months to receive lots of advertising and publicity for our Big Flower Show through the trade papers:

The American Florist.
The Florists' Exchange.
The Florists' Review.
Horticulture.

Each of the above are $1.00 per year. The more we support them, the more they will advertise and support us. Perhaps you have had in mind to subscribe to another trade paper but always put it off. DO IT NOW! Send direct to the paper or papers you want or mark the ones you want on this list, return to the secretary with a one dollar bill for each paper and he will gladly get the paper for you. Boss, get a trade paper for some of your employees. It will pay you to do it. This is not an advertising scheme of the above papers. They know nothing of it. The Florists' Club wants each of these papers to have more subscribers in this vicinity than they have at present. Send your dollar NOW!

Thanks, Mr. Secretary.

NEW BEDFORD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

That the annual rose show of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was a great success is beyond dispute. While this was primarily a rose show many vases of perennials enlivened the tables. The magnificent and imposing hybrid perpetuals were, for the most part, conspicuous by their absence, yet the dainty beauty of the hybrid teas and climbers, in varied array, made one forget their more stately brothers, and many were the demands upon the committee for advice in selection.

Among the features of the exhibit were the grand display of perennials from the Galen Stone place, the beautiful collection of teas and hybrid teas, most tastefully arranged, from the Converse estate, a fine display of Silver Moon and Dr. Van Fleet by A. J. Fish, a wonderful specimen of Frau Karl Druschki by Mrs. Horatio Hathaway, a vase of Silver Moon, Dr. Van Fleet and Ruby Queen which won first prize for the best vase, basket or other display, and a perfectly superb specimen of the hybrid tea rose, Mabel Drew, winner of 1st for best specimen of rose introduced in this country since 1911.

Miss Alice Stackpole's exhibit which covered one entire table had many fine blooms tastefully arranged.

THE QUESTION OF THE GARDENER

The indefatigable services he renders—the attitude of the average American estate owner towards him—the disproportionate remuneration he receives—all are fearlessly portrayed in the July number of

The Gardeners' Chronicle Of America

by one of America's foremost amateur gardeners.

The subject is one of vital interest to estate owner and professional gardener alike and will provoke further discussion in the coming issues of The Gardeners' Chronicle.

Among other contents of the July number are articles on:

Rock Gardens and Rockeries—An Eighty-five Acre Country Estate in New York City—Perennials that Thrive Through Neglect—Making a Rose Garden—Proper Turf for Putting Greens—Ornamental Fowl for Parks and Gardens—Flower Shows as Business Promoters—Concrete for the Country Home Grounds.

Work for the Month—in the flower, vegetable and fruit garden and in the greenhouses.

Digests of timely topics from the leading American and European horticultural publications appear regularly in the Chronicle.

To Incorporate Boddington Business.

At a meeting of the creditors of A. T. Boddington, held July 1st, it was unanimously resolved to incorporate. The statement of the business transacted during the past four months was sufficiently favorable to warrant these gentlemen in making The Arthur T. Boddington Company, Inc., a permanency under this new title. This incorporation will be without prejudice to the claims of the creditors. In fact it was adopted for the purpose of safeguarding their interests.

The value of imports of horticultural merchandise into New York for the week ending June 26, is given as follows: Sulphate of potash, $12,500; nitrate of soda, $50,320; clover seed, $22,223; grass seed, $14,853; trees and plants, $676.

A CORRECTION.

Referring to our notes on the Sweet Pea exhibition held in San Francisco recently A. C. Zvolanek writes as follows:

It is correct that I have received the gold medal of honor, awarded to my winter-flowering orchid sweet peas which are planted and grown on the Exposition Garden, prior to the A. S. P. Show, by the superior jury of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and not, as you state from the A. S. P. Society.

My sweet pea exhibit with the A. S. P. Show was non-competitive.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsHOW TO TREAT YOUR COMPETITORS.

Houston, Texas, has in her midst a florist who is "the very pink of courtesy", judging from the following contribution turned in by H. H. Kuhlmann, Jr., for the edification of the Texas State Florists at their convention in Houston.

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

"We all know that competition is success to all business, no matter what kind it is, so the policy that I find best is this:—forget that you have a competitor, forget that he exists. Don't go around and talk about him as you will be the one to suffer in the long run. If at any time you have anything to say about him speak good and forget his faults.

If at any time your customer comes in and you are out of the article she desires don't tell her that there is not any more in town; tell her that he has it and let her go to your competitor and she will come to you next time. When you meet him in company treat him as one of your best friends. If he insists on being treated in any other way, well just take him to your club and buy him a good drink and cigars."

We do not recall having ever met Mr. Kuhlmann, but we can imagine that he is such a man as Byron had in mind when he wrote

"Tho' modest, on his unembarrass'd brow Nature had written—'Gentleman.'"

BETWEEN NEW YORK AND BOSTON.

Many of our readers will no doubt have occasion to make the trip between New York and Boston this summer. To all who have not already given it a trial we would say most emphatically "All-the-Way-by-Water" is the ideal way. The great express passenger steamships, the white fliers Massachusetts and Bunker Hill, leave Pier 18, foot of Murray street, New York, every day, Sundays included, at 5 P. M. From Boston they leave India Wharf every evening at the same hour. Due at either destination at 8 A. M. This is a delightful experience, a sail through the entire length of Long Island Sound and the open Atlantic from Vineyard Sound around Cape Cod and up Massachusetts Bay. There is no comfort or luxury of travel that the Eastern Steamship Company does not provide for its patrons on this trip and its popularity is so pronounced that it becomes very essential to engage state room accommodations a few days in advance to make sure of same. Orlando H. Taylor, formerly Passenger Agent of the Fall River Line during the days of the greatest popularity of that route, is Passenger Traffic Manager of the outside line and counts among the New York and Boston florists many of his staunchest friends.

FALL FLOWER SHOW.

Panama-Pacific International Exposition, October 21-26

The flowers, which have contributed so largely to the great beauty and wonder of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition will have another festival of their own this fall, supplementing the several shows that have proven so attractive during the life of the Exposition. The Fall Flower Show is scheduled to last from October 21 to October 26, and will take place at the Palace of Horticulture in the Exposition Grounds under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society in conjunction with the Department of Horticulture, P. P. I. E.

Special prizes for chrysanthemums in a contest open to all will include the Chrysanthemum Society of America's silver cup, Hitchings & Co.'s silver cup, The Wells-Totty prizes, the Henry A. Dreer prize, the A. N. Pierson Inc. prize, the Elmer D. Smith & Co. prize, the National Association of Gardeners' prize, the H. F. Michell Co.'s prize, the H. W. Buckbee silver cup and the Society of American Florists' and Ornamental Horticulturists' medals.

In Class A competition there will be 24 medals and money. Class B will be open to non-commercial growers only. Class C will be devoted to chrysanthemum plants; prizes, a silver cup, a medal or a money prize. ALL UP FOR CLEVELAND NEXT NOVEMBER.

The floor plan of The Cleveland Flower Show indicating the space set aside for trade exhibits in the big Flower Show, November 10-14, 1915, has just been mailed to prospective exhibitors and a copy forwarded to this office. The plan is a very simple one and no doubt will develop into a well arranged show, both for the trade exhibitors and the growers who participate in the competitive class of floral exhibits. The space is all on one floor and there are no balconies, with the result that every location is a good one and prices are figured to include the sign for the exhibitor, his partition railings and general decorations above the space.

This will be a good opportunity for firms desiring to come before private and commercial growers of northern Ohio and Southern Michigan as well as throughout the East. We see no reason why the Cleveland Show will not come up to the expectations of the live Cleveland organizations that are backing it.

The show committee of the Cleveland Florists' Club has been conducting a lively campaign with a result that we understand their guarantee fund is over-subscribed about $1,500. They raised $7,500 although they only set out to secure $6,000. The Cleveland Florists are plainly working together in backing a movement that is for the good of all and we wish them success. The total guarantee fund is $12,000 and it is entirely subscribed, or rather oversubscribed, as the Ohio

Horticultural Society has already put up half of that amount, $6,000. The Cleveland Florists' Club and the Cleveland Garden Club are co-operating in forwarding this enterprise which will be held in conjunction with the annual meeting and exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America. George Bate is chairman of the publicity committee, 356 Leader Building, Cleveland, O.

BOSTON TO SAN FRANCISCO.

President Patrick Welch and Mrs. Welch together with as many of the New England people as choose to accompany them have arranged a complete itinerary to San Francisco and return, starting from Boston on Aug. 4, at 10 A. M. and arriving back in Boston on September 2, visiting the many points of interest on the trans-continental routes going and coming and in various parts of California. Mr. Welch will be pleased to communicate full information as to details to any one requesting same. The cost of transportation for the round trip will be $104.20; lower berth Boston to San Francisco, and Los Angeles back to Boston $37.

BOSTON SWEET PEA EXHIBITION.

The annual Sweet Pea Exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Saturday and Sunday, July 10 and 11. In addition to sweet peas there will be displays of other seasonable flowers, as well as of fruits and vegetables. There will be also collections of native wild flowers.

The exhibition is free and will be open Saturday from 12 to 6 and Sunday from 2 to 6 o'clock.

TWO REPRESENTATIVE CARNATION GROWERS.

Frank P. Putnam of North Tewksbury, Mass., is one of the carnation growers who believe in early planting. His plants are all in the benches already, 26,000 of them all told, in two big houses. He keeps his young stock in pots from April till middle of June, when he throws out all his old plants and starts anew. He is very enthusiastic over Matchless of which he has two 200 ft. benches and this variety looks ideal with him. Gloriosa, Beacon, White Wonder and Pink Delight constitute the bulk of the other varieties he grows. Mr. Putnam is fond of the single early chrysanthemum of which he grows about seventy-five varieties, many of them of his own production. It may be recalled that he made a sensational exhibit of these at the Boston show last fall. A fine crop of tomatoes occupies part of one large house for the time being. These will be thrown out August 1.

At Billerica we find in Gustav Thommen, who manages the Backer place, a staunch advocate of the other method of carnation growing. Mr. Thommen says he sees nothing to gain by very early planting. His young stock is out in the field and sturdy stock it surely is. The science and practice of plant feeding is one of Mr. Thommen's hobbies and he has got it down to perfection. No finer houses of carnations could be seen any where at any time of the year than are in evidence at this place now in mid-July. The market price of carnations is away down, but at the lowest figure quotable there's a little fortune in sight in the myriads of tall-stemmed, sturdy blooms that here greet the eye and charm the heart of the admirer of fine carnations. It would indeed take an iron nerved man to tear up and throw away such stock.

HOW TO GROW CARNATIONS IN SOUTHEAST TEXAS.

A Paper read by Elizabeth O. Weissinger before the Texas State Florists' Association

Carnation culture is a comprehensive subject—bounded by an infinite diversity of opinion. But, seven years ago when we took our courage in both hands, lacking capital and experience, and handicapped by "skirts," the ultimatum had gone forth that carnations could not be successfully or profitably grown in Southeast Texas. Nothing daunted, we built a house especially for carnations, 150x28x16, running north and south with roof and side ventilation; raised benches five feet wide, steam heated. We get field-grown plants from Oklahoma—hence we do not have to worry about our stock, and always get the best.

This season we planted white, light pink and rose Enchantress, also Herald. For our compost we use three or four parts good maiden loam to one of well decomposed stable fertilizer, which has been prepared at least three months in advance, before putting in benches which have been thoroughly scrubbed and whitewashed. We order plants for September delivery and plant directly to benches, twelve inches apart, and give a good watering to settle the soil about the roots.

We find many details about carnation growing that require constant attention and unremitting care. Spraying is most important during the warm days we have in the early fall. By this means the temperature can be reduced to a moist growing atmosphere. We frequently spray the under part of the foliage where the spider spider makes its appearance, and always spray quickly.

We give our plants strong wire support, and though they may wilt a little during the day, as long as they are erect and crisp each morning, we do not worry over losing them. The way the soil is handled has a great deal to do with what you get out of it. Judicious use of fertilizer and lime, with constant forking to keep in good mechanical condition, and the "seeing eye" that appraises instantly of lurking danger.

The Beaumont Floral Co., owned and managed by women, represents faithful toil and the achievement possible to even unskilled women in "the man-made world."

"Who digs a well or plants a seed, a sacred pact he keeps with sun and sod; with these he helps refresh and feed the world, and enters partnership with God."

A QUESTION OF JUDGING.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

At the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's recent meeting a premium was offered for "The Best Display of Hardy Perennials 12 distinct species (not varieties)." The winning exhibit was made up of twelve vases, among which were one vase of Dianthus barbatus and one of Dianthus Caryophyllus.

The question I want to ask through the columns of your valuable paper is—should the two varieties of Dianthus have disqualified this exhibit? In this same exhibit Centaurea cyamus was shown. Do you consider that a perennial?

Yours Truly,

WM. ROBERTSON

Jenkintown, Pa.

Dianthus barbatus and D. Caryophyllus are both perennials and distinct species, hence both are eligible in the class referred to. Centaurea cyamus is an annual and its presence as one of twelve perennials would be cause for disqualification.—Ed.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association took place July 7.

If there are any number of florists going to the convention this year, they are very loth to make that fact known.

Miss C. Paradise, for many years bookkeeper for A. L. Vaughan Co., is spending two weeks at her old home in Michigan.

The failure of Paul Palos of Little Rock, Arkansas, has caused some stir in the wholesale market where his name is found on the books of several firms. He has written his creditors here that everything outstanding will be paid.

No one seems able to understand the ups and downs of flowers in public favor. Last year the colored nymphs were among the most popular flowers, while this year they are meeting with slow sale. Quite possibly they may regain their prestige later in the season when anything suggestive of water will naturally find more favor.

At Wietor Bros., the carnation space will be reduced five houses to make room for more roses next year. The summer schedule of shipments went into effect at this house today and all stock will arrive in one lot. N. Wietor is rejoicing in the fact that his small son who has been ill with scarlet fever is now home from the hospital, and gaining strength daily.

Hoerber Bros. have given up the growing of carnations and their range of 200,000 square feet of glass, at Des Plaines, Ill., now houses only roses. Among the stock will be 10,000 Mrs. Russell plants to supply that rose to meet the popular demand. Hooster Beauty and Ophelia will also be planted largely and there will be a good supply of Mrs. Ward. The abandoning of carnations by growers seems to be gaining ground and marks a change in the commercial lip of the "divine flowers."

Aloise Frey, remembered by his many friends as a former superintendent of Lincoln Park, is now making a success of his favorite work of adding improved varieties of flowers to the market supply. Just now his antirrhinums are among the finest offered here. They are cut from seedlings of his own hybridizing. His love of experimenting with new plants does not limit his success in other lines, as his carnations are just now bringing the highest prices in the salesroom of one of the largest houses in this market.

Chas. McKellar finds but little difference in the amount of business done in June as compared with that of former years. His reports of the Panama Exposition, which he visited in March, are of particular interest to his friends in the trade at this time, as they are now trying to decide the question of going to the convention. Mr. McKellar is enthusiastic in his descriptions of the trip and advises everyone to go who possibly can. He was greatly pleased with the horticultural part of the exhibit and had a good word for the hearty welcome Vice-President McRorie would be sure to extend to Chicago florists.

Sweet peas, two bunches for five cents, carnations two dozen for fifteen cents and roses seven cents a dozen, offered on State St. bring a hard problem to the retail florist this summer. Some of the stuff is not worth even the price asked, but again stock is sold that is as good as the retail florist can buy. That he cannot use the amount that a large department store can handle is his misfortune and neither can he afford to sell at the small profit made by them, but the retail florist must live and keep up store expenses during the summer months. It has never been quite so hard for the retailer as it is just now for the buyers of the big stores are trying to outdo each other in sensational offerings.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mrs. J. A. Philipps, who operates the Flower Shop, at 14th and Harvard Sts., stands a good chance of visiting the Panama-Pacific Exposition at the expense of the management of a motion picture theatre. The company offers the trip to the lady selected by its patrons as being the most popular in the neighborhood and the energetic work of her friends in obtaining votes has placed her already second on the list of contestants.

Washington florists will participate in two outings during the month, the first of these being one given under the auspices of the Florists' Club at Great Falls, Va., on July 21, the second one being a week later at Chesapeake Beach, given by Kallipolis Grotto. This latter is to be a triple affair as the florists of Baltimore are also to be invited and a large gathering from that city is expected. Edward S. Schmid and Fred H. Kramer are planning an unusual number of stunts. An effort is to be made to match the florists of the two cities in a baseball game.

A sentence of five years in the penitentiary was last week imposed upon Felipe Guasp, a former employee of the Leo Niessen Company, who was arrested and pleaded guilty to the charge of forgery, but because he has a wife and three small children, and upon his promise to keep out of trouble in the future, he was placed on probation. Guasp, after being discharged, had sent a telegram to the Philadelphia office of the firm ordering a large amount of stock. A slip-up in the wording led to the discovery that it was fraudulent and suspicion was fastened on Guasp who was then arrested.

Spokane, Wash.—Preparations are in progress for a fall flower show to be held the first week in September under the auspices of the Spokane Horticultural Society. Arrangements have been made for the use of the Armory for the show, and much interest is being shown in the event.

PITTSBURGH.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Klinke, the former secretary of the McCallum Company, will leave next Monday to spend two weeks at Burleigh Falls, Ontario.

Murray McGrew, of G. P. Weaklin & Company, and family expects to leave next Saturday for a visit on the shore of Lake Erie in Northern Ohio.

To conform to the raising of downtown Penn avenue, the floor of Mrs. E. A. Williams' store is being likewise raised two feet. This will preclude the trouble of former years in case of a twenty-five foot flood stage.

J. W. Rhea, credit man for the E. C. Ludwig Company, will leave on Monday next to represent his firm at a business convention in Wheeling, W. Va. Louis R. Biehl, of the same company, and family will leave next Saturday for a two weeks' vacation at Niagara Falls and Canada.

The Japanese Flower Shop show window has been transformed into a charming summer scene through the introduction of an aquatic pool designed by the owner, Ray J. Daschbach. Nymphaeas and other water plants, live ducks and a rocky waterfall add to the picturesque effect.

To the A. W. Smith Company has been awarded the contract for the landscape work for the Schenley High School to begin in August. F. Russell Bower, the assistant landscape architect for the Smiths, is spending most of the summer in Ithaca, New York. Miss Elizabeth Boyd, and Miss Beckett of the store force are enjoying their vacations at home.

The marriage of Miss Loretta Grau, and Gilbert Ludwig, of the Ludwig Floral Company, was an informal home ceremony of last Thursday evening at the home of the bride's mother. The young couple left for a short Eastern trip. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius W. Ludwig and the secretary of the firm, while the bride was for some time associated with the business office.

The family of William A. Clark of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company, have gone to their cottage on Lake Chautauqua, where they will be joined later by Mr. Clark. William Usinger and Joseph Gottl, employees of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Company, left last Saturday night for a fortnight's tour of the Great Lakes, Cleveland, Sandusky and Detroit. William Collihan, will go to Mackinac, Michigan, early in August for his vacation.

In a recent statement, Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of schools, said that the school gardens introduced in the curriculum of the public schools on April 1st, 1914, to instruct and develop interest on the part of children in nature study work, had proved most satisfactory, both with regard to the instruction of the children and the garden products. John L. Randall is director of the School Garden and Nature Study Department.

AN UNIQUE AND ELEGANT FLOWER STORE.

View in the New Flower Store of Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo.

In the accompanying picture and in the one which appears as cover illustration for this issue we present views of the new flower store of Samuel Murray, Kansas City. Mr. Murray is known as one of the most progressive florists of this country and also a well-skilled plantsman. His success is due, first, to his industry, foresight and winning personality and secondly, to the skill and devotion of his assistants in the store and greenhouse. Miss Mary Hayden has been with him for sixteen years and Miss Elizabeth Hayden for nine years, and Mr. Murray generously credits these young ladies with the lion's share in the prestige which has come to the business as one of Kansas City's foremost commercial institutions. William Sharpe has been in charge of the greenhouses for the past 25 years, he and Mr. Murray having worked together in Peter Henderson's 30 years ago.

The new store depicted in our illustrations is one of the finest devoted to flower selling in this country. The lower walls are of rough yellow brick and the upper walls of weather beaten stone with full joints. The window is of dark olive green tile and "decorates" beautifully.

At the opening of the new place on June 2 a large number of floral and other tributes testified to the esteem in which Sam Murray is held by his fellow florists and employees. There was a resplendent bird cage with occupant, from the Misses Hayden; a gold horseshoe from Arnold Ringier; a magnificent bunch of American Beauties from George M. Kellogg Co.; a basket of roses from Arthur Newell; a basket of Killarney roses from T. J. Noll & Co.; one of lilies from

H. Kusick & Co.; horseshoe of American Beauties from W. J. Barnes & Sons; and two beautiful specimens of the new golden Sanseveria from R. S. Brown.

HORTICULTURE extends to Sam and his loyal retinue cordial good wishes for many years of prosperity and continued happiness in their new home.

BALTIMORE.

The gardeners of Baltimore have been given an additional week of opportunities to consult the three experts from the Maryland Agricultural College on their garden problems. The continued requests for advice caused them to decide to devote an extra week to this city, making their headquarters at City Hall. Prof. Anspen declared that he has seen no army worms in this city, and no evidence of any. A report of the arrival of these pests caused an examination of a large lawn which they were supposed to have attacked but none were found.

Members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore will make a tour by automobile of all of the city's parks on Monday afternoon, July 12. An invitation has been extended to Mayor Preston and members of the Park Board to accompany the florists. Resolutions were adopted extending thanks to Mayor Preston for having the specialists from the Maryland Agricultural College come and assist in ridding Baltimore gardens of insect pests and diseases, and otherwise aiding in the culture of plants and flowers.

CINCINNATI.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society's annual meeting will be held on Monday, July 12, at Max Rudolph's. The annual election of officers will take place.

The annual outing of the Society will be held at Coney Island on Wednesday, July 21. Tickets may be had at any of the wholesale houses.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange were the first in the market with asters, this summer. They were from Chas. F. Hoffmeister's place at Fort Thomas, Ky.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON The usual stagnation of business activity customary to the fourth of July week as the dead centre between the past and the new season is the condition which all have to face this week. As to which particular flower gets hit the hardest at this inevitable juncture, years vary. This year it is the carnation which suffers worst, and this is all the more to be regretted because the quality of the flowers offered is so very good. However, there is a bit of light ahead for the summer resort florists are beginning to show up and a few orders have been placed already. So all eyes are turned toward the rising sun of the new day and, however disappointing the one just gone may have been, yet we realize it might have been worse. Look forward now, not back.

BUFFALO The market was rather dull the past week, summer conditions prevailing. There are any amount of roses, carnations, lilies, peas and sales have to be forced. Floral work has been very light and weddings being about over therefore very little business is coming to the wholesalers.

CHICAGO Real summer to a florist begins July 1st. This year is no exception. All the ear marks are to be seen except in the stock which is fresh and good. Customers were few after the two holidays, July 4th and 5th, and the cut of the two days was brought into a market almost devoid of buyers. The first days of the month had seen stock clean up fairly well though prices were made very low on large lots rather than consign them to the barrels, but after the 5th, business lagged sadly. The stock sold to the big department stores for their special sales, though it cleared the path of the wholesaler, curtailed the opportunity of the retailer to move even the scant amount his summer trade usually calls for. Peonies are still left in quantities in storage and the daily sales are not heavy, still few are lost. Carnations are remarkable for their substance and stiff stems and look more like the product of May than July. Roses are of every length and the stock is considered very good indeed for the season. Garden flowers are very much in evidence.

CINCINNATI Business taken as a whole is rather quiet. Some of the lines and the better grades of stock move fairly well but the market is not at all active. The offerings in the new roses are large and good. The supply of lilies is so large that the market is overloaded with them. Gladioli are in a good supply and sell fairly well. The first of the early asters came in the early part of this week. Other offerings include auratum and rubrum lilies, Water lilies, carnations, snapdragons and hardy hydrangea.

CLEVELAND Business this past week has been fair. Outside flowers arriving in large quantities. Peonies are about done and are now being used from storage and some of the florists claim they are not coming in very good shape. From all reports, there have been more peonies put in cold storage than ever before. A remarkable fact is the presence of peonies, gladioli, asters and dahlias on the market in quantities at the same time. Short Beauties and white roses have been less than the demand at times. Carnation plants suffered considerable from rains early in the season, but are coming along all right now.

NEW YORK As might be expected, the past week has been the dead low tide of the flower business in this city. There is no call for anything and nothing of a business nature to cause the faintest ripple on the apathy which has settled down over the wholesale district. Receipts of stock are much lighter as it does not pay to transport goods to a market which is not a market and so the labor of the wholesale people is materially lightened. No complaint can be found with the average quality of the material received, which is much better than we have been accustomed to see at this date. There is an abundance of really nice stock from which to fill orders if orders would only materialize. The situation is no different otherwise from other years. An upward movement may soon be looked for and even if slight it will be heartily welcomed.

PITTSBURGH Killarney, Richmond and Mrs. Aaron Ward roses and Harrisli lilies are almost as of good quality as in winter, although naturally selling at low prices in order to meet the business demands. Other stocks are shortening up, but what is coming in is good. Carnations are still coming in fairly well and there are lots of outdoor sweet peas. The fine quality of this late stock is accounted for in the unusually cool, rainy weather, which, however, unfortunately promises anything but well for corn and grain.

SAN FRANCISCO The nearest approach to an over-supply of flowers experienced in the local market in several months was felt the past week, and the situation was due more to increased product than to decreased demand. There was plenty of stock showing excellent quality; much ordinary stock, and a good many supplies below standard in quality, which made it difficult to maintain prices on medium stock, and next to impossible to clean up inferior offerings even at extremely low prices. Counter trade seems to be keeping up better than usual for this time of year. Carnations and sweet peas are both plentiful and cheap, and show a wide range in quality. Some very fine dahlias are appearing. The supply of gladioli continues to increase, much of the stock being rather ordinary. Hydrangeas are offered freely with a good demand. Among the new outdoor stock coming in late, in June was some very nice godetia and cockcombs, which were readily absorbed. The cut of roses is as large as it was, and the shipping demand keeps up well. Mildew is causing some trouble, but complaints are not very serious. The market is well supplied with orchids.

ST. LOUIS The remarkably cool weather has caused the stock coming to this market to be of the best quality and the consignments are very large every day. Roses and carnations are looking well but the big cuts can hardly be disposed of unless at very cheap prices which have prevailed in this market all the past week. The great glut in this market at present are in sweet peas and gladioli. These are very heavy each day. Outdoor stock of these in all varieties is coming in by the thousands and is hard to dispose of at any price. Other outdoor flowers have little if any sale. Everything is cheap and business is dull.

WASHINGTON Stock is very plentiful and for the most part good but even the best moves but very slowly. It is the usual early July dullness. Outdoor sweet peas are replacing the greenhouse stock which is fast disappearing. A nice lot of Sylvia, Charles Bruton and Delice were brought in last week to open the dahlia season and these moved fairly well because of being newcomers. A few asters were also shown but these were not wanted. There has been an oversupply of Hydrangea arborescens which does not find the ready sale of a few years ago when their production was confined to a few growers. The season is about over for yellow daisies yet some are still to be had. Lilies are good, but they are in little demand. Gladioli are holding their own. There are plenty of good cattleyas but the demand is fluctuating. Out-of-town business continues good and daily shipments are made to all southern points.

Detroit, Mich.—The Schroeter-Staehlin Company have dissolved partnership and the business will be hereafter conducted in the name of Hugo Schroeter.

NEWPORT, R. I.

What Robert Burns had to say about the miscarriage of "the best laid plans of mice and men" would apply very aptly to the experiences of the sweet pea growers in Newport. Just as the plants had reached that stage where a resplendent crop of exhibition flowers seemed assured there came a week of fog—fog of the typical Newport brand, that "one could cut with a knife"—and when it was over every bud was gone on most varieties. We visited Wm. Robertson, William Gray, James Bond, J. Urquhart, William Mackaye and other bright stars of the horticultural firmament and all had the same hard experience. The consequent postponement of the big show may, however, prove advantageous for the Lenox and Bar Harbor growers, whose crop is naturally later than that of Newport, a fact which their Newport rivals generously comment upon with magnanimous satisfaction. We hope that everything will now conspire to produce a record exhibition, but skillful and clever as the gardeners are they all have to submit to that final dictator—the weather. The rose garden in the Gov. Beekman place under the care of John Urquhart was a sight, however, which more than atoned for the denuded sweet peas. At this place we saw something of a novelty, gardenias thriving and blooming luxuriantly in cold frames.

The Newport retail florists—T. J. Gibson, Leikens, Bunyard, Gibson Bros., Armstrong, Wadley & Smythe and Schultz—all except the first-named ranged along Bellevue avenue—are looking wistfully ahead to the coming two months, hoping for a prosperous season and a share of that money which in ordinary times would presumably have been squandered in Europe, but not daring to make any rosy predictions. What beautiful roses they produce in that moist Newport climate! We saw some garden-grown Brunners in Gibson's that would charm the heart of the most exacting rose lover. Just now the delphiniums, Spanish irises, foxgloves and calceolarias are the main decorative features of the avenue show windows. Glorious beyond words was the Bunyard display of golden iris flanked by great vases of blue larkspur and indeed, the displays by all the above mentioned places were most attractive and artistic.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES

F. C. Jaeger, of the Fairmont Floral Co., is spending a vacation in the southern part of the state.

Mrs. Yoch, landscape architect, of Los Angeles, Cal., is in San Francisco to study the landscaping of the Exposition.

Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is entertaining his father, Malcome MacRorie, of New Jersey, who is here to attend the Exposition.

Mrs. Steele, of Steele's Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore., is visiting the Exposition, the pansy beds of which are of particular interest to her as the plants were supplied by her firm.

At the next meeting of the local horticultural society the question of a florists' picnic this month or next will come up for discussion. The subject has been agitated in the trade and sentiment seems to favor an outing.

A new flower shop is being opened at 1806 Fillmore street under the name of the Motroni Art Floral Co. Mr. Motroni has just returned from Sacramento, Cal., where he has been since disposing of his business at Fillmore and Washington streets some months ago. He is having his new place nicely fitted up.

In anticipation of an increased demand for chrysanthemums on account of the Exposition, growers supplying this market have planted a larger acreage than in former years. The United Flower & Supply Co. expects to handle the output of between twenty-five and thirty acres, which is nearly twice the amount planted by the same growers last season. An early cut is in sight as buds are appearing three weeks ahead of the normal development.

CLEVELAND NOTES.

Ed. George of Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, and Guy Bate, Cleveland Cut Flower Co., Newton Falls, O., were in town Thursday to attend a meeting of the premiums committee of the Cleveland Flower Show.

Al. Barber of Jones-Russell Co. is off on a fishing trip with Geo. Bate of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., to the Portage Lakes. As they are both well known as professional fishermen, each having a record a little better than the other, their report of the "actual happenings" of the trip, promises to be interesting.

The Cleveland Florists' Club meeting date has been changed from July 5th to the 12th on account of the holiday celebrations. An interesting subject for discussion will be the plans for the annual picnic of the club to be held later in the month. Some important plans for the Cleveland Flower Show will also come up at this meeting.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

THE EAVE

NE of the many vitally important parts in Greenhouse construction that we have perfected is the eave. It took many years of experience to produce this, the one perfect eave. The Metropolitan Eave is made of cast iron, will not rust, and is so constructed as to eliminate sludge. It is ice-clearing, carries all the water of condensation from the inside, and what's more, almost the entire end of the bar is exposed to the air, thereby preventing decay. Only one screw about two inches from the end, is all that is required to secure the bars. For side stationary glass, wood headers are absolutely unnecessary. The eave is made with a lug to prevent the glass from slipping, and does away with zinc glass stops. It is made for both round and flat posts.

This Is But One Of The Many Improvements We Have Made In Greenhouse Construction.

Put your Greenhouse problems up to us. Let us submit plans and prices. We go anywhere in U. S. A.

Looking On All Sides

Of the Question

AMONG our customers are some of the biggest cranks in the business.

Leastwise that's what a lot of their fellow growers tell us.

But strange as it may seem, we have not found them to be cranks at all. Simply because a man has pronounced ideas and wants them carried out, doesn't make him a crank.

It proves he is a thinker. And when a man does a lot of good, hard thinking, he grows. And the man who is growing, you know well enough, makes the best kind of a grower.

We build our houses according to specifications. That's exactly what our specifications are for.

It's why our specifications are so much more specific than the general run.

When these so-called cranks buy their houses of us and drive a close bargain; we don't blame them. We are doing the same thing with everything we buy. We have to; or we couldn't sell houses to these close buyers and make a cent.

And surely we are not in business for the fun of it, any more than they are.

So looking at it from all sides of the question: it seems as if our entire organization was trained right along the crank lines, which puts us in a position to surely satisfy the most cranky to satisfy.

As we understand it, you are a bit of a crank yourself about some things.

Then let's get together and do business. It's plain to be seen that "we belong to the same lodge."

You know now better than ever, why it is you can depend on depending on Hitchings.

And remember we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

Pecky Cypress

We are prepared to supply our customers with Pecky Cypress material for benches, cut to fit so that it can be quickly erected, or can furnish the lumber just as it comes from the mill.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil." — P.

Chrysanthemums

Plants set in the benches in May will have made a foot or so of growth and will produce a bud some time in July. This is called a "break." Very early planted stock may produce a first bud in June and a second one in July which is obviously too early to retain so that advice to take first or second crowns is not very explicit. All buds produced in August are crown buds and a crown bud, by the way, is always distinguished by the shoots that appear around it and which soon grow up and take all the strength away from the bud if they are not removed. The terminal bud, which does not appear till September or later, always has a cluster of smaller buds around it in place of the small shoots, and this bud being produced some four weeks later than the crown bud will not produce so large a flower or so deep a flower because it has had another growth to mature while the crown bud has been putting that same strength to producing petals in the future flower.

Lorraine Begonias

Don't overlook keeping the flowers and buds removed. Growth is what you want now and not flowers. If the plants are free from green fly, as good a way as any to keep them so is to apply weekly a light spraying of a nicotine solution. Examine the stock carefully and if at all potbound don't wait for a time to shift but do not shift unless you are positive that the plants are in need of it. The main thing is to use a porous soil. We are making use of loam and leaf mold mixed with about one-fifth of well rotted cow manure for the present shifting and this with plenty of drainage in the pots seems to suit the plants nicely. Shade just enough to keep the foliage from burning. Avoid careless watering.

Rambler Roses

Pot culture during summer is the best method for plants to be forced during the winter. Failures in forcing are usually tracable to neglect during summer.

RESTING GRAFTED ROSES.

Editor HORTICULTURE.

Kindly advise me through the HORTICULTURE how far to cut back grafted roses for a rest, that were planted out in greenhouse last July, and how long should I rest them to get the best results this winter. N. H. C.

New York.

Generally speaking, any of the forcing roses now in commerce should be cut back to about 12 inches when being made ready to start up after a rest, the length of time that they have been dried off governing somewhat this point. Some growers prefer to dry off the Teas and Hybrid Teas for approximately two weeks, getting the soil thoroughly dried out and hardening the wood well, being careful, of course, not to allow the wood to shrivel. Such a long period of drying will permit of cutting back low, say 10 to 12 inches.

Another system of handling carried over roses and one which is meeting with a great deal of favor is that of simply withholding the water gradually and bringing the wood on the plants to a firm state, then cutting the plants back to 15 or 18 inches and starting right on again without the long period of rest. About a week is all that is necessary.

From the writer's observation this has given most excellent results and Pot grown ramblers will now have made canes of considerable length. Do not allow these to lie over on the ground but tie them up securely. Only in this way can they be well ripened. This is particularly necessary with Dorothy Perkins and other pink varieties which are somewhat prostrate in their natural habit. Reduce the number of shoots to four or five on each plant. If the pot ramblers are still indoors get them outside at once. Plunge them to their brims. Use the hose freely and there is little likelihood of red spider getting a foothold.

Pruning Flowering Shrubs

The time to prune flowering shrubs with the exception of hydrangeas and one or two other unimportant species is just after the flowering period. All the spring bloomers flower from the shoots made the previous season while the late summer and autumn flowering sorts require new young shoots for blooming. The pruning of the first named consists of cutting out much of the older shoots but not all, which will cause fresh growth for the next year's blooming.

Start Freesia Bulbs

Freesia bulbs that were forced last year and had good attention in the way of drying off will make fine bulbs to plant now. To get freesias in flower by Christmas or the New Year plant them right away in flats or pans. Place them two or three inches apart each way in good new soil well drained. Fibrous loam three parts, cow manure and leaf mold one part each will suit nicely. Place them in a cool place or cellar until they begin to show through when they should be brought out to full light. Water moderately until the foliage is well developed.

Perennial Lupines and Larkspurs

Seeds of these stately and gorgeous perennials should be sown now without delay. Sow in a cold frame. Give them some shade and they will germinate much better. When large enough they can be transplanted into other frames where they will make fine growth by late fall.

is worthy of a trial. Less time is lost during the resting period and wherever this has been tried the plants have started along quickly and made as strong a growth as could ever be expected from the former method. R.

SOWING MIGNONETTE.

I note in your last issue that Mr. Farrell in his notes advises sowing mignonette, for winter blooming, at once. It is just one month too early for New Jersey; to get the best results I find the middle of August the best, as early sowing is inclined to make it weak. H. A. M.

New Jersey.

The great flood of roses and other flowers which has recently overwhelmed all the big flower markets from the Atlantic to the Mississippi river has given the flower trade a difficult situation to solve. Each community has gone about it in its own way as usual, but everywhere the question of price has been lost entirely in the great proposition of how to distribute the huge accumulations without allowing them to reach the waste barrels. Naturally, at such a time the retail florist finds much to exasperate and incite him to vengeance. In the curbstone fakir, the push-cart pedler and the department store bargain counter he sees only a menace and a nuisance. But, after all, when we read of the throngs of people standing in a line reaching half way across a big department store in Chicago, eager to take advantage of a sale of roses advertised at seven cents a dozen, a new train of thought is set in motion and we find ourselves wondering whether this bit of enterprise really did any injury to the business of the legitimate retail florist or whether he would have profited in the least if all that surplus which was unloaded at a few dollars a thousand had been thrown into the dump instead.

It is in the air that we are in for a season of low prices on Dutch bulbs. This is in accord with our prediction last January when, basing our convictions on the views expressed by parties well-informed on the situation in Holland, we said that in all probability the better classes of Dutch bulbs would be offered this season at prices which had appertained to the more ordinary kinds heretofore. We now understand that the Dutch bulb-growers' union has decided to cut hyacinth prices about one-half. Whether this will induce the more general purchasing and planting of these bulbs by the general public remains to be seen, but, at least, it should. The worst feature of such a situation, which is admittedly caused by accumulations resulting from the lack of European demand, is the demoralization attendant upon the unloading on the American market of large consignments to be sold for whatever they will bring. We had a taste of that last year and the large seed houses, which are the heaviest buyers of these goods, knowing what is likely to happen, can hardly be expected to take any great chances now, much as they might wish to help their Holland friends in their pitiable dilemma. As to the tulips, while no serious break in prices is looked for, yet a much better grade for the same price seems probable. Darwins have taken such a jump in demand that we shall have to pay full rates, undoubtedly, for the genuine article.

We are pleased to be able to tell our readers that Mr. Ruzicka will from now on resume his regular weekly articles on rose culture under glass. In the very practical chapter which he contributes this week, referring to the marketing of roses at the present time, it will be noted that he says, "Cut roses that arrive in the crowded markets now must be strictly first class or the price that they will bring will not be a profitable one for the grower." This statement would hold true as applied to almost any season of the year under the present advanced skill in rose culture, of which Mr. Ruzicka himself is recognized as a conspicuous exponent. Defective roses of any variety are not wanted in any of the wholesale markets even for the cheap trade. "Strictly first class" does not necessarily mean special or exhibition grade, however, nor does it demand stems of extraordinary length but it does mean straight stems, clean glossy foliage, and buds well formed and even colored—all cut at the right stage of development and without a blemish. Anything else is held in contempt, even by the street fakirs, no matter in what grade it may pass muster by reason of length of stem. The rose grower who would make a success of it today must give it his individual attention, likewise must the rose seller stick close to his job. On being asked why he did not invest in a range of rose houses, Patrick Welch, Boston's pioneer wholesale dealer sagely replied, "I turn them into money; that's enough for any man to try to do."

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Late Planting

With low prices all through the spring months many of the larger growers held on to their stock a little longer, thus making up the shrinkage in returns. Many smaller growers did the same, and the result is that there are a great number of greenhouses that have not yet been planted. This work should now be pushed along, for we have every promise of a wet, dark fall, as there has been no dry weather this summer so far. Our section at least has had more rain than needed. If the planting is put off much longer, and a dark fall should follow, the plants will not have a show to become established before winter comes along, and the result will be poor stock, and plenty of worry for the grower. Where old plants are to be run over, or planted again, this should especially be attended to at once, as these are likely to suffer more than the young plants. In the rush of work, however, do not neglect to clean out the benches well, and see that they are properly whitewashed with a little copper sulphate added to the lime. This will kill all the fungus spores that it touches, and will help do away with the many diseases that the rose is subject to. Clean out underneath the benches, making sure that all the old soil is removed and wheeled out of the house. When through planting, it is well to clean out once more, and then scatter a little fresh slacked dry lime under the benches. This will make a large number of insects seek healthier climate, if it does not kill them at once.

Mildew

Do not make the mistake so often made by growers, and let all your fires out too soon. The weather so far has been remarkably cool, and there were only a few nights that the houses did not need any heat. A little steam to take the chill off in the early morning when the temperature outside drops away down, will go a great way to prevent mildew. The houses should not be allowed to go below 64 deg. F. at any time now, as the warm days run the temperature in the daytime away up. If the houses are allowed to drop as low as 54 the difference between the day and night air is too great. The little coal and the little extra attention that the houses will need when steam is kept on will be well paid for in the long run. Cut roses that arrive in the crowded markets now must be strictly first class or the price that they will bring will not be a profitable one for the grower. Keep the fires on until they are not needed. Then paint a little sulphur on the pipes here and there, about every ten feet on one steam pipe, for every twenty feet of width. Thus a house forty feet wide will get two painted pipes, where one twenty feet wide will only get one. Should mildew appear here and there in spite of all precautions and care, dust a little sulphur over it at once, or spray with Fungine. Do not let it spread, but check it at once.

Icing the Shipping Boxes

This will not be necessary where the icebox can be kept cool enough, but where natural ice is used to keep the box cool, it is bound to run a shade warmer than is best, and it will be necessary to ice the stock as it is shipped to the market. In doing this make sure that the ice is placed so that none of the buds will come in contact with it, as it will take the color out of them where it does touch. Beauties are the easiest to handle, as they are mostly long stemmed, and the ice can be put at the bottom of the boxes where there is no danger of its coming into contact with the buds.

Lining Boxes

It does not pay to use too little paper in the boxes during the hot weather, for the roses inside are bound to suffer. We put paper in the boxes in winter to keep the roses warm, and in the summer we ought to use it to keep the roses cool. Paper is a very poor conductor of heat, and several sheets in the boxes will keep the sun's hot rays out as much as it will keep Jack Frost out in the winter. Use at least four thicknesses and where ice is used, use six.

Fumigation

Do not neglect this in the least. This applies especially to the young newly planted houses, which should be kept clear of all insects at all costs. With the cool nights it is a very simple matter. Make sure that the houses are below 72 when you fumigate. The plants must not be dry either, for they are liable to burn. In using stems, make sure that they do not burn with a flame, as that would make hot smoke, which would be very apt to be injurious to the plants. Arrange so, if possible, that the plants will be syringed the next day. This will do away with a great many more insects. Never use tobacco stems in old houses where roses are still cut for the market. The blooms would likely be ruined, and will have an awful odor for a time to say the least. If the weather is too warm to fumigate, spray with any of the insecticides advertised in Horticulture. We prefer to fumigate, as some men cannot be trusted to mix insecticides for spraying just so, and the result would be that they would either be too strong, or else so weak as to be worthless.

TEXAS STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

That the convention held in Fort Worth last week was a great success from every standpoint was attested by everyone who attended. By the hour of opening Tuesday morning most of the visitors had arrived. The Convention Hall had been placed in readiness by the local entertainment committee and those who had brought exhibits had everything in place. The meeting was called to order at 10 A. M. by Vice-President W. J. Baker. Geo. B. Gay, superintendent of Parks of Fort Worth, represented the mayor in welcoming the convention to Fort Worth, and the visitors were welcomed on behalf of the Fort Worth florists by L. J. Tackett. H. B. Beck, of Austin, responded to the addresses of welcome. Following these addresses and the reading of the communication from Mr. Patrick Welch, President of the Society of American Florists, Mr. Baker introduced the President Mr. R. C. Kerr, in the following language:

"It is my duty as chairman to introduce our president, a man we all know and love, the man, but for whom there would not have been any Texas Association, a man who has done more for this association than all of us—Mr. Kerr, who will now take the chair." After President Kerr had resumed the chair and delivered his address as published in our issue of last week, the regular program was taken up and several very valuable speeches were delivered.

It was very gratifying to all Texas florists who attended to have present quite a number of out-of-the-state florists and supply houses and from the way the exhibits brought by these gentlemen were visited and looked over it was very evident that these were not only appreciated but were very profitable to all in attendance. The firms represented by exhibits were: A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill.; J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, Ohio; H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; The Sefton Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.; Weatherford Pottery Co., Weatherford, Texas; Paducah Pottery Co., Paducah, Ky.; Talbot Mfg. Co., Fort Worth, Texas; Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.; Burlington Willow Ware Mfg. Co., Burlington, Iowa; Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.; H. J. Condon, Dickinson, Texas; Bud & Farley, Denison, Texas; Hans Schroeder, Temple, Texas; E. E. Stone, Dickinson, Texas.

Before adjournment of the first morning session each one present was called upon to rise and introduce himself, giving his address and the nature of his business. Each of the firms represented by exhibits were also called upon to come forward and state the name of the firm they represented and to make any other remarks that they chose to make. This privilege was very highly appreciated by these gentlemen. The first morning session continued until one o'clock, at which time adjournment was had and the ladies proceeded to the Westbrook Hotel, where a well attended reception was given them by the local ladies' committee. At three o'clock the entire delegation was carried on an automobile ride over the city and to the greenhouses of J. E. McAdams, Geo. Kennedy, L. Cowell, W. B. Green, Baker Bros., Co., and Drumm Seed & Floral Co. Refreshments were served by J. E. McAdams, Drumm Seed & Floral Co., and Baker Bros. Co. The visitors were entertained for the evening at Byars Opera House.

At the Wednesday morning session the appointing of committee, hearing of reports and election of officers were the principal business transacted. Reports from representatives of different florists' clubs in Texas showing that some very excellent work is being done were made.

T. J. Wolfe of the Flower Show Committee reported the results of the show in Houston last fall. This report showed receipts amounting to $1,217.78, and expenditures amounting to $1,251.90. This report shows a deficit of $34.12, but Mr. Wolfe stated that there was considerable expense that had to be incurred for this first show that would not be necessary any more. All paraphernalia used in the flower show is being preserved and of course, will not have to be purchased for the next. It was decided to have another flower show this year, and Houston was selected as the place.

Dallas was selected as the next meeting place for the association in 1916. The election of officers resulted as follows: R. C. Kerr, president, Dallas; L. J. Tackett, secretary-treasurer, Fort Worth; Louis Ceasche, press representative, Dallas; Fritz Hensell, educational director, College Station, Texas. Directors for three years, H. Kaden, Gainesville, F. C. Suchy, San Antonio, A. B. Brown, Dallas.

There was much valuable instructions on different subjects of very great importance during these sessions and much good will certainly be the result.

One of the most important incidents was the appearance of Mr. Ed. L. Ayers, Chief Inspector of Washington Nursery of the Texas State Department of Agriculture, who discussed the workings of the Nursery and Orchards law and the importance of properly enforcing this law. Mr. Ayers assured the members that he wished to co-operate with them and to assist them in every way that he could, and assist in eradicating any trouble that they may have with their plants at any time. After Mr. Ayer's address there was quite a bit of discussion of the workings of the Inspection law and it was decided to make an effort to have the law amended so that it may be more beneficial to the florists. There was a legislative committee appointed to look after this question and the following gentlemen were named on this committee: Edward Hall, chairman, Austin; Mr. E. W. Judge, Bird Forest, and E. E. Stone, Dickinson.

At three o'clock the convention adjourned and proceeded to Forest Park where a baseball game between the local florists and the visiting florists was played, the result being 6 to 3 in favor of the visitors. This ball game was very much enjoyed by reason of the fact that the players were all florists. Lineups were as follows:

Home Team.—R. Dunn, catcher; J. E. McAdams, pitcher; W. J. Baker, 1st b.; Byers, 2d b.; Bale, 3d b.; C. Brazier, c. f.; L. Cunningham, l. f.; Papworth, r. f.

Philip Foley, of Chicago threw the first two balls. R. C. Kerr pitched for the visiting florists and displayed much skill in this particular game.

Immediately following the ball game the barbecue was had and every one did justice to the meal. This concluded the program for the convention and everyone went away expressing themselves as having enjoyed their stay in Ft. Worth very much. We are quite sure that we express the sentiments of all Ft. Worth florists when we state that we are very glad to have had the craft in Ft. Worth and hope that it will not be many years until Ft. Worth will be again selected as the place for holding the convention.

Address of Patrick Welch, President S. A. F., to the Texas State Florists' Association.

Gentlemen of the Convention:

I sincerely regret that I am unable to fulfil the promise which I made to your honorable president some time ago to be present and address you on the question of the greatest importance to all state and national horticultural and floricultural societies—that is, affiliation with the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. I believe thoroughly in local organizations in our profession, but my experience of 30 years of membership in the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists convinces me that membership in these local organizations should also be supplemented by membership in the national organization. The state organization is limited in the scope of its usefulness, and at best can only accomplish limited results. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society, one of the oldest societies in our country, having been founded in 1829, has greatly encouraged and developed floriculture and horticulture in New England, and its example has been followed by many organizations all over the country, and yet many of its leading members are members of our national organization, and are continually testifying to the benefits derived from the national society. Our society with its national charter, its membership coming from nearly every state and territory of this great United States, knowing the advantages and realizing the deficiencies of their respective state organizations, makes a mighty gathering, whose interests and influence reflect the impressions of our profession all over the country. The objects of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists are "to advance the love of floriculture and horticulture in America; to promote and encourage the development of their industries; to classify their products; to hold meetings and exhibitions; and to co-operate with National and State governments and horticultural bodies in disseminating horticultural knowledge.

Membership. All persons interested in horticulture, professionally or amateur, and manufacturers of and dealers in horticultural supplies are eligible to membership individually, and on payment of $5, other things being satisfactory, may be admitted to membership. The annual dues thereafter are $3 a year, and any annual member in good standing may become a life member on the payment of $25 and be exempt from all future assessments."

This society has handled questions of tariff, transportation, shipments, nation-wide publicity for our business, national flower shows, and other questions, to the advantage of all, during recent years especially, and will continue to do so more effectively in the future. The society feels, however, that every florist and horticulturist should obtain membership, and we therefore solicit the aid, assistance and co-operation of this Texas State Florists' Association and of other organizations. In order to encourage membership in our national organization, and at the same time to insure representation on our national board of directors, it is now one of our by-laws that whenever one hundred members of any society have become members of our organization its president shall have a seat in our board of directors—thus, we feel, assuring co-operation.

The dangers to co-operation come from within, and not from without, and the co-operation movement is no weaker nor stronger than the intelligent determination of those who engage in it, therefore let us have in the national organization your assistance in bringing it about. As John Stewart Mills has said, "All advantages that a man may possess arise from the power of acting in combination with his fellows, and of accomplishing by the united effort of members what could not be accomplished by the individual effort of individuals."

I believe that you will carry home from this convention a practical conception of the difficulties which beset our business, and the reward that awaits their solution, and I feel that we in the National Society can help in this solution. I extend to every member of the Texas State Florists' Association a most sincere invitation to enroll as a member of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. We look to the great state of Texas to send us some of its giant intellect to help in this society, and I feel that we will not be disappointed. On behalf of the national organization I want to extend to you their greeting and wishes for a most happy and prosperous year.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

The American Association of Park Superintendents extend an invitation to members of the allied Horticultural Societies to join their special-car parties for the Pacific Coast Tour.

Reservations may be made through the committee or Thos. Cook & Son, 245 Broadway, New York City, who will also supply all information concerning details.

The train will follow an itinerary covering the most interesting routes of travel during the early autumn season. Leaving New York on Saturday, August 7th and eastern cities, and going westward via Chicago, Minneapolis, Glacier National Park, the Puget Sound Region, and the famous "Shasta" route, San Francisco will be reached at 6.50 P. M. on Monday, August 16th.

After attending the respective conventions and visiting the Panama-Pacific Exposition, the party will leave on Tuesday, August 24th, for the return trip, making stops at Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Diego, Salt Lake City, Pueblo, Colorado Springs, Denver, Kansas City and St. Louis, arriving at Eastern Cities Monday, September 6th.

CINCINNATI FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

This society's annual meeting at Max Rudolph's place last Monday afternoon was well attended. Max Rudolph was elected president, C. E. Critchell, vice-president; Alex Ostendarp, secretary; J. Chas. Murphy, treasurer, and R. Witterstaetter, director. A relief committee consisting of Frank Deller, J. Chas. Murphy and Ray Murphy was appointed to solicit subscriptions to a relief fund to use in helping florists whose places were damaged by last Wednesday's storm and who need help on that account. The society subscribed a hundred dollars to this fund. After the meeting the members sat down to a luncheon as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph.

Mr. Rudolph's greenhouse establishment was in good condition and the uniform excellence of the stock in the various houses showed the reason why he always cuts blooms of the highest grade.

The annual outing of the society will be held on Wednesday, July 21st, at Coney Island. The outing committee consisting of Max Rudolph, C. E. Critchell, Henry Scharz and Wm. Sunderman has arranged for the usual list of athletic contests and promise all who attend a royal good time.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

President Morse's Address — The Sweet Pea in California.

When I was elected President of the American Sweet Pea Society a year ago, I hoped that the members and friends throughout the Eastern States could be present with us for the regular annual convention. However, since Mr. Bunyard found it impossible to be present himself, and as it seems impossible to get a quorum of members present, we decided to have a separate meeting in conjunction with our exhibit.

On June 11th, this exhibit was held in the Palace of Horticulture at the Exposition and was a grand success. There were some thirty entries, representing amateurs, professional gardeners and seed growers. There were some twelve hundred vases displayed; in fact, nearly every new variety of Spencer was represented. The Exposition officials recognized the day by sending their special commissioner, who presented me as President, with a bronze tablet in memory of the event and designated June 11th on all of their programs as "Sweet Pea Day." They also furnished Cassasa's band, one of the best in the city and composed of 40 pieces, and we had a beautiful concert in connection with the exhibition.

We had expected to have the flowers exhibited only one day, but so great was the demand for more time, that we allowed the exhibition to stand three days, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, and kept the room open until 10 o'clock at night, although the building is usually closed at 6 o'clock. It was impossible to estimate the number of visitors, but there were literally thousands upon thousands present and all seemed amazed at an exhibit of such beautiful and magnificent flowers. We allowed nothing to be displayed but sweet peas.

Although California grows fully 95 per cent of all the sweet pea seeds used in the world, flower shows and exhibitions are seldom given. Sweet peas first began to be grown for seed in about 1886, when there were only about seven varieties. The acreage has steadily increased until for the past five years there has been no less than 2000 acres planted for sweet pea seed alone and all in what is known as the coast valley, from San Francisco south to Los Angeles. It is safe to say that no less than one million pounds a year is the average yield of the California seed farms and these farms are represented by some ten or twelve large seed growers. A great many new varieties have been originated in California but as the growers are largely wholesale dealers only, the novelties are introduced by seed dealers in other parts of the country. While probably only half of the acreage is devoted to Spencer varieties, the other half is made up largely of Grandiflora named varieties and mixtures. These latter are still popular for large planters.

Sweet Pea seed in California is usually planted in December and January and the fields are in full bloom in June. Harvest begins about August 1st. A great deal of development work is still being done and the large seed farms operate very large areas of what they call "workshops" where selections made from crosses and hybrids are being tried out. A great deal of time is now being spent on the development of the early flowering or Christmas Spencer types. As these are very shy seeders they are not handled much as yet in a wholesale way. I estimate that fully 50 per cent of all the California crop goes to Great Britain; some 10 per cent goes to Germany and France and other European countries, and about 40 per cent is consumed at home.

My firm has quite an elaborate exhibition at the Exposition Grounds, where we are growing sweet peas on the Cordon system, or the British exhibition plan. These plants were started in pots in the fall; the ground was prepared in the fall and by disbudding and proper feeding we have been able to grow some enormous blossoms, quite equal to any I have ever seen in Great Britain. Needless to say they are creating a great deal of interest.

We are hoping that the exhibition given last month is but the beginning of an annual sweet pea exhibit, which will be held as one of the features of the American Sweet Pea Society and will be held under its auspices. All members of the Sweet Pea Society are cordially invited to visit the seed farms should they ever be in California during the blossoming period, which begins about May 15th, and ends July 1st.

My best wishes to the Society for a long and useful career.

PITTSBURGH FLORISTS' AND GARDENERS' CLUB.

The closing meeting for the summer season on July 6th at the Fort Pitt Hotel was a very pleasant little affair. There were not a great many present, as the vacation season is calling, but those who were present had much to enjoy.

T. Tyler, gardener for C. D. Armstrong, showed four pots of Cattleya Gaskelliana in profuse bloom. He also showed a flower of Vanda Batemanii which is very rarely seen in bloom.

The judging committee awarded to the cattleyas a cultural certificate. P. S. Randolph & Sons, Verona, Pa., showed a collection of ferns, to one of which, a new one, Nephrolepis Verona, was awarded a first-class certificate, also for a new sport of Teldy, Jr. Thanks were given to President Neil McCallum for his display from West End Park and his interesting descriptive talk. He also gave a history of the Crimson Rambler rose.

Wm. E. Niece, of Grove City, Pa., spoke in regard to vegetable humus, a large deposit of which, several feet in thickness, had been discovered in the vicinity of Grove City, and which analysis had shown to be very unusually rich in nitrogen. He asked the privilege of sending each member a 100-lb. sack for testing purposes, which was gladly accepted. One of the younger members, P. S. Randolph, Jr., having taken to himself a charming wife in the last few months, called on the boys to share his happiness by partaking of a pleasant little spread. Everybody wished the young couple long life and happiness.

There will be no meeting in August.

H. P. JOSLIN, Secretary.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society at its annual meeting in Boston endorsed the Cleveland Flower Show as its representative for a rose show this fall. The committee selected to attend to this work was: Guy Bate, Chairman, Newton Falls, Ohio; L. L. Lam-born, Alliance, Ohio, and E. B. George, Painesville, Ohio. These gentlemen constitute an official committee to represent the American Rose Society in accordance with the above action. The report that comes back at the present time is—that the exhibition of roses from the middle West will be of the first order. The list of premiums for the exhibition is quite liberal also.

With this month of July the newly elected officers assume their places, viz.: president, S. S. Pennock, 1612 Ludlow St., Phila., Pa., succeeding Wallace R. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn.; vice-president, Louis J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., succeeding Robert Pyle of West Grove, Pa. The hold-overs are the treasurer, Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., and secretary, Benj. Hammond, Beacon, N. Y. The executive committee for the ensuing year stands as follows: August F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; John H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, Ontario; Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J.; Eber Holmes, Montrose, Mass.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa.

An executive committee meeting will be held at the office of President S. S. Pennock, 1612 Ludlow St., Phila., Pa., at 2 p. m., on July 20. At this meeting consideration will be given to the coming International Flower Show in Philadelphia, also to the affiliation of local societies and the test gardens.

Four different affiliated societies have had a set of medals for their June shows. The paid membership of the American Rose Society is twenty more than we had at this time last year.

BENJAMIN HAMMOND, Secretary.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The schedule for the Annual Show of the American Gladioli Society is being distributed and may be had free upon application to H. Youell, Secretary, 538 Cedar St., Syracuse, N. Y. Cash amounting to $650.00 is offered in prizes besides two gold medals, seven silver medals, four bronze medals, four silver cups, one cut glass vase. The Newport Horticultural Society offers $100.00 in special prizes to the growers of Rhode Island only.

The exhibitions at Newport and Atlantic City will be the largest ever held. Space for trade exhibits is being rapidly taken. The Newport exhibition will be held on August 18 and 19.

LADIES' S. A. F.

Mrs. John Vallance, 81 Glen avenue, Oakland, Cal., has been appointed by Mrs. W. F. Gude, president, as chairman of the introduction committee for convention week at San Francisco, Cal., August 17-20. Also the board of directors, Mrs. W. W. Coles (Indiana), chairman, are recommending by a majority vote of letters sent to the secretary, that the present officers and board be retained for 1916.

MRS. CHAS. H. MAYNARD, Secy.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

Plans were discussed at the meeting of the Florists' Club for the holding of what is expected will be the most successful outing in its history. This affair will be given on Wednesday, July 21, at Great Falls, Va., and special trains will leave from Georgetown, commencing at 2 P. M. The general committee in charge consists of O. A. C. Oehmler, chairman; George W. Hess, W. W. Kimmel, George C. Shaffer and William Marche. President George H. Cooke is chairman of the joke inspectors; George Shaffer, arrangements; Edward S. Schmid, prizes; J. Richards, refreshments; Harry Lewis, lost children; Fred H. Kramer, keeper of the zoo; William Ernest, chairman humepatocharox; William F. Gude, band leader (the band, however, is colored); W. W. Kimmel, badges; William Marche, transportation; Lloyd Jenkins, information; C. Milton Thomas, sports; Theodore Diedrich, dancing.

A short talk was given by Richard Vincent, Jr., on the use of flower boxes in the decoration of buildings. He also spoke of the proposed dahlia show to be held in New York City and suggested that those of the local florists growing these flowers make an exhibit at that time.

William F. Gude spoke on the coming convention of the S. A. F. and mapped out the course of travel for the benefit of those who may desire to go. He urged that all go who could possibly do so, telling of the many advantages offered by such a trip both with respect to pleasure and educational value.

The Club accepted the invitation of Edward S. Schmid to become his guest for the September meeting, at which time he will give his annual crab feast. The florists of Baltimore are also to be invited and Mr. Schmid stated that the entertainment features will be most elaborate. A buffet luncheon followed the business meeting.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' CLUB.

A banquet was an important part of the program at the club meeting at the Bismark, July 8. It marked the welding together again of the two clubs, which until three years ago, when the Cook Co. Florists' Association was formed, had been one club. The business session was very brief, nearly every item being laid over till the next meeting. The usual speeches on such occasions were omitted and a splendid talk on salesmanship, by Harry Newman Tolles, was the chief event of the evening, following the banquet. Everyone enjoyed the talk and wished for more of the same kind. Before closing, each member was urged to bring one new member into the club.

The arrangements are nearing completion for the florists' annual picnic, which occurs Sunday, July 25, at Morton Grove, in St. Paul's Park. Trains leave the Union Station at 9.15 A. M. and 12.40, 2.05, 3.05 and 5.15 P. M. A committee will see that florists using the first two trains will have reduced rates. The usual games will be pulled off in the afternoon and prizes awarded.

At the July meeting of this society a fine display was on the exhibition tables. A cultural certificate was awarded to Wm. Morrow for Eucharis amazonica. Honorable mention to O. A. Hunwick for Centaurea macrocephala; Robert Grunnert, for Spencer sweet peas; Joseph Tiernan, for hardy border carnations and Clarkia elegans. The summer show committee reported a substantial sum realized from this exhibition. The fall show committee reported progress. The premium list of the fall show is considerably increased by the receipt of a number of very fine offers from friends of the society. The outing committee reported that the annual outing and games will be held at Edwards Rye Beach Inn, Rye Beach, N. Y. Games will start promptly at 10.30 A. M. A shore dinner will be served at 1 P. M. Those requiring dinner tickets will please notify Wm. J. Sealey, Byram Shore, Portchester, N. Y. Dinner tickets are $1.50 a person. Don't forget the date, August 11. The next meeting will be held August 13.

The fall flower show executive committee met at the city offices of Poehlmann Brothers Company, July 12. There were present A. Henderson, August Poehlmann, Arnold Ringier, George Asmus, E. A. Kanst, Edward Goldenstein, C. W. Johnson, W. J. Keimel, N. P. Miller, H. S. Wilkerson and M. Barker. The report of S. J. Vaubhan on poster was presented and full power was given this committee to proceed as may seem best in the matter of securing suitable design. Plans covering the trade space to be sold in the Coliseum and annex were discussed at length and arrangements made to issue diagram and regulations. Appropriations aggregating approximately one thousand dollars were made in the gardeners' classes and the preliminary premium list was ordered printed. Chicago Grand Floral Festival was settled upon as the official name of the exhibition.

The next meeting of the Albany Florists' Club will be held at Henkes Bros., Newtonville.

White Plains, N. Y.—The Gedney Farm Company has leased for a term of years to William H. Moon Company, nurserymen, of Morrisville, Pa., a tract of land adjoining the Gedney Farm Hotel.

The Sweet Pea Show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on July 10 and 11 could hardly be called a "sweet pea" show, for these particular flowers were in a minority, and had it not been for the exhibitors of hardy garden flowers the display would have been rather limited in extent. For this condition the weather was wholly to blame, the terrific rain storms of the preceding days having practically ruined the sweet peas all over the state. There were some splendid blooms, however, from two or three exhibitors, those of Ed. Jenkins, of Lenox, and Mrs. T. J. Emery being particularly good as to quality and variety. Wells Beach Sweet Pea Farms was another sweet pea exhibitor to whom a word of commendation is due for the manner in which the varieties were labelled.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., made a very extensive and brilliant display of border perennials. Also an imposing table of blooms of Lilium myriophyllum which showed this sterling novelty in perfection and permeated the whole hall with its agreeable perfume. Julius Heurlin showed a hybrid lily (L. philadelphicum, \times L. bulbiferum) bearing a very numerous flowered spike of orange-yellow upright blooms. The Eastern Nurseries were represented by a grand collection of herbaceous perennial flowers. A good display of garden flowers and well-bloomed plants of Oncidium flexuosum was staged by H. Stewart, gardener for Miss Cornelia Warren, Waltham.

Very attractive indeed were the exhibits of novelty baskets arranged with sweet peas and gypsophila, by Penn the Florist and Boston Cut Flower Co., the former being shown on a background of purple velvet and the latter on soft green velvet. Trachelium caeruleum, shown by Faulkner Farm, attracted notice on account of its delicate beauty.

AN ESTATE WHERE GARDENING FLOURISHES.

ROCK GARDEN AND ROSE GARDEN
George E. Barnard Estate, Ipswich, Mass.

On Friday, July 9, the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of Mr. George E. Barnard at Ipswich, Mass. This is one of the steadily advancing places in eastern Massachusetts. Several years ago it was awarded the Hunnewell triennial prize as the best kept garden visited by the committee but it is now greatly improved from that time and will doubtless continue to improve, as its owner, who is still in the prime of life, has retired from active business and devotes his time and energies to the beautifying of his extensive grounds, a work of which he is very fond and in which he is ably seconded by his superintendent, George C. Butler.

The place has been in Mr. Barnard's possession about twelve years. Previously it was an old farm, with much natural beauty in the lay of the land but neglected and unkempt. The house which has been greatly enlarged, was built in 1812, which is quite recent as compared with many of the residences in this ancient town.

The flower gardens are laid out on the most generous order, long sweeping borders skirting expansive lawns of beautiful finish and merging into the evergreen plantations and woodlands very impressively. 40,000 perennials and 50,000 annuals were used in the planting this year. There is a rose garden, the plan of which impressed every one with its dainty simplicity and convenience, being cut out in scroll pattern in the lawn, without gravel walks, and affording close inspection of every plant without encroaching on the beds.

The grounds follow the shore of the Concord river and the flower garden proper occupies the site of a reclaimed meadow. A sloping hillside has been converted into an extensive rock garden which has been laid out with a charming abandon and exuberance of material and together with the aquatic pools at its base, will in due time take rank as a fine example of this fascinating branch of ornamental gardening.

It would be a great thing for horticulture if there were more gentlemen of the type of Mr. Barnard who finds his keenest enjoyment in his garden and who is as charming and companionable in his personality as his estate is interesting and inspiring for the garden lover.

ECHINOPS RITRO.

The plant which is so strikingly depicted in our cover illustration this week is so well known as a hardy border subject that any particular description of it here would be superfluous. Its odd metallic blue flowers and beautiful pinnate lobed foliage never fail to attract attention. The plant is of the easiest culture and shows to best advantage when a number are grouped together as in the picture.

BRITISH HORTICULTURE.

At an exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society, on June 22nd, a new delphinium, shown by A. Fergusson, was labelled "Souvenir de Lieutenant Warneford," in compliment to the plucky young British aviator whose daring exploit destroyed a German Zeppelin, and who met his death a few days afterwards in a flying accident. Another new delphinium from the same exhibitor was named "The Queen of the Belgians." Amongst the new orchids was one exhibited by J. G. Fowler, called "Queen Elizabeth." "Nowadays it is quite the fashion to give novelties a topical war name," a florist stated at the show. He pointed out several specimens marked with such names as Louvain and other places where battles have been fought.

A Florist's Hints.

"There is nothing of more serious importance to a seller of flowers than the careful keeping of his stock, and there is no doubt that the most terrible bogey man of our lovely business is named 'Waste.'" This is the opinion of R. F. Felton, in an informative article appearing in the "Fruit Trades' Journal." "From morn to night he is always staring us in the face, and it is our first duty to ourselves to do everything possible to keep him out of our establishments at all cost. The first start in this direction confronts us the very moment we open our market boxes. We are all rather apt to overlook the fact that these flowers which are perfectly fresh from our point of view have been cut at least 15 hours, and during that time they have been either on rail or road standing about the market; now it does not require any great reasoning power to determine that they are a little tired, to say the least, of it, and, therefore, instead of taking them out of the boxes, dumping them in vases, and selling them, they should have an hour or so of perfect rest. They do not get in a flower shop window, especially if it is like mine, due south and west. The first thing to do is to see that their stems are cut with a sharp knife; next see that all superfluous leaves are re-

FIELD CULTURE OF CARNATIONS.

A paper by Ira Landis, before the Lancaster County Florist Club.

As soon as the soil can be gotten into shape early in April we like to commence planting into the field. Assuming that the soil has been well manured and properly prepared with three men and a few boys, the planting proceeds nicely. We always use two lines and draw a rake along each row to make the soil mellow and the planting easy.

Where a great many thousand are grown I believe it advisable to plant in beds of about five rows each, fifteen inches apart and ten inches between the plants and cultivate by hand. We plant in rows thirty inches apart and ten inches in the row and cultivate with a horse. This method of cultivation I prefer to the hand cultivator where space is not limited as the deep cultivation helps the soil to retain moisture for a greater period. Care must be taken not to cultivate too close to the plants so as to injure the roots. Cultivate about every two weeks and as soon as possible after a rain with a fine toothed harrow in order to leave the soil nice and mellow.

As soon as the plants have become thoroughly established and their flowering shoots begin to push up, the pinching back or topping must be attended to and the stock gone over about every two weeks. About August 1 this topping must be discontinued if you want early blooms and if you have good healthy stock to start with in the spring the greater part of it should be ready to plant into the house early in August.

In the discussion that followed Mr.

Landis' paper, it was generally conceded by the fifteen or more carnation growers present that the cultivation by horse was an advantage on account of the greater depth the horse harrow had over the hand cultivation. It was also brought very strongly that early planting was an advantage and that some of the best results were obtained where the planting had been done so early that the plants had a pretty hard freeze after being planted out, B. F. Barr citing an instance where the thermometer went below 28 for several nights after planting out, and Frank Kohr, an instance where the plants were snowed under a few days after they had been planted, with beneficial results to the plants in both cases. W. B. Girvin said he planted about 22,000 to the acre, cultivating by horse power and was looking for a motor power cultivator to take the place of the horse. He believed in planting as early as the soil could be gotten into shape, which differs in some localities.

HOW TO LAY OUT SUBURBAN HOME GROUNDS. By Herbert J. Kellaway, Landscape Architect.

This is a new edition of a book that has already made a place for itself in this country and proved most helpful to the rapidly growing legion of attractive home makers. Landscape architecture is today recognized as one of the fine arts. The application of this new art is becoming more universal as the days and years go by, not only in the large public and private undertakings, but even, about the modern moderate home, for which this work was especially written as an inspiration. That it has accomplished much in making the home surroundings beautiful is the best reason for the believing that this new edition will be helpful. It embodies a number of new features, four new chapters having been added. They give suggestions as to the kind of trees to plant, the use of shrubs for the beautifying of grounds, and planting of perennials, vines and annuals.

Taking the book in its new edition as a whole, it is both suggestive and practical, and one that may well be studied by all desirous of making the most of their grounds, be they even of very modest dimensions, from the standpoints of beauty and usefulness.

The subject of harmonious planting and arrangement of grounds in relationship to buildings and environment is as yet but faintly understood in its fundamentals. This book with its well-founded maxims and practical rules for guidance will go far to prevent costly mistakes and to eliminate regrets and dissatisfaction in later years. There are fourteen comprehensive chapters, forty-one half-tone plates and fifteen plans and maps. Cloth $2.00 net, postpaid. John Wiley & Sons, Inc., New York, are the publishers. Copies can be supplied by HORTICULTURE.

MARKET GARDENING. By F. L. Yeaw, an Elementary Text Book and a Practical, Reliable and Handy Guide for all Growers of Vegetables.

The purpose of this little manual which has just been published by John Wiley & Sons, Inc., New York, is to furnish, in a condensed and usable form, information concerning methods and best practices for growing and marketing the commoner vegetables. It considers in detail, methods for the propagation, preparation of the soil for planting, cultivation, harvesting and marketing of twenty-three of the more common and hardy vegetables. In addition, much valuable information is given concerning soils, fertilizers, moisture requirements, seeds, germination, the preparation and care of hot beds and the storing and packing of vegetables. A special chapter is devoted to the location, planning and care of home and school gardens.

It is estimated that the income from the sale of vegetables is about twice that produced from the great fruit industries. Market gardening is certainly important enough to justify the preparation of this neat little volume of 108 pages, at the modest price of 75 cents net. It is well printed on fine heavy paper and there are thirty figures. A copy should be in the possession of everyone who grows garden vegetables for commercial purposes or home use.

Personal

L. Merton Gage, of gladiolus fame, is taking a vacation in Bristol, Vt., and neighborhood.

Antoine Leuthy of Roslindale, Mass., has been suffering from an attack of ptomaine poisoning.

A. C. Ruzicka, of late on the Iselin estate, Glen Head, N. Y., has now taken charge of the rose growing establishment of Nason & Sons, Murray Hill, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Meehan, of East Gorgas Lane, Mt. Airy, announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosa Denham Meehan, to Harold Aubrey Tyson of Germantown, Pa.

Edw'd Davies, recently superintendent for Paul Moore, Convent Sta., N. J., will now take charge of the W. H. Wellington estate, Wayland, Mass. A new range of conservatories is being erected here by the Pierson U-Bar Co.

W. E. Chappell, the genial secretary of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island is off on a water trip to Jacksonville, Fla., a vacation much needed as his health has been badly impaired since his nervous breakdown last spring.

Mr. Alex. Forbes, president of J. F. Noll & Co., Newark, N. J., who was operated on for appendicitis in the Orange Memorial Hospital, Orange, N. J., was able to leave that institution on the 10th inst., and is now recuperating at home.

We read in our English exchanges of the dangerous illness of William Wells, Sr., of Merstham, Surrey. A serious operation was performed on June 23, the result of which looked very dubious for a time, but latest reports are more encouraging and it is hoped that his robust constitution will pull him through safely.

John Garlate, for 18 years in the employ of Samuel Smith, a florist at Jamestown, R. I., learned a few days ago he had become wealthy through the recent death of an uncle in Brazil, who left his entire fortune, estimated at $400,000, to Garlate. The estate includes coffee plantations and vast land holdings. Mr. Garlate, who is 40 years old, came to this country 18 years ago.

We are delighted to learn through the columns of our California contemporary that Edwin Lonsdale is not being forgotten by the craft in his days of tedious illness. The Pacific Garden says:

Those who have gone through a similar experience know that to be remembered at such times by friends is a benediction.

If within reach of the institution, take him a bouquet, or a choice potted plant, and present it with a friendly greeting. The kindly act will bring sunshine to his soul, and a blessing on the head of the giver.

A bouquet to the living is worth more than a carload of flowers to the dead. A word of cheer in the ear yet sensitive to sound is worth more to the heart of the hearer than the most eloquent eulogy ever proclaimed is to one whose ear is sealed against sound by the reaper whose name is Death.

Yes, visit Lonsdale and let him know that you appreciate his services to the horticultural world.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsFLORISTS AS ADVERTISERS AND BOOK-KEEPERS.

(An address by R. C. Kerr, before the Texas State Florists' Association.)

I want to say before I begin my paper proper, that this is a friendly criticism, and the gun shoots as far back toward me as it goes forward toward you; and I want to give you the benefit of the lesson that I received. I suppose there are no two features of our business that are more neglected than those pertaining to advertising and book-keeping. There is no line of business that needs a thorough system of book-keeping, and judicious advertising, more than the florist business.

How many florists in Texas today know whether or not their greenhouse is a paying proposition, if they are not keeping accurate records? While visiting over the state the past year, I was amazed at the great amount of wasted room in the greenhouses of Texas. Are your greenhouses producing 50c. per square foot each year? If not, then they are a losing proposition. All over and above this amount is profit. On the average cost of labor, stock and fuel, the above figure is a fair estimate by an authority. How are we to know whether or not we get these results unless a system of book-keeping is used to show what is produced?

The reason this subject is so vitally interesting to me at this particular time is that about six months ago we had an auditor complete a new set of books—and I want to tell you we have had some eye-openers. I am frank to say that our greenhouses up to that time had never made us one dollar. We are now culling out the stock that is unprofitable and adding more stock that has showed profit.

This is not so with our greenhouses alone, as we have had many leaks in our store. The auditor opened up a complete set of books for the store, that shows what each department is doing; for instance—funeral work, plants, decorating, miscellaneous, etc. We have found out what is the average cost of each delivery; the percentage of the cost of advertising, and other things of this nature that there was no way of getting at before. It is positively staggering on investigation, to find the great losses we have been suffering and to think that we did business in such a reckless manner. There is no other business that can be conducted so badly as the way some of us conduct the florist business, and have it last a year's time.

Another matter I want to touch upon, is that of our credit. Many of the florists are very careless with their credits. Did you ever figure what you can save in one year's time, by discounting your bills? If not, do so, and you will find it will run into a nice sum. Then, too, you can face the world with a smile, and say you owe no one.

I had a very prominent florist from Central Texas tell me he owed no one except his banker. The florist is what I call a good business man. The florists of Texas today are in better condition financially than those in some other sections—so let us strive to "Clean the Sheets," pay all our obligations, even though we have to go to our banker to do it. Tell the world the florists of Texas owe no one; we have the real cash now, give us the goods.

Now just a few words on advertising. For the past three years this has been my hobby, and we have increased our business wonderfully by consistent advertising. I want to say that advertising can make you or it can break you. It is something you will have to study very closely. In newspaper advertising, ten per cent of the people who read the paper buy flowers—ten per cent of the flower buyers read "Your Ad," and ten per cent of those who see your ad. are ready to buy flowers. You pay for 100 per cent of the circulation and get results from one-tenth of one per cent. This may be slightly over-drawn, but it is a safe figure. My point is this—your medium must reach the flower buying people. With the coming of the moving picture shows, there opened up another good avenue for advertising. But this must be only in the best theatres; and the same rules that apply to the newspapers apply to the moving picture shows. Don't pay for dead circulation. Your advertising campaign should be laid out a year ahead and followed out to the letter in order to get results.

Now, just a word about direct advertising. Frankly, I believe more study should be given to direct advertising. as I feel we get more good out of this medium than any other. The most essential thing is a good mailing list. Letters or literature should be well prepared and well written; not too much to say and to the point. I believe personal letters to the customer interest the customer more than stock folders. They feel there is something of a personal nature in the letter, and will read it through. Perhaps the best advertisement after all is a satisfied customer.

When you spend your money for advertising, and get the customer to your store, by all means have him go away PLEASED. Let your motto be—"Satisfaction Must be Yours."

The West Side store of Schiller, the florist, had a narrow escape from destruction last week. At 7.30 P. The money loss amounted to only $25.

George Rozakles, who has a retail store at 17 Madison St., left on the 13th for his old home in Sparta, Greece. He came to this country when only a boy and is very proud of his naturalization papers which show that he has been an American citizen for 21 years. He will be gone for three months and his daughter will have charge of the store during his absence.

Why not a prize for the best hints on "How to lengthen the flower season"? The florists' dull season has gradually become longer, till now it includes one-half of June and all of October or until automobiling season is over. For over four months the trade now depends upon funeral work. Is there not some way to induce flower lovers to buy flowers in summer.

At Zech & Mann's, the stock of carnations is remarkable for the substance of its flowers and the stiffness of the stems. Almost as good as the winter cuts are the July offerings and they have a justifiable pride in the fact that not a complaint has come from long distance shipments to Winnipeg and other points this season. Some Mrs. Ward carnations were seen that in every respect would be considered good in cold weather.

In a trip through Frank Oechslin's plant growing establishment, a bed of 5,000 poinsettia cuttings are just ready to be taken from the sand. The man in charge said that not more than 25 out of the bed had failed to root. The benches that had held bedding stock are now all filled with Bostons, Whitmani and other ferns. A large stock of cyclamen are making an especially good showing. The heat of mid-day is tempered by the use of adjustable cloth shades in the cyclamen houses. Mr. and Mrs. Oechslin are now at the Panama Exposition.

It speaks well for the men in the trade that so many are thinking of taking a course of study in salesmanship. The two speakers on this subject, who have recently addressed the Chicago Florists' Club, have been men of convincing power, and their arguments and illustrations are common talk in the downtown stores during the quiet times of the day. The florists' business, more than many others, needs study, for anyone, even a few years in the trade, can see the change in conditions which must be met.

P. J. Foley returned July 12 from a ten days' trip through the south west, in which he "participated" in the Texas State Florists' Association meeting at Fort Worth. As the captain of the visitors' baseball team he distinguished himself and did credit to his home city. Mr. Foley had on exhibition at Fort Worth a section of a model greenhouse and samples of the various castings used in his method of construction. He reports the florists of the Lone Star State as very much awake to the opportunities of their state.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burton were on an automobile trip through Long Island for about a week. Hempstead and Garden City are among the bright spots in the reminiscences.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. have completed their planting in front of Convention Hall, Broad and Lehigh. Cannas, pennisetum, and double petunias are dominant features of the lay out. The Giant Phoenix canariensis has also been used with good effect.

The Colflesh boys have bought a piece of property at "The Hook" near Ridley Park. The supposition is that they intend to build there in the near future. Their present location is at 53rd and Woodland avenue, where property has become too valuable to be used for greenhouse purposes.

The Philadelphia-Frisco Line has been established and their first steamer will sail from this port July 26th. She is the "Walter D. Noyes" 7000 tons and will take the Panama route. O. G. Hempstead & Sons are the agents. This will be a convenience and a saving for shippers from this point and no doubt the line will also carry passengers.

The Kelly St. Business Men's Association will make an auto pilgrimage on the 19th inst. Among other places to be visited are the Shallcross Asparagus Farm near Bustleton; the Burton greenhouses at Chestnut Hill; and the Dwyer residence at Overbrook. A dinner will be given at Dooner's on the same evening at 7 p. m., with Judge Campbell as host.

We had a pleasant visit from Mr. Farquhar, of Boston, and his nursery manager this week. A visit to Commodore John Westcott, to the Andorra Nurseries, and a joy ride through the park, were features of the occasion.

"The rich man has his motor car.

His country and his town estate.

He smokes a fifty-cent cigar

And jeers at fate.

But 'though my lamp burns low and dim.

'Though I must toil for livelihood, Think you that I would change with him?

You bet I would."

CLEVELAND.

W. A. Manda of So. Orange, N. J., who was in the city a few days ago is very much interested in the coming big Cleveland Flower Show and according to the statements he made, the entire East is watching the progress our show committees are making. "They are all waiting for the final premium list" was his significant comment.

All retailers report a general slowing up of business, as compared with the past few weeks. Smith & Fettes were the exception, because they had the one big wedding of the week. This wedding received much notice in the local papers by the fact that the groom composed his own wedding march. The father of the bride is one of the suburban street cars magnates of Cleveland.

The annual picnic of the Cleveland Florists' Club is to be held Friday, July 23rd at Willoughbeach Park. This park is twenty miles east of the city on the banks of Lake Erie. The men in charge of the picnic are to meet this week and it is announced that a splendid program is to be prepared with plenty of interesting prizes for the athletic events. A complete announcement will be made next week.

F. J. Schoen, manager of the Jas. Eadie Co. store is receiving congratulations on his Fourth of July window. It was a very large wire globe representing the World. In it were two white pigeons symbolizing peace with little American flags and red, white and blue ribbons entwined around the globe. When Mr. Schoen was ready to take out the window he discovered that Mrs. Dove of Peace was contentedly setting on some eggs and refused to be disturbed. "You can look for additions to the 'peace party' before very long," says Mr. Schoen.

The premiums committee of the Cleveland Flower Show, composed of Herbert Bate, Frank A. Friedley, and J. Curnow of Akron, have made an announcement that will interest the assistants in every greenhouse. They have decided to give a special prize of $5.00 in every important class and sweepstakes all the way through their final list which will be ready to mail September 1st. There will be at least fifty of these special prizes all of which will go to the section man in charge of the bench on which prize winners were grown and from which they were picked. This incentive for the men with the hose will mean more first prizes for his employer, if his efforts are successful, and it will mean $5.00 for the assistant, in addition to the big prize.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was postponed from the first Saturday in the month to the 10th, as several members were spending the holiday week-end out of town.

The local trade has been advised by the American Express Co., which a short time ago inaugurated refrigerator car service between San Francisco and Chicago, to be maintained semi-weekly, the car leaving San Francisco, Wednesday and Saturday, that it has found it expedient to have these refrigerator cars run through to New York City and the service is being maintained accordingly. While some local concerns are already making use of this service to good advantage, the greatest benefit will probably be derived this fall in getting violets to the eastern markets.

The program for the entertainment of visiting ladies at the coming convention of the Society of American Florists is well in hand by the local Ladies' Auxiliary, organized recently, and it is expected practically all of the important details will be decided upon at a meeting next week to be held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Axell, wife of Manager Axell of the E. W. McLellan Co.

There is a movement among local florists toward getting their shops in excellent shape for the convention. This week Joseph's on Grant avenue is receiving a coat of fresh paint, and the Francis Floral Co. expects to renovate its establishment on Powell and Sutter streets before the end of the month.

NEW YORK.

Kervan & Co., dealers in florists' greens supplies, have leased the property at 115 West 28th street, for ten years and will spend about $15,000 in altering the building to suit their needs. They will continue their establishment at 119 West 28th street.

The twentieth anniversary of the appropriation by the City of New York of 250 acres of land in Bronx Park for the use of the New York Botanical Garden will be commemorated at the Garden during the week commencing September 6, 1915. Botanists from all parts of North America are invited to attend. A very elaborate program is planned, including addresses, reading of papers, inspection of the grounds and buildings, with lunch at the Garden each day from Monday till Thursday. On Friday, Sept. 10, there will be a visit to the pine barrens of New Jersey and on Saturday there will be a trip to Long Island, including the Brooklyn Botanic Garden.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

William Marche is spending considerable time during the summer at Melrose Gardens, formerly the estate of Senator Elliott, purchased by him some time ago. The gardens cover four acres and are surrounded by magnificent trees. The property is improved by an attractive eighteen-room mansion. This is one of the show places of Hyattsville, Md., in which town it is located.

George C. Shaffer and family will spend their vacation at Atlantic City, N. J., leaving here the latter part of the month.

STORM DAMAGE IN CINCINNATI.

The severe storm last Wednesday did considerable damage to some of the greenhouse places around town in Price Hill and Ft. Thomas, Ky. In the latter place Ed. Fries suffered a loss of five houses while Henry Goebel lost two. Chas. Pfeiffer's Sons, Lou. Pfeiffer's Sons and Wm. Speck in Newport also suffered some damage. In Price Hill the storm demolished five houses for Mrs. Chas. Witterstaetter, three for Wm. Taylor, one for Herbert Greensmith, one for Frank Kramer, and blew in the west end of the Deller and Witterstaetter range. All suffered some damage or other to their dwellings, barns, boiler houses and outdoor crops.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Chatham, N. J.—Samuel Lum was declared bankrupt on June 29 in the United States District Court and his case was referred to Referee Atwood L. DeCoster for administration. According to Corra N. Williams, who represents the petitioning creditors, Lum owes his creditors about $50,000. His assets include the equity in his greenhouses and a vacant piece of property in Main street, Chatham. The bankrupt has been a resident of Chatham for twenty years and for the major part of that time he was reputed wealthy. He kept no books in his business, according to Mr. Williams, and his true financial status has not yet been determined.

NEWS NOTES.

Andover, Mass.—Walter Holden has gone out of business.

Flower Market Reports

Summer quietude still BOSTON rules. "Nothing doing" in either wholesale or retail circles although there are faint zephyrs which promise to work up into a good blow shortly. It is full time that the shore resorts should be heard from and we hope to have a more interesting report to send out next week. The glut of carnations has been of unusual volume up to the present time but they are beginning to shorten up now and values which have been too absurd to quote will quickly rebound to a reasonable figure. Roses continue good, but saleable in quantity only at prices too low for the quality. Gladioli are quite a feature of the market now being extremely plentiful, and some of them are of splendid quality. Pink Beauty is really the aristocrat of the gladiolus field at present and sells at a substantial advance over the price obtainable for other sorts. Sweet peas are not very good as a rule, owing to the unfavorable weather but the finer varieties are in evidence in most of the cuts. Lilies are very cheap.

The past week has BUFFALO been a very quiet one, and the cut flower sales are not very flourishing, the surplus being carried along from day to day. Roses are still good. Some excellent Shawyer, Maryland, Double White Killarney, Taft, Sunburst and Mock are had although there is too much of the ordinary mildewed quality. A good lot of carnations are still in sight but with prices very uneven. Beauties have no sale and lilies are still plentiful. Gladioli are coming in more plentiful each day, the southern stock shipping very unsatisfactorily. Outdoor peas, candytuft, sweet william and other stock has had only very small demand.

Never did a better quality of summer flowers come into this market CHICAGO than is coming now. Customers have every inducement to buy, for the assortment is large and every concession is made to please and prices are very low. Each day brings a new cut, heavier than the demand calls for, while leftover stock remains on the counters and in the ice boxes. How to move it to advantage is a question no one can answer. Peonies are still in storage and daily sales are too slow to warrant the taking out of many at a time. Gladioli are selling very poorly this summer, though the stock offered is extra fine. Carnations are near the top in quality and near the lowest notch in price. Occasional bunches are received in a sleepy condition, but the great bulk of them are firm and of good color. All kinds of roses are offered in large quantities, Mrs. Russell still holding the lead in price. The sensational prices, this week, 8 cents per doz., at which roses are offered at the big department stores, is cutting heavily into the regular sales of florists.

SUMMER ROSES

Both Russell and Mock are holding up well, two of our very best hot weather roses. In quantity with us at $5.00 to $10.00 per 100, with some long special Russell at $12.00 per 100.

Plenty of good stock CINCINNATI that would have been welcome in other years is coming into the market, but the business is so slow that only a part of it sells. Locally at the time of this writing there is little business. Shipping business holds up fairly well. The rose supply is good and generally able to more than take care of present needs. The market is glutted with lilies and gladioli, neither of them is finding the sale they should find for this time of the year. Asters are plentiful and up to this time meet with no especially strong demand. It is not easy to find NEW YORK anything to say that is worth saying concerning the wholesale flower trade as it exists at present. It is, indeed, a very feeble existence and there is no movement worth chronicling. Generally speaking the supply is lessening from day to day, but the average quality of material coming in is unusually good for this date. The outing of the Florists' Club and the excursion to the Sweet Pea Show at Newport, have interjected a little variety into the monotony of the listless days this week. Preparations for San Francisco will next ensue and in the meantime let us hope that the market will wake up once more. The week after PHILADELPHIA the Fourth turned out, as was to be expected, pretty slow. Business was at a very low ebb and much more stock came in than there was any use for. This was particularly true of low-grade material, which covered 85 per cent. of the arrivals. In roses, the market was well stocked with American Beauty, which was of good quality and went fairly well. After it the best sellers were Russell, Jonkheer and Double White Killarney. There are a few good cuts of carnations still coming, but most of these are poor and buyers seem to prefer good asters instead. The asters are better than usual for so early, the copious rains having been very favorable to their development. Gladioli are fine but redundant, far more than the market can absorb. Centaurea imperialis continues abundant and of fine quality; C. cyanus also. Plenty of other outdoor stock: hydrangea, coreopsis, gaillardia, phlox, feverfew, (Continued on page 82) candytuft, achillea, etc. The market for greens such as asparagus and smilax is at low ebb. There is far too much of it for the demand.

Trade dropped

SAN FRANCISCO off somewhat during the Fourth of July holidays, particularly in the more refined work for fancy bouquets, on account of the many city residents spending the week-end out of town or at the Exposition, and business continued quiet most of the week. All flowers arrived in abundance making it very difficult to clean up supplies. A large over-supply of carnations was the most notable feature, and the consequent low prices had a demoralizing effect upon other staple lines. Much of the surplus was taken by street vendors at extremely low prices which enabled them to make such attractive offers that it undoubtedly took considerable business from the florists. However, this situation will not last much longer as growers are beginning to pull up some of their carnation plants and the supply will shortly be much curtailed. Sweet peas are plentiful and cheap. The offerings of gladioli show better average quality, and the really fine stock demands high prices. Some extra fine specimens of Geisha dahlias are coming in from Marin County, but the supply is limited and Delice continues as the principal feature in the dahlia market, the latter variety being offered in ample quantity and of fine quality as well. There are plenty of hydrangeas, both cut and potted, but their movement is rather slow, owing to the surplus of cheaper flowers. Shasta daisies figure largely in the daily offerings. Asters have not appeared as yet. In roses there is plenty of good stock. Long-stemmed American Beauties clean up readily. Killarney shows the effect of the hot weather more than some of the other varieties and is less popular. Russell, Ophelia and Irish Elegance are offered freely, but Cecile Brunner is a little less plentiful. Hanging baskets for porches have sold well.

The wholesale market

ST. LOUIS is in a most deplorable condition. All the wholesale commission men are crowded up with all kinds of seasonable stock and the demand is so little that not half of the daily shipments can be disposed of. Correct price quotations are not possible. Great quantities of roses and carnations are coming in, of which only the first grades bring anything like a price and many in the other grades go for almost nothing. The many thousands of gladioli spikes that come from Kirkwood each morning find hard sailing these dull days. Asters sell better than any other flowers now.

There seems to be

WASHINGTON no let up at all in the amount of stock that is coming into the local market. This is particularly true of roses. Demand is limited to the requirements of a small amount of funeral work which comes spasmodically here and there, and if some of the shippers get even a small fraction of that which they expect in the way of returns they will be doing exceedingly well. Washington is more of a winter resort and the summer business cannot very well be boosted as was evidenced by the results obtained from several sales during the past few days whereby the advertisers failed to do enough business to pay for the space they used in the daily papers. The carnation season is pretty nearly over. There are some few coming from the north, but these reach here in very poor condition and it is a waste of time and money to fool with them. This is an unusual season with respect to dahlias, for owing to the cool weather these flowers were blooming in June, something never before known even to the oldest inhabitants, and they are now very plentiful. They are meeting with a fair sale, replacing to a large extent many of the other flowers which have been on the market throughout the year. Some exceptionally fine American gladioli are to be had but on account of the immense quantities flooding the market and the lack of a heavy demand the price is exceptionally low. Gardenias are still excellent. There is but a limited sale on orchids and American Beauty roses move slowly. All high priced stock is tabooed.

DURING RECESS.

New York Florists' Club Outing.

The Fifteenth Annual Outing of the New York Florists' Club was enjoyed by about 250 of the members and their families and friends, on Wednesday, July 14, at Witzel's Point View Grove, College Point. It was a very pleasant affair, with fine weather conditions and altogether a great improvement over last year's trip to Glen Island. There were no accidents or untoward incidents to mar the perfect enjoyment of the occasion by all who participated. The attendance would undoubtedly have been larger had it not been for the pilgrimage to Newport, R. I., by many of the more active members of the club. The program of sports was well carried out and the prizes for the different athletic events were numerously competed for.

HORTICULTURE INDISPENSABLE

The following examples of many approving letters received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the past few weeks, show why HORTICULTURE is so valuable as an advertising medium. Intensive circulation is HORTICULTURE'S best quality and practically every reader is a possible customer for the advertiser.

Gentlemen:—Last week's HORTICULTURE is not received. Have you scratched me off your list, or what is the matter? Appreciate your paper more than any of half a dozen I am receiving, and don't want to miss any copies. Will you please investigate?

Yours truly,
Missouri. A. B. K.

Gentlemen:—It is getting late in the season and we wish to discontinue the advertisements which we carry in your paper. We would say that the advertisements which we have carried in your paper have brought us good results, and we feel that the money so expended was well invested.

Yours truly,

S. C. LORD, President.

Kindly discontinue my advertisement in the classified ad. section of HORTICULTURE, rendering bill to date.

Yours is a very good advertising medium. We have rid ourselves of practically all our surplus stock, and are therefore obliged to discontinue.

Very truly yours,

One of the many good features of HORTICULTURE is, that those who contribute to its columns always "say something" when they write. I take this opportunity to offer sincere congratulations. "May your shadow never grow less."

Sincerely yours,
New York. P. F.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

A PEST CONQUERED.

It has been demonstrated at the Arnold Arboretum that the abominable pest known as the lace fly, which has defaced and done so much injury to the rhododendrons within the past few years, can be successfully combated with a few sprays of Imp soap solution on the underside of the foliage. This insect first made its appearance on Rhododendron maximum, but soon spread its depredations to the hybrids and the Kalmias and has been known to attack hawthorns and other shrubs growing in association with the rhododendrons. Whale oil soap has been used, but Imp soap is said to be better.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

John Lambert.

John Lambert, the well known east end florist, passed away on July 6 at his home, 72 Jepson street, Fall River, Mass., following an illness of 11 weeks' duration. Deceased was 61 years old and was born in Ashton-under-Lynn, England. He came to this country about 30 years ago and for a time worked at the Oak Grove cemetery. For the past fifteen years, however, he had been engaged successfully in the florist trade and was very well known and highly regarded in the eastern section where he had resided ever since coming to Fall River. Besides a widow, there are left to mourn his loss, two sons and two daughters.

The specifications for the gable of John Stephenson & Son's house, at York Road, Philadelphia, Pa., described every detail. He got just what was described. They are satisfied customers. Ask them and see.

Take Nothing for Granted; Read the Specifications; See if it is There

BASED on the specifications; greenhouse builders make their estimates.

Things not in the specifications are not estimated in the estimate.

If the specifications reads that the angle iron purlins will be of suitable strength to support the bars and stiffen the frame—how can you tell what you are getting?

What size does "suitable strength" mean?

When you turn to our specification and read that the purlins will be high quality tough steel angles $1\frac{1}{2} \times 2$ inches; you know exactly what you are going to get.

And you get it; if you get our house.

Over and over again we have sold our houses, by sitting down with a man and comparing specifications point by point. He has proved to himself, that altho our house might cost more he was getting a lot more for what it cost.

To buy a house based on price only, is a pretty risky piece of business.

Take nothing for granted.

Read the specifications.

Compare them point by point.

Find out beyond a doubt, that all you think you are going to get you are really going to get.

We believe this is the only safe way to buy a greenhouse.

When you are ready to build, we are ready to submit full detailed specifications.

If there are any things not covered to your entire satisfaction, we will see that they are covered.

If ready to talk things over—say when and where and we'll be there.

PRINCESS, 20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 30c; 1000 Seeds 35c; 1/4 oz. $1.00; 1/2 oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.
40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.
42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.
44—Black—Almost coal black.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

- 22 KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3 1/2 to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, and many others. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
- 26 KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long.
- 28 MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance.
- 30 GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous.
- 32 GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy Mixture.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."

Bulb Compost

With the pressure of other duties there is a likelihood of the compost heaps being somewhat neglected in that they are allowed to become overgrown with rank weeds, which will soon eat away much of their richness. Keep the compost pile clean and you will find it to be money well invested. It will be some time before the French or Dutch bulbs arrive but it is better to prepare a pile of compost for them now rather than when they are on the place. It is much better to leave out bone and all chemical fertilizers. These are more likely to be harmful than helpful. If you stacked up a pile of sod and cow manure last fall chop this down and throw it in a heap. Bulbs like a light and rather rich soil. One-third of the whole should be decayed manure. If you have any spent hotbed manure or such as has been used in the make-up of a mushroom bed either of these is excellent for bulbs. A few shovels of soot and some sharp sand should also be added. Turn the pile over twice or thrice to thoroughly mix it.

Eucharis amazonica

Where you mean to start growing Eucharis amazonica now is a good time to begin. Plants that were started last winter and are now in 4 or 5-inch pots are the best. A perfectly sound bench should be chosen, as a bench of eucharis is good for years, the plants becoming more and more floriferous as they get crowded in the course of time. You can also use old clumps that have been divided up. The divided plants will take about a year to get established, and will not flower until then. Give them a good sod soil with about one-third of well decomposed cow manure. They can be planted as close as 5 or 6 inches apart. When established plants have made a good growth for about two months grant them a rest by shortening up on the supply of water for about four to six weeks, but not so severe as to show any bad effects on the foliage. By this process flowers will form instead of leaves. After this rest apply abundance of water. A temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at all times is needed.

Gardenias

Gardenias should now be advancing well in growth. These plants will want all the air possible now, so on all favorable opportunities give them ventilation without allowing drafts to strike them. Gardenias that were benched early in June will now be very active and must have every encouragement to promote a quick and sturdy growth. Give a good syringing in the morning and right after dinner-time. Examine the plants two or three times a day so none of them will remain dry, or, on the other hand, saturated for any length of time, both conditions being very detrimental. Give them a dusting of very fine bone, first over the surface and then a light mulch of well rotted cow manure. Dampening down will now be necessary two or three times a day. Give them fumigations about every ten days.

Orchids

All cattleyas that have completed their growth should be placed at the coolest end of the house or where they can be given a fair amount of air. The quantity of water should be lessened until only enough is given to keep the plants from shrivelling. Cattleyas that are in active growth will require an abundance of water at the roots with a light syringing overhead two or three times a day. Damp the floors and benches well twice a day so as to create a humid atmosphere. All other orchids of the many species that will now be finishing up their growth should be removed to a cooler house that is very lightly shaded so as to prevent a second growth. Later you can give them more airy, cool, dry and sunny quarters which will induce them to ripen up their growth. Very little water will be needed at the roots during this rest, but give a gentle syringing over the plants on bright days which will help to keep the growths in good condition.

Poinsettias

We shall now be propagating poinsettias about as fast as we can get the young growth. Never let them wilt for want of water or from sunshine. Keep the sand saturated and guard against sun and draughts and ninety-five per cent. will root. Cuttings of poinsettias can be inserted until the middle of August and the late ones while they will not make large bracts are really preferable for making up into pans owing to their dwarfness. If the sand is sharp so that water passes away freely there should be little trouble from damping off. In putting in cuttings during this hot weather trim the leaves off quite close and let the cuttings lie in a pail of water half an hour to help plump them up. Be sure to examine the cuttings frequently and just as soon as they have made roots an inch long pot them. If left longer the roots will be broken, the cuttings will soon harden and never make as satisfactory plants as if potted more promptly. Any compost suitable for carnations or chrysanthemums will grow first-class poinsettias. Plants in pots should not receive any shade when once they have become established in their first pot.

Starting Hollyhocks

Now is the time to make a sowing of hollyhocks. The seed can be either sown out of doors or in a cold frame. The cold frame will prove to be the best. Here they can be watered and shaded and given general care. When large enough they can be planted out into other frames and kept there until next spring when they can be set out in the open.

service rendered by the express people has been much improved. The arrogance of monopoly has largely disappeared as a consequence of the competition established by the people after a long and hard-fought struggle. The lesson seems to have been a good one, for extravagance and oppression have both been largely eliminated and it would seem that the express companies are really making an effort to serve the public and give satisfaction to their patrons. Thus not only the people but the express companies themselves are substantial gainers in the end.

W. H. Wyman's acknowledgment of the usefulness of the various moths, scales and other pestiferous enemies of the nurseryman's stock as effective agencies in promoting general cleanliness is unquestionably in keeping with the facts. New England has suffered from the inroads of these insects and the restrictive legislation brought about by them to a greater degree than any other section of this country. The result is an unremitting watchful care over every foot of nursery ground. Neglected corners under existing conditions would be simply suicidal and so it has come to pass that the nurseries of New England are models of cleanliness excelled by none in the world.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity,
 Which like the toad, ugly and venomous,
 Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;
 And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
 Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks, Sermons in stones, and good in everything."

The plans of the Cleveland florists for their big flower show three months hence, seem to be maturing on advanced lines and with a prospect that some new light will be thrown on the old problem of how to enlist the interest and co-operation of the retail florists in a public flower show and to profit by their experience and ability in making the show a success from a decorative and artistic standpoint. The prospectus for the gladiolus show at Atlantic City next month which we publish this week gives evidence that in this enterprise, also, the decorative possibilities of that flower are not to be neglected. All of which is very encouraging and practical evidence that the gospel which HORTICULTURE has been so zealously preaching for years has not been preached in vain. Long standing custom and deep rooted indifference are not overcome in a day and plenty of patience and persistence will still be needed before our exhibitions shall properly fill their place as advanced exponents of the uses of flowers. The reluctance of the retail trade, generally, to enter as competitors where prizes are offered for floral decorative work, was sharply in evidence at the Newport sweet pea show last week, where, in five classes for such work, only two florists competed. The floral exhibition should be in the vanguard of floral progress. There the newest and best in floral art should make its debut always. Plant and flower growers stand in the way of their own best interests when they fail to insist that in the planning for all exhibitions of their products, adequate provision shall be made in the schedule for demonstration of the many happy ways in which flowers may be used and enjoyed.

service improved

It is said that by effecting economies in management the nine principal express companies have been able to wipe out the deficit which the parcels post caused. We might also add—and we believe the flower shippers will agree—that the

Tying

The earlier planted houses will now need tying, especially the teas, as these should not be allowed to lie around too long. With Beauties we like to let them lie as long as is possible without doing them harm. If they are tied up right after they are planted, they will not break at the bottom so well. This, of course, must not be carried too far, and as soon as it becomes hard to keep them clean of spider, they should be tied up at once. In tying the Beauties to wires, make sure that the breaks are well distributed. Also figure so that when the mother shoot grows up, and bears a bud, it can be cut right down to the bottom, providing the plant has sufficient breaks to get along without it. We find that it pays to do this, as the original shoot seldom bears any flowers to speak of, and if so they are short and of inferior quality. With teas it is different, and these we tie to stakes almost exclusively, preferring this method to the wires. With stakes the teas can be tied much better, and being better tied can easily be kept clean of spider. It is also much easier to get between them to mulch, to clean, to tie or to do anything at all. It is better to keep them low too, as the sap has that much less hard wood to go through, and the flowers are better and more of them. Beauties should never be tied to stakes, even in conservatories on private estates. The wires will look fully as good and better, and the plants will not be so likely to get red spider or spot, and do better all the way around.

Manure

It is very important that the manure to be used for mulching early in the fall be bought now, so that it can be heaped and turned over a few times to bring it into shape for mulching. If this is not done, the manure is likely to be too green, and that is bad for the plants, especially in the fall. In the spring it can be used without so much danger, as if it should take off some leaves, the damage would not be felt, but in the fall it would nearly ruin the plants. In heaping the manure, if no concrete platform is on the place and no provision made to take care of the leaching, pile up about six or twelve inches of sod and then heap the manure on top of this. This sod will take care of all the liquid that may leach out of the pile, and later the sod can be used as mulch or for some other suitable purpose. Most large places have their own dairies, and all that is usually needed is better facilities for handling the manure. However, growers are waking up to the fact that it is poor economy to have the manure pile near a brook or something and have the liquid go to waste. And it is not only waste; in most states it would be a violation of the law, as the liquids from manure would pollute the water. Each stable should be equipped with a covered concrete platform to take care of the manure, and this should drain into a water-tight concrete or brick cesspool out of which the liquid manure can be pumped either back on the pile or into the houses, to be used. With the low cost of concrete, and the fact that the cistern and platform can be built by the men on the place, makes us believe that the manure saved in one year after the system is put in would nearly pay for it. Manure is a hard thing to get if it is necessary to buy it, and growers who are fortunate to have a good supply of their own should surely take care of it. Business nowadays demands saving in every possible way, and the greatest loss the florist usually has is the loose way in which manure is handled.

Coal

Right now is a good time to stock up with coal. We find that we can get better prices now than later. The difference is not so great, yet there is a saving. We know several places that are looked upon as prosperous where the cellars are already stocked with the coal for the winter. With bad business, it may not always be possible to lay out the cash so far in advance but where it can be done it has a great many advantages.

The Boilers

Fires will be out on most places by this time, as the weather we have recently had does not call for heat, but for ice. Therefore as soon as a chance can be had, see that the boilers are cleaned, and oiled a little. Any cheap oil will do, and it will save the boilers a good deal. The boiler itself never suffers much all the while it is in use, but left to stand dirty in a damp cellar, it rusts very rapidly, and wears more in one summer than in three winters of firing. Clean out all soot as much as possible and put the oil on with a syringe. The outside of the boiler does not matter so much, as this is not so likely to suffer. While the work is being done it is well to see that everything is all right for the coming season, and should there be any grates or other parts of the boilers needed, order them at once so as to have them on hand. Later when they are ordered in a hurry they generally are a long time coming, and then when they do come they are generally parts from a boiler too small or will not fit, and the delay may mean a dose of mildew or other trouble.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY

The seventh annual meeting of this society was held at Newport, R. I., on Thursday afternoon, July 15. In the absence of President C. C. Morse and Vice-President A. M. Kirby, William Sim was asked to preside. Addresses of welcome to the society were made by President William MacKay on behalf of the Newport Horticultural Society and Mr. Sheffield for the Newport Garden Association. President Morse's address was read as it appeared in our issue of July 17. Secretary Bunyard made a general report of progress for the year, and the report of the treasurer was favorable. Prof. A. C. Beal made a detailed report on the Trial Grounds at Cornell University. J. Harrison Dick gave a valuable lecture on the Sweet Pea, its history, literature, diseases and culture and its future possibilities, and Geo. W. Kerr gave a talk on Sweet Peas for Amateurs.

Officers were elected as follows: President, William Gray, Newport, R. I.; vice-president, George W. Kerr, Doylestown, Pa.; secretary, H. A. Bunyard; treasurer, A. T. Boddington; recording secretary, J. H. Pepper; executive committee member, W. Atlee Burpee. Bar Harbor, Me., was selected as the next meeting place.

Response of President-Elect Gray.

It is with a deep sense of the honor you have conferred upon me, and of responsibility as well, that I accept the office of President of the American Sweet Pea Society.

While our exhibitions are growing more successful from a horticultural standpoint, I am sorry the financial end does not look so bright and I strongly appeal to the florist, gardener and amateur to help the good work along by becoming members of the American Sweet Pea Society. The gardener is the one to get the amateur interested by giving freely of his advice in regard to methods of growing, etc. In every community the gardener can take at least one amateur under his guidance and help arouse the amateur spirit which is so latent on this side of the Atlantic. This is right in line with the work of horticultural societies—the promotion of horticulture. Some of our seed firms do not realize the possibilities in this movement and should do all they can to help the good work along. With all pulling together the Society could be put on a basis where it would not be compelled to accept the invitation of other horticultural societies to enable it to hold exhibitions.

Our conventions in my mind should be made up of delegates from the different horticultural societies instructed by a vote of their respective societies, as to the best time and place to hold an exhibition. A place and date could thus be arrived at that would be satisfactory to the majority. I promise to do all I can to help the work along and I thank you for the honor that you have conferred upon me.

THE EXHIBITION.

The Seventh Annual Exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society, with the co-operation and support of the Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Association, was held at the Casino, Newport, R. I., on Thursday and Friday, July 15 and 16, and was nothing short of a triumph from the standpoint of quality, extent and completeness. The arrangement was all that was possible, considering the rather restricted quarters for an exhibition of such magnitude. In many of the classes there were numerous entries and the judges had no easy job on their hands. Standing out prominently in extent and splendor Burpee's big display was easily the crowning feature of the main hall. The stage was occupied by R. & J. Farquhar & Co., with a lavish display of blooms of Lilium myriophyllum (regale) in an effective setting of palms and other greenery, the whole making an effective foil for the sea of sparkling color that filled the hall.

The wide veranda which formed the entrance passageway to the main hall from the Casino grounds presented a wonderful sight, the equal of which has never been seen in any exhibition in this country, and those who have seen sweet pea shows abroad say it excelled even those. There were thirty large tubs of growing sweet peas, each specimen six to ten feet high and three to four feet through, loaded with bloom. These brought glory to the Newport growers whose chances in the cut flower classes were killed by unpropitious weather. In the cut flowers Ed. Jenkins from Lenox made a tremendous sweep, as will be seen by the list of awards which follows.

H. A. Dreer had a fascinating exhibit of nymphæas, arranged in a tank in the form of a horseshoe. This included several brilliant novelties. It was in charge of J. S. Hay. In their sweet pea display the variety Royal Purple was grand. W. A. Manda had an interesting and varied collection of new and rare stove and greenhouse plants which attracted much attention. Bobbink & Atkins had a stand of cut roses and hardy garden perennials.

On Thursday a party from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, 115 in number, under the guidance of Secretary W. N. Craig, visited the show and made the tour of some of the prominent estates. The trade visitors from New York and vicinity were quite numerous. Among the places inspected by the out-of-town people none attracted more attention and interest than the Mrs. H. D. Auchincloss estate where the rose garden, wild garden and rock garden under the care of Superintendent Mahan exemplify the highest attainments in their respective fields.

WILLIAM GRAY.

President-Elect of The American Sweet Pea Society

The gentleman whose portrait adorns our cover page this week stands very high in the gardening fraternity as an able exponent of the best cultural skill and the American Sweet Pea Society will have an efficient and earnest president for the coming year.

Mr. Gray has been superintendent of the estate of Mrs. William B. Leeds at Newport, R. I., for the past five years. He is a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, having been born on the Arbarthnot estate "Mavis Bank," on April 20, 1874, where his father was gardener at that time, the profession of gardening having been followed by father and sons through several generations. The family came to America in 1883 and settled in Middletown, N. Y., where the father secured the position of florist at the State Hospital. After leaving school Mr. Gray served apprenticeship under his father and followed this up with an experience as assistant gardener on several private places in the vicinity of New York and in Newport. He then became head gardener to Horace Russell at Southampton and after five years' service there assumed the position he now holds.

Essays.

In view of the many and varied attractions of the Convention and Convention City, the Executive Board decided that it would be unwise to take up the time of the convention with the reading of essays. Realizing, however, the value of the presentation of essays at the Society's conventions, the secretary was instructed to invite essays from various gentlemen willing to prepare them, such invitations and the number of them to be within his discretion, the essays to be furnished to the trade papers for publication during the convention period, and to be printed as part of the proceedings of the convention.

The following essays are presented: "Is it Advisable for the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists to Establish a National Credit and Collection Department?" by August F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.

"The Problems Attending the Establishment of Permanent Convention Gardens," by Theodore Wirth, Superintendent of Parks, Minneapolis, Minn.

"The Necessity of National Publicity to Advance the Interests of Commercial Floriculture in the United States," by Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.

Fourth Day, Friday, August 20.

S. A. F. and O. H. Day at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

The Secretary's office will be near the main entrance of Halls H, I and J, east side, fourth floor, in the Civic Center Auditorium, where all members should report as soon as possible after their arrival in San Francisco. Members who have not paid their 1915 assessment can make payment at this office and receive the official badge button, but the work of the office will be greatly facilitated if members will make remittances to the secretary prior to the convention.

The address of the secretary from July 15 is care of Daniel MacRorie, 430 Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

At the monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society various matters of mutual interest were discussed, including preparations for the Fall Flower Show, the S. A. F. Convention, and a Fall Picnic. H. Plath announced that the prize list for the Fall Flower Show is much in demand, which shows that considerable interest is manifest in that event. On behalf of the program committee, Mr. Plath reported that the souvenir program is practically ready. A communication was read from the secretary of the Gardeners' Association, outlining plans for their convention. In regard to the Fall Picnic, the committee proposed to wait until September and recommended that it be held in Grand Canyon Park. A standing invitation was extended from Messrs. James, Plath and Fotheringham, present jury on garden exhibits at the Exposition, to hold field day at the gardens on Saturday afternoons while their work is in progress. Much interest was shown in the evening's exhibits. An exhibit of Mrs. Francis King gladiolus from F. Pelicano took 90 points; a showing of Primula obconica from H. Plath was rated at 90 points; and a large display of statice from J. Gill took 80 points.

TWO PICNICS.

The two group pictures on these pages were taken on the occasion of the New York Florists' Club and the Greek-American Florists' outings, respectively. Each of these events constitutes an annual red letter day in the summer memories of those who participate, especially the ladies and children for whose pleasure they are primarily intended. Pretty good looking bunch—both of them—are they not? A close inspection will no doubt convince our readers who have any eye for structural beauty that the an-

LANCASTER COUNTY FLORISTS' CLUB.

The third Thursday of each month we have the use of the Chamber of Commerce rooms but in spite of the fact that we pay rent we do not use them for July and August and instead have our picnic on the date of the July meeting and through the courtesy of our president a meeting and afternoon of sports at his farm, one of the many delightful places to spend a hot half day and evening, around this section of the world. It's a good scheme, try it out, Philadelphia, and you will have a big attendance to record for the summer.

Although our membership is limited in number we had at the July meeting (or picnic) in round numbers about 200 people, among them being T. J. Nolan representing the King Construction Co.; Mr. Koeplitz representing the Sefton Box Co.; J. D. Keohane representing the H. F. Michell Co.; S. S. Pennock and Mr. Price representing their company; from Coatsville, James Brown and wife; from Chester County E. C. Marshall and family, Percy Bernard and Mr. Ludwig, Wm. Swayne and wife and Mr. Ladley and wife.

Rocky Springs Park was the place and could be reached by trolley for a nickle, but from the number of autos in evidence the average florist scorns a trolley, and turns up his nose at anything so cheap as a nickle. The young-

The tug of war was won through the leadership of S. S. Pennock and the superior strength of T. J. Nolan for their side as the local men were not up to the wrinkles and seemed just a bit tired after the strenuous week the most of them had getting houses into shape and other little (?) jobs this hot weather. After a chicken dinner a general good time was had, those who wanted to danced, and those who did not dance enjoyed the evening crowd from the city.

All of this for a dollar. Can you beat it? Any club wanting to give a successful picnic for a little bit of money should get into communication with our committee. For a few hundred dollars they might be induced to take charge of your outing.

As we are busy getting ready for the

"THE NURSERY BUSINESS AS A BUSINESS PROPOSITION."

A Paper read before the American Association of Nurserymen, at Detroit, by Mr. W. H. Wyman.

No one who is in the nursery business today, or who has a fair knowledge of the history of the business, can doubt that it is a proposition. Comparatively few, out of the many who call themselves nurserymen, have attained a reasonable degree of success; while many more have a name to live, but in reality are leading a precarious existence; while still others have entirely fallen out and cast their wreckage upon the shoulders of too many with whom they have had to do. In this business, a few only succeed while the great majority come far short of success, if they do not utterly fail. It may be said that the same is true of every business.

Why Some Succeed.

With that proposition we are not lives up to his obligations, providing he has a fair amount of business sagacity, he can succeed. But if on the other hand he tries a short cut to success, forfeiting his word and disregarding his obligations, his doom is sealed. The picture is not overdrawn. A few succeed in the nursery business, while many fail. Why it is? Is it because of its peculiarities? Is it hedged about by obstacles so many and so great as to make success almost unattainable?

Some of the Obstacles.

The fact that some succeed proves that the difficulties, however great, are not unsurmountable. What would the business world think of a shoe manufacturer who should take an order for a thousand cases of shoes, and who did not know just what it would cost to manufacture those shoes? Such a manufacturer would be ruled out of the business. It is of

NEW YORK GREEK AMERICAN FLORISTS' CLUB OUTING

Ring Master W. J. Kennedy, St. Peter, M. Miller, Clerk W. N. Gung, Judges James Methven, Andrew K. Rogers, Frank Allison, Duncan Finlayson, Geo. M. Anderson, John Duguid, Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, Wm. Sten, A. F. Barney, Robert Cameron, James Brown, Umpires—William J. Patterson for Men; Thomas H. Westwood for Boys; F. E. Palmer for Ladies. Committee: Peter M. Miller, Wm. J. Kennedy, Andrew K. Rogers, Wm. J. Patterson, Geo. M. Anderson, Jas. Methven, Chairman, Committee on Entertainment G. W. Hauser.

Never was a finer day provided for an outing. Bright, cool and bracing weather, and everything in the landscape green and clean after the recent rains. The story of the athletic events and names of the winners will appear next week.

to concern ourselves now. We are nurserymen, and if I rightly comprehend the import of this organization, we are here for improvement. We have come together from all over this great country, to clasp hands in friendly intercourse; to exchange ideas as well as wares, and to be inspired, if possible, to greater and nobler attainments in our avocation.

One ambition animates every one of us. We all want to succeed and this is true of every man, strange as the proposition may seem. Some may be led to doubt that assertion, but I aver that it is true. All men court success; but from your view-point they could not, if they studied diligently, do that which would more surely bring defeat, than by continuing on in the course they are pursuing. By way of illustration: suppose a young man starts in business without capital—he will be given a chance. Everybody will help a fellow to make a start. Brotherly kindness is not dead. If he deals on the square and no use to manufacture shoes, or trees, unless it can be done at a profit. And to do it at a sure profit, the cost of production must be ascertained with a reasonable degree of certainty.

In the case of most manufactured articles, that is a comparatively easy task; but not so in the nursery business. The superficial method of figuring costs is the one most generally employed whenever such an attempt is made. That is, an acre of land will yield a given number of plants, it costs so much to set them out, so much to cultivate the land per year, so much to bud or graft them, and so much more to dig and put them on the market. But that is not enough. The rental of the land, or the depletion of the soil in case one owns his land; the losses incurred by climatic conditions, such as excessive rain or no rain, frosts, hail and snow, and many more such natural contingencies must not be left out of account. Then again the depreciation of tools, machinery and buildings must not be overlooked; interest on the investment and a list of overhead charges all enter into the cost of production.

Unforeseen Contingencies.

Neither is this all. Thirty years ago this catalogue of expenses would have been about all that would have had to be considered; not so now. Insect pests, save the old tent caterpillar, were unknown. Even a quarter of a century ago who had heard of, or much less seen, the San Jose scale, the brown-tail, gipsy or leopard moth, or the white pine blister rust? I did not; but now all of us are familiar with some if not all of them; and we know too that these things add to the cost of production; they must not be regarded as unmitigated evils, any more than weeds should be. Weeds compel cultivation and hence growth; pests compel cleaning up of the nursery and its surrounding; they conduce to cleanliness. I venture the assertion that never in the history of the nursery business in this country, were there so many tidy, well-kept nurseries as there are today; and in a large measure, the pests are responsible for this state of things. While all this and even more is true, the fact remains that these pests, so-called, have added very materially to the cost of production.

Determining Total Costs

All of these things must be taken into account in determining costs, and when all have been taken into account we can arrive at the cost of production only relatively at best. But that relative cost makes a basis at which to begin. In our schooldays, we wrestled with algebraic propositions, with known and unknown quantities in the equation represented by such characters as X, Y and Z. Now we wrestle with problems known as costs, and costs that are unknown. In the one case we could determine the value of the unknown by the known values, but not so with such unknown quantities as storms, drought, wind and hail. These unknown quantities must be determined not by algebraic process, but by liberal additions. A safe way is that of the druggist, who adds to the cost price his two per cent. If we figure that a given plant cost (using the known values) $20 per 1,000 to produce it, I have regarded it a safe proposition to multiply that by two. In some instances that would seem excessive; in others it would fall below the actual cost. On the whole I believe it is a safe rule to follow in determining costs. But we must not stop here, when we have considered this side of the equation, for it is at this point that, with many, the tug-of-war begins.

R. H. S. Summer Show.

A brilliant feast of color was seen at the summer show of the Royal Horticultural Society, held in the grounds of Holland House, Kensington, on July 6 and two following days. According to Sir Harry Veitch, one of the society's veterans, in spite of the war the show was as good as, and possibly better, than the best which had previously been held. Orchids made a gorgeous and costly show, the contributors including Sir Jeremiah Colman, Gurney Fowler, Charlesworth & Co., and Sander & Sons. Mr. Fowler's exhibit included an imposing new hybrid odontoglossum, Georgius Rex, which was the chief attraction in the orchid tent, and was coveted and admired by the numerous visitors. Another special feature was the display of eremuri, the largest and finest ever seen in this country, arranged by R. Wallace & Co. The Coronation Cup was secured by Blackmore & Langdon, whose begonia collection furnished a bright splash of color in one of the marquees. Roses of course, made a grand show, some excellent specimens of the Wichuraiana hybrids being well in evidence, whilst old favorites and newcomers were seen as cut blooms and in pots. The Clay challenge cup, was won by B. Cant & Son. Gold medals were awarded to Lord North, Sir Jeremiah Colman, W. Paul & Son, B. Cant & Son, A. Dickson & Son, Dobbie & Co., A. F. Dutton, Wallace & Co., and Blackmore & Langdon.

On Thursday, July 15 the heads of departments and other officials of the Peter Henderson & Co., store to the number of about thirty enjoyed an outing by auto to Coney Island, with dinner at Guffanti's, speeches and a record good time altogether.

ATLANTIC CITY GLADIOLUS SHOW

All arrangements are now perfected for the Gladiolus Show at Atlantic City. The show will be held at the Royal Palace Casino, situated on the Boardwalk, and facing the ocean from three sides, so that the hall is as cool as one could wish for.

The dates are August 26, 27, 28 and 29. Admission from 10 A. M. until 6 P. M. 15 cents; from 6 P. M. until 10 P. M. 25 cents.

On each afternoon of the first three days a lecture will be given. (1) by Max Schling, New York, on "How to arrange flowers artistically." (2) by Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., on "The varieties of Gladiolus." (3) by Maurice Fuld, New York, on "How best to grow the Gladioli by the amateur." The fourth day being Sunday the lecture has been omitted. Every evening from 8 to 10 music will be rendered by Schwab's Orchestra, the best in Atlantic City.

The hall has been spaced into exhibitors' spaces, each measuring 6 by 20 feet. Every exhibitor must try to break away from the old methods of exhibiting, and display his flowers in an original and artistic way, so that the entire show will be a thing of beauty. Exhibitors are charged rental of $20 for each space, but the committee pledges itself to refund this amount if the returns from the show warrant it. A number of spaces are unengaged, and applications should be made at once to Maurice Fuld, 1 Madison avenue, N. Y. City. The committee is confident, that if the weather conditions are favorable, our show will draw an attendance of 100,000 people during the four days, so that the exhibitors have a splendid guarantee of making their exhibit profitable.

The committee from the very first has planned this exhibit for the exclusive benefit of the American growers and dealers, and they will encourage all exhibitors to book as much business as they possibly can. Applications from foreign firms, both for space for exhibit and advertising in the souvenir bulletin, have been refused.

A special souvenir bulletin and program is in the course of construction, and the committee is glad to announce that the advertising space in this bulletin has been completely covered, and that further applications must be refused. The bulletin will contain as contributors, the names of every prominent gladiolus grower and 10,000 of same will be published which will be sold at the exhibition at 10 cents each. The entire week will be known in Atlantic City, as Gladiolus Week. This has been originated by the Publicity Bureau, and the Hotelmen's Association of Atlantic City, who are co-operating with our committee to make the show a tremendous success.

The growers from all over the country will contribute in the neighborhood of 100,000 spikes of cut gladioli, which will be furnished free of charge to all the beach front hotels, who will use them to decorate their dining rooms. In return the hotels will prominently advertise our show on their daily menus. As a further advertising campaign, the newspapers of Atlantic City will help us, and lithograph display signs will be prominent in the lobbies of the hotels, and in all the shop windows along the boardwalk.

The committee will gladly help those attending the show, to arrange hotel accommodations for them. For the benefit of those who are rather handicapped in the knowledge of arranging flowers artistically, an artist has been engaged who will help every exhibitor to accomplish what he is after. The hall will be open the day previous to the show, and a carpenter and sign painter will be on hand, to be of further assistance.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTHE CLEVELAND SHOW.

Many Retailers Planning to Exhibit.

A plan for having many retail displays in the Cleveland Flower Show has been worked out by the "retail display" committee in charge of all retail work in connection with this coming big event, and was submitted to the members of the Cleveland Florists' Club at their last meeting, held on Monday, July 12th.

The plan is to allot to each florist an equal amount of space and allow them to exhibit table decorations, corsage work, brides' bouquets, etc., basket arrangements, and general decorative effects. Each exhibitor will change his display each day, and feature a different flower, using the official flower of the day, chrysanthemums coming the first day, and followed by roses and then carnations.

This plan has been well received by the members and the committee expect between twenty and thirty retailers to participate in the show. The "retail displays" committee is composed of Frank Ritzenthaler, of Knoble Bros. Co., C. M. Wagner, and C. E. Russell of Jones-Russell Co., who serves as chairman.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

F. Mallinson of Chas. Samuelson's had the misfortune to lose his father and mother-in-law, Friday July 17, in an automobile accident.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Burmeister, florists of the Rosehill Cemetery on the death of their child on July 15.

Bruno Bandel of the Morton Grove factory of the Poehlmann Bros., will be compelled to leave the manufacture of florists' supplies and return to his native land to fight.

Mrs. P. J. Foley has returned from a three weeks' sojourn at St. Joseph, Mich., where she took the celebrated baths for rheumatism. She has completely recovered her former health.

Wm. Cook who was in the florist business here many years ago, called upon old acquaintances last week, on his way from the exposition in San Francisco to his home in the south.

Fred Ottenbacher of the Zech & Mann staff is enjoying his vacation. Joe Eringer comes next and Allie Zech, head of the firm since his father's death will stick to the store till the last.

Wm. Wolf of A. Lange's is at the West Side Hospital, where he is recovering from the effects of a fall from a step-ladder, in the store. It is doubtful if he will be about again for several weeks.

J. E. Pollworth, of the Chicago Feed and Fertilizer Co., will represent his firm at the convention at San Francisco. Among the salesmen recently added to their force are H. E. Humiston, Omaha, Neb., a graduate of the State Agricultural College; M. R. Jones, Kansas City, Kas., and M. A. Sanders, Cincinnati, all practical men.

Announcement was made of the engagement of John Walsh, and Miss Julia A. Faber, at a dinner party at the Bismarck Gardens, July 17. The bride to be, lives at Minock, Ill. and John is the popular young salesman for the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. The date of the wedding is not stated, but it is strongly suspected that when John returns from his vacation that he will not be alone.

With a supply of peonies that bids fair to reach into August, and a steady arrival of gladioli since cold weather and carnations still good, which are usually out of the way of asters, it is not surprising that there is not sale for all the flowers this summer. Summer roses now are about perfect, Mrs. Russell, Milady and Sunburst being a trio of splendid summer bloomers. What has been done to increase the demand correspondingly?

"What's in a name?" Chicago Grand Floral Festival is the new name for the fall flower show. It is harder to say than the old title, but florists will gladly make the effort if it will help assure that important event success. All the department committees are working with zest and a "pull together" spirit prevails. The fall flower show is thought by many to have a direct effect upon flower sales during the winter season and the constant increase in flower supply calls for every effort to increase demand.

The Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co. has the order for the new conservatories to be built for Wm. Wrigley, Jr., at his summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis. (This is the man whose name is said to be in the mouths of more people than that of any other, for he is the chewing gum magnate). This firm has just completed two new houses, 40 x 225 feet, for Fred Schram at Crystal Lake, Wis. The building of the power house was included. These houses are now planted and the heating system is being tested. The new greenhouse at the Chicago "Bridewell," also erected by the Foley people, is nearly completed.

After the joint meeting of the committee from the Chicago Florists' Club and the Chicago Park Association, it was discovered that the eastern delegations they were planning to entertain jointly, would be in Chicago four days apart. The park superintendents will be here August 8, and the florists August 12. All florists visiting Chicago en route to the convention at San Francisco, will be entertained by the Chicago Florists' Club, with an automobile ride through the parks and other places of interest in the city, ending with a dinner at the Bismarck Gardens. Ample time will be allowed to prepare for the 10 P. M. train. All visitors are invited to meet at the Auditorium Hotel, at 1.30 P. M. sharp.

During the summer months when the fertilizer dealers are having their dull season they are by no means idle. The whole subject of fertilizers, especially the so-called "commercial" kinds, are being studied as probably they never have before and the flower or vegetable grower who wants to get the greatest percent of profit out of his benches will find the fertilizer trade ready to meet his questions with an intelligent exposition of the whole subject. With competition becoming more keen each year and the areas of glass more extensive, it is business policy to make each foot of bench room produce to its utmost capacity. Many of the men now engaged in this important branch of the business have studied at our state agricultural colleges and done soil research work.

CINCINNATI.

Chas. Dudley, Jr., and R. T. Virgin, both of Parkersburg, W. Va., recently stopped in this city. They are on a trip down the Ohio in a canoe.

Mrs. P. J. Olinger and children, left for Evanston, Ill., to spend the balance of the summer. Mr. Olinger accompanied them as far as New Castle, Ind.

Max Rudolph, C. E. Critchell, Alex Ostendarp, J. Chas. Murphy and R. Witterstaetter, Directors of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, at a Board meeting held on Monday afternoon, decided not to hold the regular meeting of the Society in August as very many of the members plan to be away at that time.

PITTSBURGH.

Rumor says that constructive work is to begin early in the fall on a large and handsome greenhouse on the Squirrel Hill estate of Andrew W. Mellon.

T. Hart Given, president of the Farmers' National Bank, is about to have built a fine greenhouse on his grounds on Morewood Heights and Wilkins avenue.

At the annual tree planting of the Congress of Women's Clubs of Western Pennsylvania Superintendent of Parks George W. Burke was among fifty for whom trees were named.

The West End Park under the regime of Neil McCallum is so unique in its representation of an English garden that numerous East End and North Side people make the long trip in order to see its beauty. Mr. McCallum has the distinction of being the president of both the Florists' Club of Pittsburgh and the Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania. Although of Scottish race, he is a native of London, England, and for many years was a resident of Australia, going there when only fifteen.

The Garden Club of Allegheny County will hold its August meeting on the 14th at Rachelwood Farm, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Mellon. This estate, which really embraces a chain of nine farms, is located in the heart of the Allegheny Mountains, eleven miles from Ligonier. Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., recently entertained the members at her Sewickley Heights place, to hear Mr. Strassburger, of Philadelphia, talk on Rock Gardens; the Methods of Making and the Flowers to Grow. This was followed by a visit to Mrs. Thaw's rock garden, just completed by Mr. Strassburger.

CLEVELAND.

Some florists in this section are having considerable trouble with rust on snapdragon. Some have lost whole batches outside and some lots in the greenhouses are looking pretty sick.

Al Barber and George Bate returned from their fishing trip and reported a fine time. George then took Herman Knoble and Frank Friedley and their families down from July 17th to 22nd. Al. Lingren spent a few days at Detroit. Harry Jones of the Jones-Russell Co. and Mr. MacDiarmid motored to Detroit last week.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Company is erecting two new houses at Newton Falls, Ohio; one house 49 by 400, Lord & Burnham construction, for roses, which is almost finished and ready for planting, and one house 24 by 200 for carnations which is to be built immediately. The Cleveland Cut Flower plant on Eddy Rd. is being torn down and the glass, tile benches and pipe are being shipped to Newton Falls, to be used in the new houses. Guy Bate who is in charge of the Newton Falls plant has his young stock in excellent shape to plant as soon as possible.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Daniel MacRorie has just returned from an outing in the Yosemite Valley with his father, Malcolm MacRorie, who is here from New Jersey.

John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, arrived in San Francisco a few days ago, expecting to remain until after the Convention.

The Ladies California Floral Society, recently organized in this city, held a social gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Axel on the evening of July 14. Several members of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society attended with their wives, there being about 35 present all told. Music was furnished, light refreshments served and the time passed very pleasantly. Several new members were enrolled.

The San Francisco and Oakland houses of Hogan-Kooyman & Co. will hereafter be operated independently, G. E. Hogan, Albert E. Evers, and C. Kooyman having dissolved partnership. Under the new arrangement, Messrs. Hogan and Evers take over the retail business in Oakland, and Mr. Kooyman becomes sole owner of the wholesale business in San Francisco. Both establishments have been going ahead nicely, but there has been no vital connection between them since the wholesale department was moved from Oakland to San Francisco a year ago in March, at which time Mr. Kooyman assumed full charge of the San Francisco store and the other partners took charge of the Oakland shop. Both firm names will be changed shortly.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mr. and Mrs. John Burton and grandson have been on a visit to John N. May, Summit, N. J.

The Truly-Rurals will have a week-end fishing trip at the Commodore's, July 30, 31 and August 1.

Campbell Bros., Pennlynn, suffered a loss of about fifty boxes of glass in the hailstorm which struck that section on July 13. Bill Comfort says he never saw such big 'uns. Some of them "large as hens' eggs."

KANSAS CITY.

Sam. Murray is jubilant over the increased business in his new establishment—very much better than last year.

This neighborhood has had no lack of rainfall. In fact, since last autumn the amount of rain has been the heaviest in many years. The country was never more beautiful and green than at the present time.

Never was a more cool and delightful spring. May, June and July, up to the present date have been simply ideal and as a consequence the florists have had a superb supply of garden flowers—delphiniums particularly—and gladioli are very fine as are also the dahlias which are now blooming in abundance.

HARTFORD, CONN.

One of West Hartford's oldest business industries changed hands last week when Carl Peterson took possession of the Whiting greenhouses on a lease for a term of years. Mr. Peterson has had charge of the greenhouses for the past eighteen years, and during the past ten years has been the manager for Miss Helen F. Whiting.

Mr. Peterson had his first horticultural experience in his native home in Sweden. He came to this country in 1893 and worked for A. N. Pierson in Cromwell and for Robt. Simpson in New Jersey, after which he took charge of the Whiting establishment. He is vice-president of the Conn. Horticultural Society.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

H. V. Sowle has just added a fine refrigerator to his store equipment.

The bedding plant season is about over, and business is reported as being quiet.

Post & Gray, with their employees, visited the show of the American Sweet Pea Society in Newport, July 16.

Joseph Peirce of Cottage street is away on a short vacation, and Samuel Rusitsky is spending three months in the mountains of Kentucky.

Richard Nofitz has given up his attractive little store on William St. and is now doing all his business from his greenhouses in Kempton St.

WASHINGTON.

Superintendent George W. Hess, of the Botanic Gardens, has gone to New Iberia, La., the summer home of Senator Robert F. Broussard, where he will spend his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gutman, of Anacostia, last week suffered the loss of their daughter, Annie E. Gutman, aged eighteen years, who died following an attack of typhoid fever. Many expressions of sympathy were sent to the bereaved parents for Miss Gutman was one of the best liked of the members of the younger set of the city.

Otto Bauer, manager of the Pennock-Meehan store, returns next week from a vacation spent at North Beach where his family is staying during the summer. Fred W. Meyer, of Leapley & Meyer, also spent his vacation at North Beach. Frederick T. Leapley has returned from a week in Montgomery County, Md.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON There is still a heavy excess supply of flowers in this market and the growers have to be content with a very meagre return for their product. Hot weather last week affected many things unfavorably and quality, on the average, shows a falling off. Roses, carnations, sweet peas and lilies are all more or less off in color, size and form. The great elephant for the wholesale markets just now is the gladiolus. The influx has hardly got under way yet, either. What it will mean when the height of the crop is on may, perhaps, be imagined.

Asters are the latest addition to the stock of summer flowers. The blooms are small, but have so far met with better sale than could reasonably be expected in a market already glutted. Peonies are still here and some of the wholesalers have a large quantity still in storage. They are said to be keeping well—too well as one of the dealers remarked. Roses are a shade less in evidence this week. The hot sun following so much cloudy and wet weather burned the plants in some houses badly and some are suffering more or less from mildew. There is no danger, however, of orders being turned down for lack of stock. Every kind of summer flower that grows out-of-doors is in crop and competes with the products of the greenhouses. Ferns are selling for $1.00 per 1000.

July business has not been anything to brag about. The supply has continued very heavy while business has not been good enough to bring about anything like a substantial price. Prices on all flowers are relatively lower than at this time last year. Lilies are in a glut and there is no sign of immediate relief from this condition of the market. Only the outdoor roses are having any kind of sale and this is because of their keeping qualities. Other roses including American Beauties, even though very good in quality are having a very poor market. Asters are now coming in heavy. So far they have been selling pretty well. For a few days last week ferns were rather scarce owing to the difficulty in getting shipments through on time.

All the wholesale places are still carrying large surpluses of flowers the sale for which is so light that the income from many shipments will scarcely cover express charges, packing, etc. Roses and carnations show the effect of the recent hot days and sweet peas the effect of the heavy rain storms. Receipts of carnations are falling off rapidly. Asters are seen on all sides now, but quality is yet lacking. Some dahlias are already in evidence. Of gladioli there is an overwhelming supply and the varieties are of a higher type than this market has been accustomed to in former years. Lilies are also in heavy supply and have to be sold very low to unload. Cattleyas are still in excess of requirements. Coreopsis, centaureas, hydrangeas and a variety of other garden flowers all help to load up the tables and ice boxes.

Business slow.

PHILADELPHIA Enormous oversupply, especially of outdoor stock. Asters and gladioli never so plentiful as this year. All Europe must have been dumped on the gladiolus growers, to judge from the quantities coming in. Prices down out of sight and carloads for the dump on Saturday. Roses of all kinds have receded in quality since the hot spell set in. Carnations, also, are running down rapidly both in quality and quantity. Asters are very plentiful and the demand is fair. Lily of the valley and longiflorum lilies move off about as usual. The quality is a little under standard.

The local wholesale market is still overcrowded and the retailers cannot possibly consume a quarter of the consignments that are coming in daily. Roses are mostly small and short stemmed and sell as low as $5 per thousand. Very few fancies are to be had with the exception of Beauties. Gladioli are a great glut. Common mixed colors go at $4 per thousand, while selects bring only $1 per hundred.

As far as carnations go, the gladioli were seen in this market. Carnations go slow and low. Asters, sweet peas, lily of the valley, lilies and tube roses are all in plenty with small de-

The most important feature in the local flower market the past week was the putting into effect of an arrangement among the Japanese carnation growers to pool their crops instead of each grower marketing his supplies independently as has been the custom here. Under the new plan all carnations brought to the market are carefully graded into five grades by a committee representing the growers. This week special selected was quoted at 50 cents a bunch and the other grades were quoted three for $1.25 cents, 15 cents and 10 cents a bunch, respectively. This move toward the standardization of carnation values was heralded with favor by all branches of the trade and beneficial results were felt immediately. Most other stock continues rather plentiful. Sweet peas are hardly so much in evidence, however, and good stock demands fair prices. Asters are beginning to arrive from down the peninsula, but the supply is still limited and the quality is nothing extra as yet. Many varieties of gladioli and dahlias are offered and the really fine stock demands high prices. Cut hydrangeas show fine quality. Shasta daisies, marguerites, scabiosas, mignonette, gaillardias, statice, and other seasonables are abundant. Roses are hardly so plentiful and prices are a shade firmer. Easter lilies are off the market, and some nice Lilium rubrum are making their appearance.

Funeral work last week was exceptionally heavy and WASHINGTON the business was more than welcomed by the stores which otherwise would have done practically nothing. Stock cleaned up better than it had for several weeks although large quantities found its way to the refuse heaps. Asters have started to come in quantities and it is now but a matter of a few days when they will be very plentiful. Thus far they have met with a very good demand and large orders have been received from out-of-town. Gladioli are exceptionally fine and this is in part serving as a substitute for roses and carnations. Gardenias are still very good and plentiful but there is but a very light demand for them. Ordinary varieties of roses are nearly off the market but there are plenty of good Radiance, Mock and Kaiserin. Carnations are nearly off crop. There is practically no call for snapdragon. Sweet peas fail to meet with any sale.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The visit of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to the Newport Sweet Pea Show, on Thursday, July 15, was a most enjoyable occasion. Special cars were provided for the trip and some 115 were in the party. The visitors were met at the train by members of the Newport Society and shown the Ocean Drive in drays, stopping at the estates of Edward J. Berwind, Governor R. Livingstone Beekman, William Storrs Welles and Charles F. Hoffman, after which they were given a shore dinner.

PERSONAL.

George Corbett & Son of College Hill, Cincinnati, have retired from business.

David Welch, of Welch Bros., Boston, is enjoying a short vacation at The Samoset, Rockland, Me.

Geo. E. Lindeman, florist, Pleasant St., Fall River, Mass., is recovering at his home after having undergone an operation.

The employees of Barnes Bros. Nursery Company learning that one of their number, Allan McDonald, of Yalesville, Conn., was about to remove to Massachusetts to open a branch office for Barnes Bros., have presented him with a handsome silver coffee service with best wishes for success and happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Reukauf of Philadelphia are making the trip to the coast together combining business and sight seeing. At Chicago they will be joined by Sydney Bayersdorfer who will accompany them the rest of the way and visit the exposition with them. Mr. Reukauf says business has been very good for him so far since he left the East, quite up to an average year.

CLEVELAND FLORISTS' CLUB.

The last meeting of the Florists' Club was well attended. It was voted to have a blackboard placed in the club room where the members can indicate upon it whatever plant stock of any kind they may have to sell or are willing to buy, which should be a good help to members.

The picnic should be a big success judging by the interest evinced. There is a large list of prizes for the races, games, etc., and the committee say that they will have some new stunts. It was decided to play indoor baseball instead of the outdoor game, club members only to be allowed to participate. Members, their families and personal friends may take part in the other stunts.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—Kalamazoo Floral Co., assets, $785.69, liabilities, $1,170.

Atlanta, Ga.—Atlanta Floral Co., 97 Peachtree St. A settlement of 60c. on the dollar is looked for.

Samuel Lum, of Chatham, N. J., has filed a schedule of his assets and liabilities with Referee Atwood L. De Coster in Bankruptcy Court. According to the florist's estimate, his assets are $96,428 and his liabilities $65,975. Although apparently solvent, Lum has not contested the involuntary bankruptcy proceedings started against him a month ago. Real estate valued at $96,129 comprises the bulk of the assets. Liens amounting to $23,000 are held against the property by creditors. Of the liabilities $21,666 are secured.

A meeting of the creditors of Reilly Brothers retail nurserymen of Dansville, N. Y., was held on July 14, and it was voted to accept the offer made by the Reilly Brothers.

The composite agreement provides for the formation of a corporation having as directors for the first year some of the biggest creditors. An immediate dividend of ten per cent. is to be paid the creditors and preferred stock for the remaining 90 per cent. of their claims is to be issued to them in the new corporation. After preferred stock has been issued to creditors to cover 90 per cent. of their claims, common stock will be issued to the Reilly Brothers for the balance of the capital stock. The capitalization will be $50,000. This method of settlement eliminates the expensive proceedings connected with having a receiver appointed and a subsequent sale of the business and its assets to satisfy the creditors.

The Holyoke & Northampton (Mass.) Florists' & Gardeners' Club will hold their annual Chrysanthemum Show Wednesday and Thursday, November 3 and 4 in Windsor Hall. They will also hold a picnic in August.

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

THE GLASS MEN

The National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers will hold their fifth annual meeting at Atlantic City, N. J., on July 27, 28 and 29, at the Hotel Traymore. To judge from one of the photographs herewith reproduced at least two of the members of the organization are already somewhat familiar with the pastimes of the great seaside resort. Of the two happy looking gentlemen so comfortably ensconced in the wheelchair preparatory to a boardwalk stroll the one on the left is O. C. Teague, president of the National Association. His companion is genial Ed. Flood, whom many of our readers already know as the eastern representative of the Johnston Brokerage Co., the largest distributors of glass in this country, selling most of the product of the hand-blown glass factories.

We also present a portrait of J. R. Johnston, president of the Johnston Brokerage Co., and secretary of the National Association.

It may interest some of our friends whose duty it is to plan convention programs for florists and kindred organizations to see how the glass men do it when they foregather, so we present the program complete for their meeting.

Some one of our party will accompany Prof. Jacqwith in his Hydro-aeroplane each day. A fifteen minute journey at great height over ocean and along beach. Exciting, and we hope harmless.

Theatre tickets for entire party are reserved and will be distributed first day of conference.

Two Handsome Trophies have been provided for Golf Tournament, handicaps and details to be arranged by special committee.

On behalf of their good friends and profitable patrons, the greenhouse men, we extend congratulations and best wishes that the glass men may have the time of their lives. We confess we cannot get along without them. May they thrive and prosper.

but with due consideration for the pockets of the greenhouse men, when they talk about prices and lay schemes for next season's campaign. When they soar in those Atlantic City aeroplanes we hope the sensation of flying high will not unduly inflate their ideas of the greenhouse man's limit, but rather produce a feeling of sympathy for the poor mortal who must stay on the earth and who, when he has made a few dollars, is sure to "put it all into sash."

STORM DAMAGE IN NEW JERSEY

A series of severe electrical storms accompanied by heavy hail did great injury in Morris, Union and Somerset counties, New Jersey, on July 13, and did considerable damage as it swept over the country around Summit, Madison, Chatham, Murray Hill, etc., especially the hail, as quite a number of lights were broken on all the greenhouse places in these towns. More than one hundred lights of glass were broken by hail in the greenhouse of Fred Nason, Murray Hill, New Providence. The greenhouses of Marcus L. Force of Morristown were riddled by hail and flowers and vegetables destroyed ruthlessly. At Westfield, Herder Bros, were heavy losers. Their greenhouses were completely wrecked and contents ruined.

At Springfield a dwelling in course of erection by the Jacobsen Floral Co. on Westfield Ave., was badly damaged. At Madison, truck gardens were either cut to pieces or the vegetables torn up by the roots and swept away. This along with the greenhouses that were wrecked and the wheat and oat crops that were destroyed runs the damage up to $100,000.

This is a little 16 page publication, but it represents the largest factory of its kind in the world. Moreover it signals the completion of 150 years of business at the same stand, so the establishment of A. H. Hews & Co. is not alone the largest, but the oldest manufacturer of red flower pots in the world. The catalogue is illustrated with cuts showing the shapes of plain and fancy florists' earthenware with complete lists and prices of all sizes and is a very handy little reference book to have around the office and potting shed.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original owt.

This big house of N. F. McCarthy's at Montrose, Mass., and that of Sinclair's at Smith's Ferry, Mass., has helped us sell more houses than any we ever built in the East. We would like you to be our guest and go look at them. Will you go?

How Things Look

LAST Tuesday I returned from an extended trip through the Eastern States.

Took it, to find out "How Things Look," as they say in Boston when speaking of business conditions.

The papers are filled these days with the words of fortune tellers, who for one reason or another (mostly another) seem to feel they are competent to pass on anything from the number of kernels of corn there will be on a cob; to what the price of pink Killarneys will be the day before Xmas.

It makes good reading what these sooth-sayers turn out, but it has very little to do with real business.

Being in a very real business, we determined to get a line on things correctly.

The Eastern States was selected, because of the well-known conservatism of its business men.

In Kansas you know they whoop things up, and then have to strain every nerve to see that they stay up. But the "Boston way folks" know that you can't bake beans only just so fast, without burning them. So they form their business judgments on the baked bean plan. Consequently when you get their point of view, it is apt to be done all the way through and browned all the way around.

But enough of beans—now for the facts.

Of the many men in various lines of business with whom I talked, but few were anything but optimistic. Of course there were some calamity howlers.

The kind which, like the poor, "we always have with us."

Boiling the whole thing down, the impression seemed to be that the European War was on for a long pull, and that this country was never in a better position to make money. Now if the business men would stop taking their pulse every few minutes and instead of talking war, eating war, and sleeping war, would get business busy, that business would then start moving briskly.

As one man put it: "Cut out the war talk and go along and roll your hoop."

So I came back, feeling decidedly optimistic.

As far as our orders are concerned, we have nothing to kick about; especially those for our Reconstructed Construction. From the way our commercial business is going, it's evident that a lot of the growers are confident of business being such as it never has been before, and they are going to be ready to get their share along with some of that belonging to the other fellow who has put off building.

As you know, building conditions were never better. Materials are lower than they will be again for many a long day to come. Labor is plentiful and eager to work when they work.

And now, how about you?

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business, and you can depend on, depending on Hitchings.

PRINCESS, 20—The New Upright Pansy

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c; 1000 Seeds 35c; ¼ oz. $1.00;
1½ oz. $2.00; 1 oz. $7.50.

38—Mme. Perret—Red and wine shades.
40—Zebra—Fine striped mixture.
42—Adonis—Light blue, white center.
44—Black—Almost coal black.

The KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

- 22—KENILWORTH STRAIN—The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches; it is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, and many others. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
- 26—KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE—Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long.
- 28—MASTERPIECE—A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance, large flowers of great substance.
- 30—GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES—A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich velvety colors, reds are particularly conspicuous.
- 32—GIANT PARISIAN—The flowers are of enormous size, and beautifully marked, mostly five dark blotches on white and yellow ground. An unusually showy Mixture.

All sorts and mixtures, except the new Pansy Princess, are $5.00 per oz.; $1.25 per ¼-oz.; 5000 seeds, $1.00; trade packet of 1000 seeds, 25c.; any 5 pkts., $1.00. Please order by number.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Ps.

Antirrhinums

For winter or spring flowering the antirrhinums are an excellent and profitable crop. For early flowering, through November and December, it is necessary to bench the plants about the first week in August. I find they do best with a minimum of 48 to 50 degrees in winter. Plant a foot apart each way if the stock was raised from cuttings. Pinch back the shoot as it pushes up to flower and allow four to five shoots to start from near the ground. Rub out all weak, useless growths. Three or four good spikes to a plant will pay better than three times that number of inferior ones. Stake the plants to keep them erect and rub off the side growths on flowering stems.

Aspidistras

It is a good plan to propagate a lot of aspidistra, as they are bound to come in very useful. Break up densely grown clumps leaving two or three leaves with each piece. For these divided pieces you can use 4 or 5-inch pots. Give them fibrous loam three parts, well rotted cow manure one part. Place in a house where they can be shaded and kept rather close and they will soon start new roots, after which place them near the glass and do not keep them too densely shaded. When started now they will make fine stock for early spring sales. They do fine in a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees at night.

Chrysanthemums

Faithful attention to cultural details of apparently little importance is essential to success with chrysanthemums under glass. The very first and main aim should be to encourage a healthy faultlessly clean and withal exuberant growth of the plants before the buds are actually forming. All this stock, even the latest made and benched lots, is now or should be by this time well forward in growth, needing daily attention to watering, weeding, syringing, staking and tying while the earliest planted should have its complete scheme of stake, string and wire support fully adjusted, mulched to prevent rapid drying out of soil and closely watched as regards formation and eventual taking of buds. See that all houses have plenty of ventilation at all times. Fumigate once a week or not later than every ten days for fly.

Next Week:—Callias; Carnations; Cattleyas; Primulas; Seeds to Sow; Preparing Sand.

Lorraine Begonias

These will need lots of attention from this out. Give them a place quite close to the glass which should not be too heavily shaded. Where possible give them shade during the hottest hours of the day with a lattice that can be removed after 3 or 4 P. M. and need not be put on again until 9 o'clock in the morning, or may be left off entirely on cloudy days. When given this treatment it is surprising how much more stocky and better the plants will be by late fall. Give them a shift before they become pot bound until they are in their flowering size. Use a compost of equal parts of fibrous loam, leaf mold and well decayed cow manure. Keep the air humid by wetting down paths and beneath the benches. When the plants begin to crowd give them a fresh stand with plenty of room between for light and air. Ventilate so as to avoid any sudden fluctuations in the temperature.

Sweet Peas

Do not buy cheap seed but be sure to get the best that is on the market. For early flowering seed should be sown by the end of this month. If the space on the benches is not ready sow in 4 or 5-inch pots and then plant out in four or five weeks. The best place to grow these along is in a cold frame where they can have plenty of air and be handy for water and syringing. They can be kept shaded until they come up which I think is better to hasten germination, but after that they will need full sun. To do well they should have at least eight inches of soil, but where you have a solid bed plant them there and you will never regret it. Whether in bench or solid bed give them a rich compost. They will grow very well in fibrous loam two parts, well rotted cow manure one part, and a little bone meal. Just as soon as they show any signs of climbing give them supports.

Manure for Winter

It takes some time to get a pile of good manure so it is always better to start early about this work. The grower who always makes it a point to have plenty of good manure in his shed for future use can rely on having fine crops. So turn this over in your mind now and make plans for later on.

Two Little Known Perennials of Sterling Merit

Salvia virgata nemorosa is a plant all too little known in the catalogues of the nurseries of this country. Most of the stock used here is imported each year from Europe and as a result the supply is inadequate. It is hard to find a reason for this with a plant of such ease of propagation. It can be very easily raised from cuttings given the same treatment as those of any herbaceous perennial plant. These cuttings root readily in heat if they are rather soft and in a growing state. After well rooted the plants should be potted up and kept in pots until sold or until permanently planted out. The flower is one of the most delightful of the whole Sage family being a beautiful soft blue, and it is a deplorable fact that its use in American gardens should be limited by the supply, as is evidently the case.

Another perennial of value, often overlooked by planters is Nepeta Mussini, which flowers light blue during May and June. It will thrive in any ordinary light sandy soil and is easily propagated from seed or by division. It is a rapid grower and very soon covers the ground. Those plants which one finds in the market are ordinarily of a rather high price, even at wholesale, a fact for which I can see no reason, when it is so easy to procure a good stock of plants.

Here again I would recommend that the plants be grown in pots, for with all herbaceous plants, excepting perhaps peonies and the like, a potted plant suffers less of a set back when transplanted, ships in better condition over greater distances, and is more convenient to handle than the ordinary nursery clump. By this method the shipping season may be prolonged with greater safety and incidentally the gross receipts from sales are materially increased. Plants when sent out from pots should be as well pot-bound as possible to insure their holding their ball of soil which is essential to successful transplanting and the use of the now cheap and serviceable paper pot is of great advantage when the plants are to be shipped by freight or express. Potted plants ship over reasonable distances by freight as safely as by express, provided a little wet moss is placed among the pots to retain moisture. In packing the plants the open slatted crate seems to be the best way, for the expressman sees at a glance that carelessness on his part means a job to pick up the pieces and the weak top of the crate indicates that no weight can be put on top of the box. Hence the plants receive proper treatment and plenty of air and less rot and burning up will be found in such a shipment.

Miltonia vexillaria

See Cover Illustration.

Miltonia vexillaria is well known and it certainly is one of the best spray orchids for either commercial or private use. Its flowering season extends from early April until the later part of July. The flowers, if kept cool and dry will keep in good condition four weeks and longer. The color varies in different plants from nearly white with a touch of pink in the center of the sepals and petals to deep pink and rose. Some varieties have a deep carmine blotch on the lip, others only a few radiating lines of a dark rose color in addition to the usual yellow blotch which surrounds the yellow crest. However, all of them are beautiful and well worth the little trouble it takes to grow them. They don't seem to care what compost they grow in, for I have seen excellent plants grown in osmunda fibre, others in peat and moss and others in moss alone. For the last few years I have used nothing but clean live sphagnum moss, which is kept growing and is replaced with fresh as soon as it shows signs of decay.

Miltonias are nearly always active and, therefore, require no special resting season. The only time they rest is when in full bloom and then less water is given at the root and the plants are kept in a cool, dry place where no damping down is done. Each plant is then allowed to get quite dry before water is again applied. At all other times the plants require an abundant supply of water and once a week or ten days an application of weak liquid manure. As the bulbs commence to swell and the flower spikes push forth this may be increased to double the usual strength until the flowers begin to expand. After that no more feeding is done until the new growths, which will push forth soon after the flowers are past, are well under way. Any dividing or repotting should be done at that time as then the roots are most active and will quickly take hold of the new compost.

Miltonia vexillaria is not over particular as to temperature. Some grow them cool, some warm and some in intermediate temperature. I prefer the latter with partial shade in summer and plenty of fresh air at all times. The atmosphere is kept damp during the growing season by frequent damping of the floors and between the pots.

Miltonia Roeckii requires a little more heat, but M. Bleuiana, a cross between the two, will do well under the treatment advised for M. vexillaria.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Care of Old Plants

Old plants that have just been cut off and planted again in the benches will require every possible care to bring them to their first growth, after which they will be easier to handle, although to make them pay they must never be neglected for an instant. We find that it pays to give these plants even less soil than we would give young plants, for if the weather in the fall and winter should be very dark, less trouble will be experienced with the drying out of the benches. It is well to have plenty of well decayed manure in the soil as they will take more feed than young plants, and if not fed enough will produce a great many short-stemmed flowers, mostly No. 2's, and these are not very profitable to the grower. Syringe twice daily right after they are planted, being very careful to do the work quickly, so as not to get too much water on the benches. To do this right, the walks must be in good condition, so that the man with the hose can walk right along watching the plants and his work without having to look ahead to see that he does not walk into a hole, or slip on the slimy earth walks sometimes tolerated in greenhouses. A coat of sand is the very best these walks could get, with a little lime added to help kill the green. Ashes we would not recommend where pipes touch the walk, as these eat through the pipes in a very little time.

When syringing the plants that have already broken into leaf, see that they are wet enough, otherwise the foliage will likely be burned, and that is bad for plants that are just starting. As soon as there is enough growth to hide the main stalks, stop syringing, and syringe only as often as necessary to keep the plants clean, choosing the forenoon of bright clear days. Watering will also play an important part in starting old plants, and if done very carefully, the loss from plants dying will be very small.

Lime

In the early planted houses, where the plants have attained some size, it will be necessary to use a little lime every night when the plants are watered or syringed in the day time. Some nights are very cool and foggy, and if no lime is used the plants will likely suffer under the leaves from the moist air that stays around the bottom, and will be more apt to get mildew or spot. It is very good to use a little lime at night after a thunder storm in the afternoon, especially if the rain beat in. Use lime in old leaky houses when a shower comes up in the afternoon. Growers will say it is not necessary to use lime except for Beauties, but we like to use it for all roses, as there is very little expense attached to it, and the benefit is many times the small outlay.

Liquid Manure

It is still too early to use this on plants that are not well rooted, but any houses that have been grown for summer blooming should receive liberal doses. Do not mix any strong chemicals into it, using only a good lot of cow manure. If nitrate and other strong fertilizers are added, the plants are bound to get a little soft, and are likely to get a dose of mildew. If the liquid manure is not very strong, add a little bonemeal to it but nothing else.

Mulching

Watch the early planted houses, and see that the roots do not suffer by being exposed to the rays of the sun. Beauties especially will be working well to the surface now, and a protecting mulch of manure will do wonders in giving the plants color and keeping them in good growing condition. The roots that suffer most are the young tender feeders that supply the plant with food. These will appear right on the surface if the plants are mulched, and growers should be careful not to scratch the benches over deeply, as this would destroy all the tender roots and thus set the plants back. Protect all the roots for they are very important to the growing plant. If the plants have poor roots, the feed, water, etc., that is given them will largely be wasted, as they will have no way to take it up. Get the soil full of roots and keep these alive by careful watering and feeding, taking care to give the necessary mulching when it is required.

HYDRANGEAS AT ARNOLD ARBOR-ETUM.

Hydrangea radiata. A form of Hydrangea arborescens (var. grandiflora), with large globose heads of sterile flowers, has become immensely popular in this country since its discovery a few years ago in one of the western states, and it can now be seen in many suburban gardens. A much more beautiful American species, however, is Hydrangea radiata, which is now in flower in the Shrub Collection. It is a native of mountain slopes in North and South Carolina, and is a round-topped shrub with large leaves very dark green above and silvery white below, and broad heads of flowers surrounded by a ring of white neutral flowers. It is one of the handsomest of all the Hydrangeas which are perfectly hardy in this climate, and although once a popular garden plant it is now rarely found in collections.

Hydrangea paniculata. More conspicuous now in the collection is the early-flowering form of Hydrangea paniculata (var. praecox). The most generally planted form of Hydrangea paniculata is that in which all the flowers are sterile, known as Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. This plant produces large clusters of white flowers which turn rose color in fading, and will not be in bloom for several weeks. The variety praecox, which is one of the forms of the wild plant, has ray flowers surrounding the clusters of sterile flowers. There are two or three forms of the variety praecox in the collection differing in the size of the flower-clusters and in the size of the ray flowers. The handsomest and earliest of these was raised from seeds collected by Professor Sargent in Hokkaido where it grows into a small tree sometimes twenty or thirty feet tall.—Arnold Arboretum Bulletin.

During the next month several interesting plants will flower in the Arnold Arboretum. Among trees may be mentioned the Chinese Koeberlinia paniculata, the American and Asiatic forms of Aralia spinosa, the Japanese Acanthopanax ricinifolium and Sophora japonica; and among shrubs the Pepper-bush of the eastern United States (Clethra alnifolia), which has been largely used in the roadside plantations, and Panax sessiliflorus from eastern Siberia.

The Arboretum Bulletins will now be discontinued until autumn.

ings and we feel confident that our readers will find no fault with the brief digression from the serious things of life. "All work and no play" is not to be recommended as a slogan.

We occasionally find in the public print an item that gives especial gratification because it marks some progressive step in one or another direction. Such a note is that from Bridgewater, Mass., wherein the tree warden of that town, in support of claims for the loss of trees by escaping illuminating gas, makes the assertion that the destruction of good healthy shade trees on property decreases its valuation at least twenty per cent. That is good doctrine and we hope it will be affirmed in the court should court action be found necessary to collect compensation in this instance. Gas and electric companies will not be so careless regarding injury to trees, public or private, when the public come to a full realization of their rights and a proper estimate of the intrinsic value of growing trees as property and as material assets in computing the worth of a town from a practical as well as an esthetic standpoint. Massachusetts has good tree warden laws and as a rule her towns have been blessed with good earnest officials who have performed the duties of their position in a most able, conscientious and public spirited manner.

Thwarted plans

Among those gentlemen who have been endeavoring to round-up delegations to attend the S. A. F. Convention in San Francisco S. A. F. Convention from the leading eastern sections it seems to be now a foregone conclusion that the number in attendance will be very meagre as compared with the hopes, predictions and promises so freely expressed a few months ago. The real reason for this condition is easily thought out and will be obvious to anybody with some knowledge of the course of business in most floricultural lines during the year since the meeting in Boston which so jauntily accepted the invitation to the Golden Gate and painted for us such rosy pictures of car loads of happy convention pilgrims westward bound in August, 1915. It would be a mistake to charge this miscarriage of plans entirely to indifference on the part of the S. A. F. members regarding the Society, the Convention, the Panama-Pacific Exposition or the brethren of San Francisco who with characteristic hospitality have been busy devising ways and means for extending entertainment and a big welcome to their visitors. We have no doubt of the sincerity of the majority of those who originally voiced their intention of going to San Francisco but have now "backed down." This is emphatically a year burdened with unforeseen complications, and which demands close application and attention to one's business. Not that the future looks so very unpromising as that its aspects are so ill-defined and uncertain that they cannot safely be neglected. It is for us to be thankful, however, that the situation is not much worse, for whatever temporary perplexities we are called upon to face in this momentous time they cannot for a moment be weighed against the conditions which prevail across the sea. The heart of the great horticultural host all over the country will be with the S. A. F. during its gala week in San Francisco to a degree equalled by no previous similar event. There will be intense interest in the story of the proceedings and, fully realizing this, HORTICULTURE has made arrangements for a very full telegraphic story of the convention doings in its convention week issue. They will all read it and they will be glad.

Play time

We are now right in the middle of the vacation and recreation period. The custom which has become so general among the various local florists' organizations of providing simple games and athletic contests as features of a special day of outdoor enjoyment once a year is a most commendable one and by bringing together families which have so much in common many life-long friendships are created between those who might otherwise never have met one another. We are disposed to devote a considerable space just now to the details of these out-

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

Report of the Sweet Pea Trial Grounds, by Prof. A. C. Beal.

During the past year we were able to resume our trials with the winter-flowering sweet peas. Although we did not come into possession of the necessary greenhouse space in time to sow them for the early crop, we were able to plant during October and therefore had an excellent crop of flowers during midwinter and spring. In fact, last year's crop was the best we have ever had.

A large collection of varieties were received from Mr. Zvolanek and a few varieties from other seedsmen. Some of the older varieties were grown for comparison, and altogether there were sixty varieties in the collection. Among the newer sorts the following are very promising:

BRIDAL VEIL. A large to very large, much-waved white flower.

KING OF ENGLAND. A large waved flower, of a bright glowing crimson color. In our experience this variety is the best red for greenhouse culture.

REV. FATHER KELLY. A large to very large, much-waved lavender flower. Some of the standards show tints of mauve-rose, but change to the same color as the wings. The exact color is not given in the "Repertoire des Couleurs" being less red than 188 (1) and less blue than 201 (1).

BELGIAN HERO. A large waved flower with the standard salmon-carmine and wings purple-rose. This would be called by the trade an orange-pink. When grown in late spring or summer this variety, unless shaded, shows the blackened veins common to flowers of this color; but in winter this variety was free from this defect. When well grown it is a fine variety.

MORNING STAR. A very large much-waved flower with the standard bright mauve-rose and wings violet-rose. These are the approximate colors, as the real colors lie between the two and the flower is more nearly a self than is indicated.

MRS. CALVERT. A large waved deep pink flower. The standards are mauve-rose and the wings pale lilac-rose. A beautiful flower.

POLAR LIGHT. A large waved flower; standard lilac-rose, wings darker.

WAVED CHRISTMAS PINK. Appears to be a decided improvement on the widely-grown Christmas Pink.

The above are the best of the collection for commercial culture, but there are others of considerable promise which we have not space to describe as Pacific, Montenegrin, President Wilson and Polar Bear.

The above varieties were free from rogues, and all the varieties indicate a very great advance in the winter-flowering section.

Of the varieties received from other growers, Selma Swenson is a large to very large waved, pale lilac-rose with light violet-rose wings.

This season in the open ground we have seventy varieties of comparatively recent introduction, and about an equal number of the oldest varieties.

The latter we are growing to secure seed so that we may keep them for a few years. It is probable that the plants at Cornell are the only existing plants of some of these old varieties which are so interesting to those of us who wish to note the progress in the evolution of sweet peas. These, of course, were sown in the open ground.

The new varieties referred to were not received until the latter part of March, probably because of the war, and were sown in pots at once. Had we been able to forecast April conditions this year, we should have sown them in the open because when we did transplant we had a dry period which tended to check the plants.

They are now beginning to bloom, although the amount of growth is less than usual. It is too early to estimate the real worth of these varieties. What I shall say, therefore, is only tentative and subject to revision. At present we consider:

STARK'S GIANT BUFF. This with us is the largest waved variety of its class.

DUCHESS OF PORTLAND (Dobbie, 1915). A very large cream-pink.

ALFRED (Dobbie, 1915). A good sized clear pale lavender.

BLUE PICOTEE (Dobbie). Appears to surpass all other blue Picotees.

ROBERT SYDENHAM. The first flowers of this have proved a disappointment to us for it burns. We have had very unusual weather in that we have had frequent heavy rains alternated with bright sun. Possibly settled weather would result in better flowers, although the fault is not an uncommon one among the varieties of this color section.

STARK'S SOFT SALMON. Is a pretty thing; but we wish to see more of it.

KING WHITE. Is the leading exhibition white, and WEDGEWOOD appears likely to supplant the other waved blues.

Brooklands' Queen, Sincerity, Dobbie's Orange, Spitfire and others may prove desirable.

We hope that conditions may be better this fall and that we can receive seeds earlier next year for outdoor growing.

In closing let me urge the members of this society to use their influence to get varieties for the trial grounds. This fall we shall have better facilities for testing winter-flowering sweet peas than we have ever had before. We shall have a new modern house forty feet wide at our disposal, and the tests will be made under commercial conditions as we plan to use the house and crop as an object lesson in growing winter-flowering sweet peas. If we can secure all the varieties now in the trade for trial with our present notes, we can later issue another publication bringing the subject up-to-date.

The Cleveland Flower Show committee report the A. L. Randall Company of Chicago have taken prominent space, also J. Neidinger of Philadelphia and that they have many inquiries from other live dealers and manufacturers.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met at the office of President S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, on Tuesday, July 20. The appointment of Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill., and John H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, Ontario, as judges for the rose exhibits at the Cleveland Flower Show to be held in the Coliseum in Cleveland from November 10 to 15, was confirmed. Robert Scott & Sons of Sharon Hill, Pa., offer a special prize of $25 at this show.

The Hartford Rose Garden Committee, consisting of John F. Huss, Wallace R. Pierson and Alex. Cumming, Jr., report:

On the 25th of June the new roses of the test garden at Elizabeth Park, Hartford, Conn., were closely examined and silver medals were awarded as follows:

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.—Climbing American Pillar. Scored 85 points. Highly recommended as pillar rose.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.—Killarney Queen. Scored 85 points. Recommended as a grand bedding rose.

Hoopes, Bro. & Thomas Co., West Chester, Pa.—Purity, Hybrid Wichuriana. Scored 87 points. A splendid grower that is recommended for every collection and garden.

Hoopes, Bro. & Thomas Co., West Chester, Pa.—Climbing American Beauty. Scored 87 points. A grand profuse bloomer deserving to be recommended for every garden.

Hugh Dickson, Ltd., Belfast, Ireland.—Lady Pirrie. Scored 85 points. Recommended as a splendid bedding rose.

Edward Kress, 2506 North Ave., Baltimore, Md.—Registered as Defiance. Scored 85 points. Highly recommended as a most excellent bedding rose.

There have been added a number of new varieties of American origin this spring which will be watched with great interest in the future, and more are promised for the planting in coming fall. Much interest has been especially devoted to this test garden by the lovers of roses, and the garden has been unusually well visited this season.

John F. Huss, Wallace R. Pierson, Alex. Cumming, Jr., Committee.

The National Flower Show to come off in Philadelphia next spring is gaining a good deal of attention and interest from the rose growers around Philadelphia.

The Waban Rose Conservatories presented for registration two new roses, as follows:

Mrs. Bayard Thayer—A sport from Mrs. Charles Russell. Flower is large and full. Color outside of petals deep rose, inside clear silver pink. Foliage large and very dark green, perfectly flat, has no tendency to curl as is sometimes the case with Mrs. Charles Russell.

Mrs. Moorfield Storey—A seedling. General McArthur X Joey Hill. A large full rose with heavy dark foliage. Color shell pink deeper towards the center, tip of petals deep rose.

There were directed to be accepted and published in accordance with the rules of the American Rose Society.

The Cleveland Rose Show was discussed and the desirability of holding a meeting in that city during the show was advocated, and a motion made to that effect was carried.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Attention A. C. S. Members.

The Department of Floriculture of the University of Illinois is conducting experiments for the purpose of determining the cause of, and a remedy for the disease known as yellows among carnations. These experiments were started last year and have advanced far enough to promise definite results. There is perhaps no work in which the members of the A. C. S. could be more vitally interested, on account of the prevalence of this disease and the damage it is doing the carnation industry.

In order to carry on these experiments successfully and to arrive at definite conclusions, they require material from all sections of the country and to that end we ask that all members of the A. C. S. forward to them a limited number of each variety showing these light spots (in the red and

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY SHOW.

Museum of Natural History, New York City, Sept. 24, 25, 26, 1915.

When the doors of this grand building are opened to the public on Sept. 24, we expect to have the greatest variety and best collection of dahlias ever gotten together anywhere in all their different types and classes. New seedlings and some of the newer varieties that have been either grown here or imported and not hitherto exhibited, will be shown for the first time at this meeting. There will be some seven hundred or eight hundred varieties grown by Prof. F. H. Hall, of the New York Experiment Station at Geneva, with other trial and experiment lots from other sections. We shall aim to have some one present who will explain the planting, growing and handling of dahlias for the garden. The Executive Committee have requested the retail florists to put up an exhibit of their decorative art and skill in showing the possibilities of this beautiful, many colored and exquisitely shaped flower. Each and every one will be given space free of charge to put up whatever they wish in table decorations, bouquets, baskets and vases of any design that will show the possibilities of the dahlia for ornamental and design work in its season.

The American Dahlia Society is the youngest society claiming notice, but is vigorous for its age and growing.

The society is backed by good and experienced men who understand their business and will make an earnest effort to win the good opinion of their fellow craftsmen as well as the rest of the American public, especially the lovers of the beautiful dahlias.

RICHARD VINCENT, JR., Pres.

CLEVELAND FLORISTS' CLUB PICNIC.

The big event of the week was the annual picnic of the Cleveland Florists' Club. This proved to be the best one the club has ever held, both from the standpoint of attendance and general satisfaction. It was held at Willoughbeach Park located on Lake Erie, 18 miles east of Cleveland. There were about 250 in attendance. The two ball games proved very exciting and held the interest of the crowd. The first was indoor base ball, the retailers against the wholesalers. It was won by the retail men, the score being 9-7. The second game was regulation base ball, won by the wholesalers after a hard fought battle. The long program of miscellaneous athletic events and races proved very interesting and provided much enjoyment for the crowd. Fred Witthuhn said he would have won the fat man's race if his breath had held out for the full distance. As it was he landed third place. The last event provided lots of fun for the boys who participated and the on-lookers. About 15 boys each buried his face in a quarter of a big juicy watermelon and kept it there until nothing remained but the rind. Strange to say these boys did not care for any of the picnic lunch after finishing this event.

The Scores.

Indoor Baseball—Wholesale, 7; Retail, 9. Wholesale—H. Bate, Al. Lingruen, Kerr, Wilson, S. Berthold, Talcott, Baird, Geo. W. Smith, C. Bastian, Rotter. Retail—A. Barber, Tim Smith, C. Gra-

FLORISTS' CLUB OF WASHINGTON.

The annual outing of the Florists' Club of Washington, held last Wednesday at Great Falls, Va., will go down into the club's history as another of the famous events which serve to lighten the cares and worries of the florists and bring sunshine into the lives of the little ones.

Despite the predictions of the weather man of forty days of continued rain, the day broke fair and cool, making possible the holding of a large number of athletic events. Charlie Chaplin, the famous comedian, had got wind of the outing and had loaned his facial and physical makeup to Samuel Ball, who created a great deal of merriment. The fun started when the special cars left from Georgetown. Identification tags were distributed that no one might get lost. Then came corsage bouquets for the ladies, boutonnières for the men, and popcorn and peanuts for the kiddies.

Upon arriving at the Great Falls station the first number on the program was the refreshment booth events, awaiting the assault of the three hundred florists, their families and friends.

In addition to the races, quoit and baseball games, there was dancing, bowling, movies and finally fireworks.

The schedule of games and the winners were as follows: Potato race for girls—1st, Rose Minder; 2d, Elizabeth Dove; 3d, Mary Higbee; for small girls—1st, Helen Barry; 2d, E. Marche; 3d, M. Dauphin; for boys—1st, Edgar Burnham; 2d, Granville Gude; 3d, Teddy Schmid; open to all—1st, A. Ford; 2d, E. Smith. Potato race for ladies—1st, Miss D. B. Barry; 2d, Mrs. J. Richards. Flag race for girls—1st, Rose Minder; 2d, Mary Higbee; 3d, Mary Clark. 100-yard dash for men—1st, F. G. Weaver; 2d, Arthur Shaffer. 50-yard dash for ladies—1st, Miss Victoria Wilbur; 2d, Miss A. Barry; 3d, Miss Marie Coli. 100-yard dash for boys—1st, Herbert Moreland; 2d, George Hostetter. Three-legged races for boys won by Albert Ford and Harry Kimmel; for men, Albert Schnell and F. G. Weaver. The 100-yard dash for members of the club brought out a big line-up. This was a real race and taxed the energies of Harry Ley, who won, and George C. Shaffer who secured 2d.

A half-dozen pieces of jewelry and fine china were the inducements offered to the ladies to try their skill in depositing balls in a basket. The main prize was a handsome diamond bracelet, valued at $20. This event was won from a field of more than fifty by Miss Bernice Rigby. In the contest for married women Mrs. George C. Shaffer was 1st, Mrs. David J. Grillbortzer 2d and Mrs. George H. Cooke 3d, while the score of the single ladies showed the following winners: 1st, Miss Marie Coli; 2d, Miss D. B. Barry; 3d, Miss Phillips. R. L. McLellan was the winner in the quoits, singles; George C. Shaffer, 2d; William Clark, 3d. In the doubles R. L. McLellan and J. J. Barry were the winners, with George C. and Arthur J. Shaffer, 2d.

The baseball teams from the downtown stores won by a number of timely hits and good field work. Their opponents were picked from the Anacostia greenhouses. The score was 10 to 5. The teams were composed as follows: Storemen—Charles E. Scarborough (captain), p.; R. W. Doty, c.; I. Rosnosky, 1st b.; Frank Good, 2d b.; B. Carrick, 3d b.; John Cook, s. s.; E. Draper, c. f.; Thomas Featherstone, r. f.; James Daly, l. f. Greenhouse team—Edward Henning, s. s.; Elmer Padgett (captain), 2d b.; John Carroll, c. f.; Leslie Dix, 3d b.; H. Sauber, p.; Samuel Ball, c.; Walter Gordon, l. f.; John Smith, r. f.

Those who served on the general entertainment committee were O. A. C. Oenmler, chairman; George W. Hess, George C. Shaffer, William Marche, George H. Cooke, Edward S. Schmid, Jake Richards, David J. Grillbortzer, Theodore Diedrich, William F. Gude, Harry Lewis, William H. Ernest, Lloyd Jenkins, Otto Bauer, G. Milton Thomas, Clarence L. Linz and Fred H. Kramer.

ST. LOUIS CLUB PICNIC.

The St. Louis Florists' Club annual picnic held on Thursday, July 22, in Romona Park, was one of the most successful ever given and brought out the largest crowd yet. Chairman Rowe estimated the crowd at over five hundred, which speaks well. Everything they did was pleasing, the music was delightful, the prizes were handsome and in all the contests the entries were large. There were some new and pleasing games and all were carried out to the letter. The winners were as follows:

75 yard dash for men—1st, Oscar Ruff, 2nd, J. R. McAlister.

TWIN CITY FLORISTS' CLUB.

On Tuesday, July 20th, the St. Paul and Minneapolis florists departed

ZVOLANEK'S WINTER-FLOWERING SWEET PEAS.

Display at Panama-Pacific Exposition, Winning the Gold Medal of Honor.

Thirty-nine separate varieties of orchid sweet peas are planted in this bed. As the ground was not finished in time, the seed was sown the last week in January; they began to bloom the middle of April and promise to be still covered with blossoms for a considerable time yet.

The sub-soil all over the Exposition garden is quicksand, filled only about 10 to 15 inches with sandy loam, mixed with one-third old horse and cow manure and occasionally sprinkled with lime and bone meal. The flowers are picked mostly every day and exhibited in the Horticultural Building, and are a great attraction to thousands of visitors daily. According to the Exposition official report, this sweet pea exhibit is mostly admired by the visitors in the Exposition Garden.

In the picture is seen Wm. A. Leslie, the practical grower who has charge of the sweet peas, as well as of many other horticultural exhibits. Mr. Leslie is under the direct supervision of the landscape architect, Carl Purdy, who is now the Superintendent of the Exposition Horticultural Garden.

Both these gentlemen are hard and practical workers and many exhibitors in the Horticulture section as well as the general public have reason to be thankful for the excellent work they have accomplished.

CHICAGO FLORISTS' PICNIC.

The big picnic scheduled for July 25, at St. Paul's Park, Morton Grove, was not the success it would have been, on account of the boat disaster of the previous day. With over a thousand deaths in the city a gloom prevailed which made pleasure seeking distasteful to many. Had it not been for the preparations which had been made for the event it would have been called off, and notwithstanding the fact that all purchases had been made, the abandoning of the picnic would have met the approval of many. However, the trains and autos brought out a fair number and the usual picnic program was carried out.

CINCINNATI FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

The annual outing of the Cincinnati Florists' Society at Coney Island was a very successful affair due to the untiring efforts of the committee in charge. The baseball team captained by Chas. Windram won the ball game by the close score of 2-1, while P. Jackson was first in the bowling and C. E. Critchell was second.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON COMPANY, Inc., 342 West 14th St., NEW YORK

THE LURE OF MAINE AND OF THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

Eastward Ho! is turning the tide of vacationists away from more distant lands. It is turning the tide toward Maine and its thousand charms. For there are found summer pleasures of every kind, fitted to every taste and desire.

For the lover of woods and lakes there are wonderful tramps through a beautifully rugged and wild country. There are mountains to climb, lakes to be crossed, rivers to follow, streams to ford, "carries" to enjoy, old Indian landmarks to be discovered. The entire region is filled with Indian lore.

For the canoeist there are chains of lakes and rivers to be traveled—innumerable trips into wild and uninhabited country.

For the lover of the sea, there is the journey there and back, bold sea cliffs with the waves beating at their feet, the whispering of the sea breeze in the tree tops, the tang of the salt air, the sailing, the surf bathing, the islands and bays.

For those who desire seclusion there are spots in the lake country where silence and peace and rest can be had.

Here also the fisherman and huntsman will find fish and game to their taste.

And for those who in summer are fond of social gayety, the distinction and elegance of the fashionable summer resort, there are noted places where the elite of America assemble.

Eastward Ho! is the call of Maine, the Maine coast and the lake country, and the call of the rugged Maritime Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland.—From "All the Way by Water," published by the Eastern Steamship Company.

Prospects for Belgian Shipments.

William F. Gude, as the representative of the S. A. F. and O. H., last week had a conference with Robert F. Rose, of the Office of the Foreign Trade Advisers of the State Department, with a view to obtaining information as to what might be expected in the matter of securing permits from Great Britain for the exportation from Belgium of seeds and ornamental plants and was informed that the State Department is now doing everything possible to facilitate matters and there is nothing further that can be done. Since June 15, following which the British Embassy has been unable to issue permits under which Belgian goods could go forward, the State Department has been following a different method of procedure. As each case is brought to attention the matter is transmitted to the American Consul General at London with instructions to co-operate with the Belgian Minister there. A telegram is also sent to the American consul stationed nearest to the location of the seed producer with instructions to ascertain whether or not the producer is Belgian and if the Germans would benefit through the transaction. This information is furnished to the American consul general and the entire matter is then placed before the British foreign office. This procedure has been followed in a number of cases lately and the State Department officials have high hopes that they will meet with favorable consideration at the foreign office.

Notes.

The value of imports of horticultural material at the port of New York for the week ending July 17, is given as follows: Nitrate of soda, $212,024; fertilizer, $164; clover seed, $3,283; grass seed, $15,018; trees and plants, $330.

We have noticed some reports to the effect that radish crops in Michigan would be almost total failures. Messrs. Isbell & Co. inform us they are glad to say that although forced to plow up one or two small fields, the prospects are that they will harvest a fair radish crop at least.

We have received from S. M. Isbell & Co., seed growers of Jackson, Mich., sets of post cards and blotters with cuts of some of the fields of crops being grown for seed for them and showing various processes of perfecting and curing cucumber, watermelon and other seeds of which Michigan is a prominent source of supply.

EXPRESS RATES INCREASED.

Washington, D. C.—The florist trade of the country is facing an increase of from one to five cents on each shipment over the lines of the Adams, American, Wells Fargo and Southern express companies. The Interstate Commerce Commission has granted the petition of these companies to rearrange the express rate basis. The following shows the proposed increases on first-class shipments. It is stated that certain weight will, however, differ slightly from the figures given due to the disposition of fractions, and not all shipments over 85 pounds will be increased:

1 to 5 pounds.....	each 5 cents
6 to 25 pounds.....	each 1 cent
26 to 35 pounds.....	each 2 cents
36 to 50 pounds.....	each 2 cents
51 to 75 pounds.....	each 2 cents
76 to 99 pounds.....	each 1 cent

The increase on second-class rates will be one-fourth less than the amounts stated. The increase in the rates covering shipments of plants will be from fifty to one hundred per cent higher than the figures given above.

The change in the rate structure will net the companies involved more than five million dollars per annum. It is claimed that for the year 1915, the companies will suffer a deficit of over two million dollars.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Market Gardening by F. L. Yeaw, an Elementary Text Book and a Practical, Reliable and Handy Guide for all Growers of Vegetables.

The Brooklyn Botanic Garden Record for this quarter, contains among other things an illustrated article on Rare Cycads from Australia by Dr. C. Stuart Gager.

Transactions of the Iowa Horticultural Society, 1914. Vol. 49. This Society sets a shining example which some other so-called State "Horticultural" Societies might copy with great advantage to the people of their respective states. This volume of nearly 500 pages is a real treasury of horticultural and botanical information, covering in a wide range of topics connected with orcharding, home gardening ornamental and vegetable, tree planting and care, study of native plants, etc., showing that the Iowa State Society exists and works for every phase of horticulture without bias for any. We know some florists in Iowa whose names do not appear on the list of members. We would respectfully suggest that this is one organization well entitled to their support. Wesley Greene, Des Moines, is secretary.

Bernardsville, N. J.—The fifth annual show of the Bernardsville Horticultural and Agricultural Society has been announced for September 1 and 2 in Bernard's Inn auditorium. The pick of the fruit, flowers and vegetables grown on the estates of millionaires in this vicinity will be on exhibit.

The number of visitors recorded at the Missouri Botanical Garden during June, 1915, was 20,989. The Bulletin for July contains useful contributions on Cannas and Water Gardens.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsHOW TO TREAT YOUR COMPETITORS.

A paper read before the Texas State Florists' Association by H. O. Hamble.

This is a friendly talk, part from experience, part from hearsay. We are here for our mutual benefit to cure the defects and to encourage in being and doing the right thing at the right time.

Your competitor is your best friend—you may say "a friend in disguise." He keeps you from being sordid, arrogant, selfish and perhaps unaccommodating. Hence, treat him fair, square, honorable, just, truthful and considerate. Remember the success of his business may often add to your success. No firm is going to sell all the flowers; each have their friends, and there is a place for him. Do your best, give the best flowers and plants; keep the most attractive store; arrange your flowers the most artistic; excel in all your decorations. Be original, be inventive, but never be a "copy cat," using your competitor's brain. Set the pace and let him follow.

Strive to excel. Make your own price and be sure to make it so it will leave you a profit. You owe this to your business and to your competitor and if he is a man he will do likewise. Be on good terms, visit him and his store, and never do anything that would cause you to avoid his presence or his confidence. Never do anything that will cause him to ask you why or wherefore the cause thereof. Honor and truthfulness should govern your acts toward him. Sell all the stock you can, but do it in the right way. Never, no never, let the thought occur to you to cut the price or quality to keep your competitor from making the sale. That is dishonorable.

If you are making prices on a large job of decorating, wedding, party or hall and you find out his prices and take same for almost half his price, making no money for yourself, but robbing him, this is almost "grand larceny." In furnishing figures for such occasions tell them, "We are not figuring against our competitor, but will make it complete and guarantee satisfaction." This is what we do, and if the other fellow wants it for glory, we do not. We are in business for money, and will seek glory and honor on other fields. We often cheapen work until the other fellow gets it, your customer knowing cheap price often means cheap work.

Never treat your competitor in any way that he will censure you either to your face or to your back. My competitors have never come to me and accused me in any way of being unfair to them, or to the trade. Truth prevails and lasts. Special sales for surplus is legitimate and honorable, but to make floral wreaths for 50c. or to sell carnations continuously for 25c. or 35c. per dozen, is disastrous, cheapens the goods, and can be no profit, or it any, very little. It costs in Texas to grow flowers, and to buy we all know there is a cost and expense. The trade wants good stock and is willing to pay for it.

Never pull crepe against your competitor nor allow your agents to do so.
This is dishonorable and unworthy of your profession. Remember you sell God's most gracious gift to man in all its sweetness and beauty—hence do not cheapen it nor tarnish it by little-ness or unworthy act. Never, never, cut your price, solely to keep your competitor from making the sale.
That is almost petty theft.

Tell the truth and expect it of your competitor. Never tell that an azalea, poinsettia or primrose will bloom all summer in order to make a sale. That is lying, and your competitor may be honorable. These things are done. I have known clerks to tell customers theirs was the only flower store, when there was one almost across the street.
For shame, you may some time make a sale by misrepresenting but a clear conscience is more than a few pennies.

We have R. R. Commissions to make the railroads "toe the mark," not to cut the prices, or to make rebates, and in many places florists need similar regulating. Permit me to say that we have two competitors, and we are on friendly terms; trade, loan or sell anything the other needs. I appreciate accommodating my competitors.

Never cheapen your goods by giving away a flower or corsage to almost every one that enters your store, trying to buy their trade. There are times to give judiciously. Flowers have value. Neither the dry goods men, nor the grocer nor the druggist, continuously give away their goods.
Then why should you? Don't make yourself cheap nor your stock common.
Flowers have value and dignity, if I may use the word.

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

CHICAGO.

Word has been received from Frank Oechslein saying that they were enjoying their western outing but that a man needed an overcoat, as it was so cold.

As a background, the windows of the George Wienhoeber store had two large wreaths of green and purple last Monday, out of respect to the great number of dead in the city.

Phil McKee made a visit to Lincoln last week to see how the big Gullett range is progressing. On his return he left immediately for a business trip for his firm which is finding the season a busy one for greenhouse builders.

James J. Marsh, president of the Farmers' and Florists' Fertilizer Co., left this week for a business trip to Davenport and other cities of the middle west. Mr. Marsh reports business as very good.

The J. C. Moninger Co. received a telegram from Wilcox & Sons, of Council Bluffs, Ia., saying that they had suffered a large loss of glass from a hail storm which struck their plant on July 18th.

It seems now as if the peonies lasted so long this season that they might help out with the great need for flowers this week. Those who have been wishing to see them all used up by July 15th are most glad now to know there is a good supply left in the storage houses.

It is gratifying to note one new user of flowers in a large way the past week. The largest cafeteria in the city, The Harmony, gave a flower to each of its patrons on July 26th. As the daily attendance averages from three to five thousand, it meant the use of many flowers, but better still, the example was a good one. All of the tables were provided with a small bouquet and each employee wore a flower.

The August flower show at Garfield Park Conservatories will include 800 lily plants of several varieties. Just now the main bed in the big show room is filled with blooming plants of Nicotiana hybrids and along the side beds the beautiful gloxinias and begonias are found. The old time favorite achimenes are there too and appeal to those who love the flowers of a generation ago. An interesting group of plants rarely seen in bloom in August is the Campanula Vidalii, native of the Canary Islands.

A rare sight at the Garfield Park Conservatories is thirty foot plants of Kentia Forsteriana bearing fruit. The clusters are about ten feet from the ground and hang directly from the trunk. The fruit is about the size and shape of a sweet acorn and when cut open resembles white wax. Mr. Koch gave a scientific explanation of the process of fertilization in this familiar palm which seldom bears fruit outside of its native country.

Another novelty was a Ricinus Zanzibarensis 25 ft. high, now three years old. This is commonly grown as an annual but is in reality a perennial. Mr. Koch explained that it rests in winter.

D. L. Harris, president of the Pulverized Manure Co. finds so far that business has not been affected by the European disturbances. He thinks the probabilities are that the growers will find that the use of so much potash is not so necessary as they have been led to believe, but that proper cultivation of the soil will largely take its place. Mr. Harris is very optimistic on the outlook for the fertilizer business in the near future, though now it is more or less affected by local conditions, as in the south owing to the loss of the cotton market. The Pulverized Manure Co. has just completed its third plant, which is located in Kansas City, Mo. The second one is in St. Louis, Mo., while the main plant is here in Chicago. Their manufactured tonnage has been the largest this year in the ten years of their existence.

A delegation of the St. Louis Association of Park Employees and their ladies, numbering twenty-two, visited Chicago, arriving Sunday, July 25th, and leaving for home July 28th. Among the number were General Supt. Ernst Strehle; head gardener for the city of St. Louis, John Moritz; landscape gardener Board of Education, Hugo Schaff; Supervisor of Play Grounds, Mr. Kidlans. They were met by Rudolph Schiele of the Northside Parks and Wm. O'Carroll of the University of Chicago. Sunday afternoon August Koch conducted them through Garfield Park and its conservatories. Monday morning a tour of the South Parks was made and Monday afternoon they visited Morton Grove and inspected the greenhouse establishment of Poehlmann Bros. Co. The visitors expressed themselves as much pleased with what Chicago has to offer in the way of parks and public play grounds.

Chicago is grief stricken over the terrible calamity of the capsized Eastland. Florists were singularly free from loss, although some were aboard the boat and some lost relatives. One of the fortunate to escape was Joe Eringer of Zech & Mann's. With his fiancée and four other young ladies he climbed over the rail on to the hull of the boat as it careened to the other side and they made their escape without getting into the water at all. Chas. Stehlek who is employed at Concordia Cemetery, lost a son and the young lady who was to have been his bride. Eleanor Hahn, of A. Lange's retail store was among those rescued from the river but her relatives were lost. Wm. Wichtendahl, one of Maywood's growers lost a brother on the boat. Among F. Oechslein's force George Kirchoff was refused admission as the boat was filled and thereby his life was probably saved. The accident, which cost over a thousand lives, naturally made a sudden change in the flower market, and on the afternoon of the same day (Saturday) increased demand for flowers began to be noticed. On Sunday it was more apparent and by Monday every florist in the city was making up flowers for the many funerals, which will be held throughout the week.

BOSTON.

E. Allan Peirce is entertaining his friend William Whiting of New York City.

The fishing trip in Boston harbor by a number of the dealers and salesmen in the Flower Exchange has been postponed until Thursday, August 5.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Welch, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Grey, will start on their western trip on Wednesday, August 4, expecting to reach San Francisco a few days before the Convention date.

David Welch of Welch Bros., Boston, has returned from his holiday at Rockland, Me., where he indulged liberally in his favorite exercise of horseback riding, looking the picture of robust health and virility.

ST. LOUIS.

The C. Young & Sons Co. have bought a new site on Oliver street road. A new range of houses will be built this summer. The old site is now mostly surrounded with buildings and is practically useless for growing and the land is too valuable for this purpose.

The Retail Florists' Association met July 19 at the Mission Inn Garden. J. F. Ammann was to be the speaker of the evening but Mr. Ammann failed to come. Secretary Weber reports that all the summer meetings will be held at the garden, the next meeting taking place Monday evening, August 16.

San Francisco - July and August are the months holding the records for conventions in San Francisco during the exposition period, August having the largest number and July next. Lodge conventions have brought many visitors the past week and among them are several florists. J. R. Steinhäuser of Pittsburg, Kan., is here with the Shriners and Elks. Carl Baum of Knoxville, Tenn., is here also, as well as Samuel Lundy of Denver, Colo.; R. C. Kerr of Houston, Tex.; Chas. P. Mueller of Wichita, Kan., and Vincent Gorly of St. Louis, Mo., has just left for the southern part of the state after spending several days in San Francisco. He expects to remain in the state until after the S. A. F. convention.

Mrs. J. Wessell, secretary of the Ladies' California Floral Society, has resumed her duties with Pelicano, Rossi & Co., after a short vacation. She says the women are taking considerable interest in their new organization.

Cincinnati — Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Miss Ada Kresken and Lawrence Kresken have signified their intention of attending the S. A. F. convention and the Frisco Fair.

Wm. Gear has the formal opening of his new store on Saturday the 31st of this month.

LIBERTY BELL FLOAT DECORATION.

By Pellano, Rossi & Co.

The principal feature of the celebration in San Francisco on July 17th, commemorating the arrival of the Liberty Bell from Philadelphia, was the handsome float carrying it from the downtown business section to the Exposition grounds. Angelo J. Rossi was chairman of the parade committee, and his company carried out the decoration of the float, which was one of the largest cutflower decorations ever seen in this city. Ten thousand American Beauty roses were used, six thousand carnations and quantities of cornflowers. The roses shrouded the truck and supports of the bell, and red and white carnations and cornflowers were used for the representation of a flag, five by eight feet, appearing on either side, as well as for five shields around the float. Mr. Rossi says it took fifteen men about forty-eight hours to complete the job.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON There is no flower business to speak of this week. Summer resort orders are beginning to materialize at the wholesale houses, but these calls are not large and they take only the selected stock and make no impression on the general market condition which is exceedingly dull. Gladioli are the strongest item on the list, but the asters are rapidly moving up to the firing line. Some of the gladioli are the finest ever seen here. America, Mrs. Pendleton, Mrs. Wigman, Halley and other high-class sorts, with flowers measuring five inches across are bringing from $4.00 to $6.00 per 100, while the common grades stick at $1.00. Aster quality is improving. In roses the Hadley and Ophelia are coming in fine form, and sell fairly well. In fact, all roses are of satisfactory quality, everything considered. Carnations have practically quit the game for the present. Sweet peas are very poor, due to the many heavy rains. Lilies too plentiful.

BUFFALO The market is full of gladioli. There is a good quantity of carnations. Roses were still plentiful up to a few days ago. Lilies have not been so abundant for some time. It would seem that every grower has gone into the lily growing business and all crops are on at the same time. Asters are gradually coming on and the season's outlook is promising. Some choice stock is now received though not in heavy supply. Beauties are still plentiful, but sales lacking. The best roses are Shawyer, Maryland and Double White Killarney. The latter has sold exceptionally well of late. Sweet peas are holding out well. The recent rains have helped them along considerably.

CHICAGO The awful tragedy of the week end exemplified the old adage "It's a poor wind that blows no one good." With the summer business dependent so largely upon funeral work, a thousand deaths in the city quickly changed market conditions. The wholesalers felt the change first, but a few hours after the overturning of the excursion boat in the Chicago River, and as the days went by flowers cleaned up as they had not done before in weeks. The rose supply was shorter because of the very wet season causing an unusual amount of mildew with many growers. Prices advanced rapidly in proportion to the demand and even very short stemmed roses brought three cents. Carnations are not in very good condition and asters are still short in stem for the most part, but the great number of designs helped to work off all of them to advantage. The stock of peonies in storage came in very handily and this week will probably see the last used up. Gladioli have not been much in favor this year and the pails have stood on the counters waiting for customers who did not come, but they served to help out in the sudden strain put upon the market. Ferns have been looked upon so long as a staple that cannot fail, that this midsummer experience is a new one. The constant rain in northern Wisconsin has flooded the fern land and a shortage is the result.

Local business is very dull. The supply of stock of all kinds is very heavy while the demand is not at all active. As a result the market is overloaded and prices are low. The cut of roses is large but business in them is not very active. Gladioli are having a very bad season as far as sales are concerned. They are very plentiful. Asters are now coming in very heavy and are backing up. Lilies are excellent and offered in large quantities. Other offerings include some very fine hardy hydrangea, pond lilies and auratum.

NEW YORK The amount of business being done in the wholesale market is still very small with no tangible evidence to indicate any early improvement. Gladioli are the heaviest product now offered and every available place is crowded with them. America, Halley, Mrs. King, Pink Beauty and others of the newer varieties have practically supplanted the old favorite kinds formerly grown in quantity for this market. Holland grown bulbs of American varieties at slaughter prices have simply broken the back of the gladioli market here and elsewhere. Roses are not very abundant nor very good but there are enough. Carnations are about down and out but there are asters in plenty. These are really good for so early and the outlook for good asters was never better. As to what they will bring "that's another story." Cattleyas are much reduced in quantity and it is possible to get an occasional good figure for really good flowers. Lilies continue to come in far beyond the capacity of the market, the low figures prevailing for some weeks past still continuing. Bulbs of particularly good finish are seen here and there. Everything else is in adequate supply.

PHILADELPHIA Very little improvement is noted over the poor conditions reported in your previous issue. There is still a large oversupply, but the roses are easing up a little and it looks as if the gladiolus crop would be past the worst by the 31st. The asters are of excellent quality and becoming a more important factor in the market as the days roll by. The cut is very large and more than ample for all demands. Carnations are getting scarcer and of course the quality corresponds. Lily of the valley and lilies are normal, both as to supply and demand. Good delphinium is still a feature—mostly the Belladonna. Orchids have slackened up a little in supply. The greens market is only fair.

SAN FRANCISCO Business for the past week has been excellent according to reports from both the wholesale and retail florists. Many visitors are here to attend one or more of the various conventions and gatherings in session at this time, while others are attracted solely by the wonders of the Exposition. Many festivities are in order and the florists are sharing in the benefits. There is much call for decorative work, and counter trade for cut flowers is very satisfactory, much better in fact than ever before for the month of July. Prospects are good for August, also, as that month holds the record for the largest number of conventions during the Exposition period. Stock continues plentiful, but the surplus does not amount to much. The carnation situation is much improved since the new market system went into effect, as it seems to be working out nicely. Asters show improvement both in quantity and quality, but the offerings are still under standard and the prices are rather low. Within two weeks, however, good quality is expected, as the first arrivals are never so good here as the flowers coming in a little later. Sweet peas are still in ample supply, and show fair quality. Some fine specimens of gladioli are being shown, but the supply of the best stock is limited. Dahlias are plentiful with a heavy demand. Both cut and potted hydrangeas are moving well. Much coreopsis is being used, as well as large quantities of godetias, scabias, stocks, etc. Roses have cleaned up closely the past week, especially American Beauties, which were in rather light supply and much in demand. Tiger lilies are arriving quite freely and are readily absorbed. Gardenias are still plentiful, but orchids have been rather scarce for over a week.

ST. LOUIS There is no great amount of business in the flower line. The retailers are having their troubles with dull business; the wholesalers are having theirs in disposing of the large amount of stock that comes in daily. This is pronounced to be the poorest summer the trade has had for many years back. Prices on everything are cheap. All grades suffer alike, but extra quality has the call and poor stock is dumped as a rule. Second and third grade roses and carnations

St. Paul Minn.—St. Paul Floral Co., Frank Gustafson, prop. Liabilities, $4,099.53; assets, $2,692.42.

Henry G. Martin, florist at 39 Genesee street, Utica, N. Among the florist trade creditors are Brant Bros., $219 and S. A. Pinkstone $165, both of Utica.

J. Woodward Manning, a landscape architect, of Wilmington, Mass., filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy admitting liabilities of $29,547.71. Of this amount $20,000 is a secured claim held by Joseph J. Bond of Reading. There are more than 70 unsecured claims aggregating $9,547.71. The petitioner's assets amount to $42,150 and include encumbered real estate valued at $37,150 and personal property, covered by a bill of sale to Joseph J. Bond, valued at $5,000.

Bridgewater, Mass.—Seventeen state-lime shade trees, many of them over 100 years old, have been killed by gas leaking through alleged faulty mains in Bridgewater, and citizens, who say many of the trees are priceless, have brought claims against the Brockton Gas Company, demanding in some cases $1,000 per tree.

The gas company has signified its willingness to remove the dead trees and plant others in their place, besides offering a substantial cash bonus, but Tree Warden Robert McNelan claims the trees to be worth much more than what is offered. He asserts that the loss of good healthy shade trees on property decreases the valuation at least 20 per cent.

CALOSOMA BEETLE FOE TO GIPSY MOTH.

Insect Imported for the Purpose, Most Successful in Attacking Pest.

The calosoma beetle, which was introduced into New England in order to combat the gipsy moth, is declared by entomologists in the United States Department of Agriculture to have firmly established itself in its new environment. The first of these green beetles was sent from Europe in 1905. Between then and 1910 a little over 4,000 of the insects were shipped to this country. They have multiplied and spread with extraordinary rapidity and are now so abundant that many people in New England are familiar with their appearance and habits.

Investigations show that these insects, both as beetles and as larvae, consume enormous quantities of the gipsy moth larvae. They are able to climb the trees upon which their prey are feeding and are most active during the periods when the gipsy moths are abundant. The calosoma beetle, in fact, seems to be admirably adapted in every way to destroying the gipsy moth. It is not apparently injured by the wilt disease which is so prevalent in its prey, and neither is it apparently affected by the sprays used to con-

A new professional paper of the United States Department of Agriculture, Bulletin 251, contains a detailed description of the calosoma beetle, its distribution, life history and habits.

"THE NURSERY BUSINESS AS A BUSINESS PROPOSITION."

A Paper read before the American Association of Nurserymen, at Detroit, Mr. W. H. Wymann.

Unwise Policies.

Nurserymen are beset by dangers from without and foes from within their own camp. It is for the elimination of some of these deterrent factors that I beg every one of you to give due consideration. The plunger is a party to be avoided. The man who sells 10,000 Viburnum plicatum at a profit, year after year, starts in to increase that product by propagating 100,000. That is the man I would style a plunger, and the man who should be dissuaded from such folly. I simply use Viburnum plicatum as an illustration. The market calls for about such a number of plants of a given species. The number increases from year to year as the volume of nursery business increases; and every growing concern has a right to increase its plantings; but it has no moral right to propagate any article so much in excess of the legitimate demand that it is compelled, in order to unload, to do so at any price regardless of cost. I say we have no moral right to such a course. There may be no written law forbidding me to sell an article for any price I please; but there is a moral law that forbids my doing so. No man has a right deliberately to destroy the opportunities of livelihood and of gain for any other man. Such a course works hardship to the many and ruin to a possible few. The course of the plunger leads from bad to worse. It is loading the dice in the game of business. It is to invite financial disaster upon the perpetrator and disaster upon others.

The logical result of plunging in production is price-cutting at the selling end. The grocer who begins his career by cutting prices below a reasonable percentage of profit, works no good to a community. He is the man who should be shunned. He disturbs values and throws legitimate business out of the normal. He may run along for a while and make a big bluster in his community; but the day is sure to come when he, in a night, like the Arab of the desert, will fold his tent and get away, or, what may be worse, have his tent folded for him by order of the courts.

The result is, legitimate business has suffered; the public has become bewitched by the bargain counter idea in trade, and no one has been benefited. The legitimate child of plunging in production is price-cutting, that works no good to any and much harm to all. It may be urged that price-cutting is sometimes indulged in by those who do little if any producing. That is true. Hawkers and dry goods houses cut under the nurseryman in selling a few articles such as roses, California privet and the like; but they are in a class by themselves, some plunger or inconsiderate nurseryman?

The Wiser Course.

These are evils which we should set ourselves to correct. I fancy I hear some one saying, "what shall be done when everybody has gone wild in production; when such a condition prevails again, as that which pertained the past season, as in the case of apple trees?" Probably no one will learn anything from his folly in the past, and the majority will cut and slash prices again, should occasion arise; and advertise far and wide, "Apples for five cents to the trade, and ten cents to the public, and if not ten cents, then anything."

This is what has happened within six months, and it is what will probably happen until we nurserymen become sane and sensible business men. Under such circumstances, what and for this very nuisance the nurserymen are themselves responsible. What nurseryman will lower the dignity of his business by considering for one moment the prices at which these people, who have no investment in the business, but who sell stock they have been able to procure from should we do? We should be men and have some "esprit de corps" for our craft. We should set our price where it will give us a reasonable profit, and we should stick to that price when once it has been established. In that event we may not sell all of our stock, quite true; but we shall get as much money for what we sell at a reasonable price, as we shall for all of it, sold at any ridiculously low price, and we shall not have ruined our prospects for another year.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

The Disposition of the Surplus.

What do, then with the surplus? By all means burn it. The bonfire is one of the best paying propositions in such a case. When prices are so reduced, it follows that quality suffers. When selling so cheaply everything must go. When there is an overabundance, the highest standards of quality should be maintained. There is no time when an article cannot be marketed at a profit, if only men will hold themselves to the proposition that they will not sell unless it can be done at a fair percentage of gain.

This does not follow that we have got to come together in convention and attempt to set a price on our wares; nothing of the kind. To attempt that would be to invite disaster. But we can, every one of us, say that if we cannot sell our stock at a profit, we will not sell at all. The result will be that if we hold to that proposition we shall all sell enough of our stock so that we shall all make some money, even if we are obliged to burn a part of it. If we cannot make money we are inviting disaster, and the quicker we hoist the white flag and go out of business the better for what possessions we may have and for the business in which we are engaged.

Quality Always Counts.

In the event of each man fixing his price based upon the cost, plus a reasonable profit, there would be no uniformity of price, and that is what we do not want. That would work injustice, for there is not and never can be a uniformity in quality of stock and of service. In the nature of things these cannot be standardized, for the personal element enters into them.

When I purchase stock of a given size of one party, I am willing to pay more than I would for the same size stock from some other party. In the one case, I know that the name of the concern carries with it a degree of quality that I can depend upon. And this leads me to the crux of the whole matter. Our rivalry should not

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Lope.

Callas

To flower well during the early winter callas should be started now. Shake off all the old soil and pot into 6 or 7-inch pots in fibrous loam three parts and well decayed cow manure one part with good drainage. Place in a cold frame until the first week in September. Any that are soft and flabby or show spots of mouldy decay and perhaps have already started a thin, spindly bit of growth should be discarded. New roots are cheap enough and most growers use none but fresh roots every year. Callas, although mighty thirsty when doing their best, are not aquatic plants and overwatering is harmful, so care should be exercised at this stage as they make roots slowly and are very likely to receive too much water.

Carnations

No further delay should be allowed in getting the houses refilled. Just now most carnation growers are busily engaged in replanting their houses or at least refilling the benches preparatory to replanting. It is surprising how quickly a plant will respond to the effects of moisture when it is dry and I think it is better to let the plant draw its first moisture from the new soil rather than to saturate it before planting. If your carnation field in close to the house do not dip the roots in water but get them planted just as soon as you can. If, however, they will have to be out of the soil four or five hours it is better to dip them.

Cattleyas

It is always safer to allow plants of this genus to get quite dry between waterings. Have you ever noticed how healthy a plant will look when it has been overlooked for several days at a time when you were soaking the other plants around it? If not, try the experiment and it will demonstrate how easy it is to overwater orchids, even in the summer months. On clear, warm days a syringing will be beneficial. Be sure, however, that the foliage is dry before nightfall. Do not close the ventilators at night if the nights get rather cool. Never mind if the temperature drops to 55 degrees, it will not hurt the plants half so much as shutting up the house and creating a stuffy atmosphere. Always keep the ventilators open as these orchids want air and the surest way to ruin them and make them send out quantities of roots into the air rather than into the pots is to keep them close and stuffy.

Primulas

Now is a good time to make a sowing of primulas that will bloom good from the end of February and until Easter. From the date of sowing until the time of blooming primulas usually require about seven months. In sowing use shallow boxes or seed pans filled not quite full with a mixture of light loam, leaf mold and sand. If the seeds are soaked in water for a day and night more even germination will be obtained. If the seeds are fresh, which is of vital importance, the young seedlings will be ready for pricking out in five or six weeks from time of planting. For this instead of pots use flat boxes or seed pans filled with a mixture of one part common soil and two parts of peat. When the young plants have three or four leaves pot them in small pots rather loosely and not too deep. These primulas can be placed in a frame where they can have lots of air.

Seeds to Sow

Now that we are coming to the end of summer we will have to think of seed sowing. Pansies intended for outdoor blooming next spring, English daisies and forget-me-nots may be sown now. They can be sown in a frame where the top surface has been made fine and light by the addition of some leaf mold and sand. Myosotis dissitiflora is one of the best forget-me-nots for early blooming and it pays to have a few at least of Giant Flowering Bellis. Transplant the little ones when large enough to handle to about four inches apart and they may remain that way without much protection through the winter.

Propagating Sand

This is the time of the year to lay in propagating sand. From now on there will always be something to propagate. Figure out how much you may need of this very important article and place the order. Prepare a place under shelter where it can be kept dry and clean.

Next Week: Chrysanthemums; Mulching Mixture; Roman Hyacinths; Poinsettias; Stock Geraniums; Supply of Leaf Mold.

A Beautiful Rose Garden

Our cover illustration this week gives a glimpse into the rose garden of Miss S. B. Fay at Woods Hole, Mass. This garden contains what we believe to be the finest collection of roses in this country. It is under the care of the renowned rose hybridist, M. H. Walsh, and here are to be seen unrivalled examples of the adaptability of his wonderful hybrid Ramblers to arch and pergola use. Excelsa, Debutante, Sweetheart and Lady Gay are among the varieties that so gaily festoon the arches seen in the picture but at the time the photograph was made they were not yet bloomed out into their full glory. Through the vista may be seen the plantation of Hybrid Teas, which is worth going a long distance to see because of the great number of varieties under cultivation and of the luxuriance of their growth and perfection of the blooms. Woods Hole has a remarkably fine climate for rose growing. It is, in fact, the ideal spot in which to bring to perfection the Queen of Flowers and the rose loving proprietor of this beautiful garden and her skillful gardener have taken fullest advantage of it. Roses growing in this Rose Eden never experience what a really dry atmosphere is and scorched or discolored petals are here practically unknown.

A good start

The Philadelphia Record of Sunday, July 25, presents a fine picture of the plantations that have been made in the grounds around Convention Hall in that city, together with a detailed description of the plans and schedule for the National Flower Show to be held there next spring. The plantings have been done by H. A. Dreer and H. F. Michell Company. They are intended as a sort of "curtain raiser" to prepare the people of Philadelphia for the great attractions which are in prospect for them.

No doubt, also, these enterprising firms will benefit considerably by the publicity they will acquire through this course and no one will begrudge it to them. It certainly is an excellent thing for the S. A. F. and should prove a material help in the advertising campaign which must be vigorously carried on when the time comes.

International affiliation

The Canadian florists are having their annual convention this week at London, Ont., and, judging from the very full program provided for the three days as scheduled, they will have had a most useful and enjoyable occasion, with business well interspersed with recreation and hospitality. The political line dividing the two countries should not be a barrier to a closer fraternal relationship than now exists between the Canadian florists' association and our own S. A. F. and there are many reasons why some sort of practical affiliation, without disturbance of existing autonomy, would be of mutual advantage. There have been several occasions in the past when the prospect for a closer co-operative understanding seemed quite favorable and it should not be a difficult problem now to formulate some feasible plan in that direction which would be acceptable to all concerned.

Wait for the "Special"

The eleventh annual Convention Number of HORTICULTURE is now in course of preparation and will, as far as we can make it, fill a worthy place in the line of uniformly successful Convention issues. As will be seen in the announcement on another page of this paper we have decided to depart on this occasion from the time-honored custom of putting out the Convention Number in advance of the Convention. On account of the peculiar conditions existing this year we propose to hold that issue back until the end of the Convention week, making a special feature of the report from San Francisco which we shall aim to have as complete as possible. That this number will all be eagerly perused by the trade generally, especially those east of the Mississippi, goes without saying, and its consequent value to the advertising trade will be exceptionally good. We hope our readers will wait until the progressive advertisers have spoken through HORTICULTURE's Convention Number before placing their orders for fall goods.

Where beauty should rule

Those of our readers who are engaged in the greenhouse business, either retail or wholesale, should take to heart and act upon the thoroughly wholesome and sagacious advice given by Mr. Ruzicka in this issue on the value of tidiness and cheerful adornment of the grounds surrounding the rose houses. As Mr. Ruzicka truly says, it is a valuable asset for any man seeking a position, that he hails from a place where this feature has not been overlooked. We believe that this will be more and more emphatically true as time goes along. The rude shacks with grounds uncared for which in bygone years were to be seen so frequently on the outskirts of any of the large cities are fast disappearing and the dignity and standing of the flower business has been vastly advanced by the character of the buildings of to-day and their better kept surroundings. There is yet room for much improvement, however, and it should be the determination of every greenhouse owner or manager that no establishment of any kind whatsoever should ever be suffered to outdo his own domain in external neatness and floral embellishment.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Scratching Over Benches

This should be done with care, for it is far more important than most greenhouse workers realize, and if done carelessly and in an offhand manner considerable harm may result. In the first place, the soil should never be broken up too fine. Let the surface stay lumpy and rough. It will be much easier to water, and the soil will stay open much better if it is left this way than when the lumps are all crushed fine, and the surface of the soil left smooth. Never scratch too deeply after the plants are rooted, as if this is done, a large number of the fine surface roots will be destroyed, and the plants checked, to say the least. Avoid using weeder, and other various devices used to scratch among the plants. Unless these are handled by well experienced men, more damage than good will result from their use. We find that the average unskilled man will dig around the plants far too deeply, taking out big chunks of sod and tearing these to pieces without any consideration for the welfare of the plants. Keep the benches rubbed over to keep the weeds all down, and the surface of the soil all open, but do not scratch too deeply.

Watering

As soon as the plants begin growing, and the roots start working in the soil, the area that is watered must be increased, so that the plants do not suffer. The new roots pushing out from the original ball will be very tender, and when they come in contact with the hot dry soil they will die, and this must not happen, as it is very important to keep the plants going all the time. To see how the roots are progressing, scratch the earth away here and there, and see how far they have penetrated into the new soil. Try to keep the soil wet just half an inch or so beyond this circle. When the plants happen to be quite dry, as sometimes occurs during these hot summer days, take care not to wet the foliage when watering, as it is apt to burn the same as it would when the plants are dry and are syringed. It is best to train all men to water without wetting any leaves at all, no matter what the weather is, and then the grower is always on the safe side. There is no sense in splashing the water all over the place for this work is as important as any other in rose growing and should be done equally as neatly and as well.

Staking and Tying

With the late planting this year there will still be a good many houses to be staked and tied. It is well to dip the ends of all stakes into good metallic paint, dipping only the portion that is to go into the soil. Dip the stakes ten or twenty at a time, doing the work outside in the hot sun, rather than in the potting shed. As soon as the stakes are dry they can be used. Do not use tar or any preparation containing tar or creosote, as the latter are harmful and although the little tar that would go on the end of a stake may not harm the plant seriously, it is best not to take any chances. See that the stakes are placed all on one side of the plants, and as nearly straight as possible. It may not make much difference in the returns whether the stakes are straight or not, but it adds much to the appearance of the place, and if this work is not done neatly, it is bound to suggest carelessness on somebody's part, for it does not take any longer to do the work neatly. In tying the plants the first time, it is well to use good strong white cord, as these first knots will have to weather the syringing, etc., for a whole year, and it is not nice to have the cords break toward spring and the plants lay all over. Another point to watch is to see that the plants are not bunched too much. If this is done they are bound to lose leaves or else be difficult to keep clean of spider and spot. Beauties should never be tied to stakes, as they will suffer in the long run, and cannot be handled nearly so well as when they are tied to wires. Be sure to use five wires to the four rows of plants, as less than that is unhandy in all the operations that follow. Be sure that the wood is well distributed when tying the first time. This will have an effect on number of roses cut, and the better the growth is distributed, the better chance there is for more roses. If Beauties are tied while they are still single stems, they should all be tied on a slant to the north, not using the front wire at all. This will help let the sun strike the foot of the plants where they are bound to break, whereas if they were tied up straight, or else slanted south, these bottom breaks would not have as much show as they should have. The above refers to plants in houses running east and west, or nearly so.

Perennials

It is not too late yet to sow some seed of the favorite perennials, cultural directions for which will be found elsewhere in HORTICULTURE, and the few dollars invested in these plants will be well spent, for the place that looks bright and cheerful with flowers here and there around the outside of the packing sheds and greenhouses, is always the one that is most prosperous, and the men employed on a place like that are proud of it as a rule and have little trouble to secure positions in case they have to leave. A Dorothy Perkins rose, or other varieties of this type planted here and there to climb over a fence which would otherwise be an eyesore, will do wonders in changing the looks of the place. Most of this work can be done without neglecting anything inside; in fact, we have known cases where men would be glad to do the work at noon or at night, just to see the place look better. It is well worth trying, and as soon as the men become interested in the work, it will be a simple matter to keep the place in shape.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH

(A paper read before The Texas State Florists' Association by Bird Forrest of Waxahachie, Tex.)

"Growing Carnations for Profit," means growing them so as to get the very largest possible returns from the plants with the smallest possible outlay, consistent with growing good stock, and the profits will be larger if you err on the side of more attention than is absolutely necessary, than they will if you are a few hours late in watering, a few days late in putting on supports, or cultivating, and neglect the red spider till he gets hold.

Our conditions are entirely different in many respects, to those of our brothers further north. Our stock must be rooted much earlier to be established in the pots before the sun gets too hot, and to be ready for our earlier planting in the field. Also the period when there are no outdoor flowers is much shorter here. So, we must use every effort to get as much as possible out of our stock during our shorter period. This makes it necessary that we have heavy, stocky plants to bench; plants that will get right to work; that we give them the best of soil in the benches, and constant care and attention; to see that they are planted just the right depth; that they get enough, and still not too much water; that weeds and grass are kept pulled out, and soil frequently stirred. Effective supports should be put on early. Given good plants at benching time, the year's returns depend on constant and prompt attention to the needs of the plants.

The varieties of carnations we now grow, originated in a cooler climate than ours. The cool nights come earlier in the fall and start the plants off vigorously while ours are sweltering in the heat. This disadvantage can be overcome to some extent by close attention to watering and spraying. Can't some of you more experienced growers breed up a strain of carnation that will be, you might say, native to our climate and more resistant to our hot, dry summer atmosphere? The proposed greenhouse at College Station would be useful along this line. Our greatest enemies to the carnation are red spider and stem rot. Red spider is easily handled by promptly spraying with arsenic every spot where they appear; one pound to ten pounds sugar made to a thick syrup or paste with warm water (not cooked). One ounce of this mixture to one gallon of water, put on with compressed air sprayer will keep them cleaned out. The mixture is not strong enough to be dangerous, as you would have to eat a big bunch of stems to get enough to hurt you. The past two years we have practically eliminated stem rot in the greenhouses by having our soil clean, clean benches and proper attention to watering at benching time.

We firmly believe in cement benches as the very best way to handle carnations inside. Our benches are cast in one piece, five feet wide, six inches deep, with plenty of drainage holes. When changing the soil several years ago, we emptied one bench, cleaned and whitewashed it, and filled it as we emptied the next one; that is, a man would carry out a bucket of old soil from bench number 2 and bring back a bucket of new soil for bench number 1, using the same bucket. This we found would leave a small quantity of old soil with the new—enough to transfer any disease or fungus that might be in the soil. We had an attack of club root four years ago. We then adopted the method of cleaning soil out of the entire house, washing the benches good and then giving them a thorough whitewashing. Also whitewashing shovels and buckets before handling the new soil to fill the benches. This almost eliminated the trouble, but we still had a little of it. We thought possibly the infection was carried on the carnation support stakes of which there is one to every plant. So, last season, in addition to other precautions, we soaked the stakes in whitewash. The past season we have been entirely free of it. Infection can also be carried in freesia and gladiolus bulbs that are grown in carnation benches. But these can easily be cleaned by washing in formaldehyde solution. In cleaning ours, we also put them in a candy bucket and poured a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide on them; putting a paper over the top to keep the fumes in. One or the other, or both of these plans effectively cleaned them.

No form of bench can be so easily cleaned and disinfected as the one piece cement bench. Also, it lasts a lifetime and cost of material is less than the cost of lumber to make the same bench. A cement bench five feet wide with three rows of legs spaced four feet apart costs less than thirty-five cents per running foot, including labor, gravel at $2.00 per yard, cement at 50c. per sack. We have on exhibition here a set of pictures of a cement bench in course of construction with notes on same. We will be glad to give any information wanted to those inquiring. No, we don't want to sell you one, but just to help along. This may be considered a digression from the subject in hand, but we believe anything that tends to lessen the cost of production is pertinent to the subject, and cement benches that never need repairs, do not decay, do not hold bugs, insects and fungus diseases from year to year are certainly an item when it comes to keeping down expenses. To get back to carnations, these are a few of the things we have found essential: Healthy stock from which to take cuttings (we do not like to pull leaves off the cuttings or top them as both leave open wounds), an absolutely clean cutting bench, with good drainage and clean sand. Also we have better success without bottom heat. Cuttings spaced far enough apart to see the sand freely between each one; watered well when put in, and sprinkled lightly every sun-shiny day. Covered with papers the first two weeks on sun-shiny day; papers put on about 9.30 or 10.30 A. M., and taken off about 3.00 P. M. Our best plants have always come from cuttings put in sand December 10th, to January 1st.

Close attention to the little plants in pots to see that they are kept in good shape (we keep them in a cool house), planting to the field March 10th to 20th; kept perfectly clean and plowed at least once a week. To get shapely plants, this is the most important time. Keep them topped and standing straight up. Bench June 25th to July 10th. See that they are not planted deeper than they were in the field. If planted deeper it is an invitation to stem rot. We plant ours seven rows across a five-foot bench, eleven inches between the rows. We have had excellent success planting in soil made by high water, deposited along the creek. Any soil that will grow bloodweeds twelve to fifteen feet high, will grow good carnations. We haul our soil up one year ahead, put in layers five loads of soil to one of manure. Manure from cotton seed meal fed cattle. This turned over twice to get it in good shape.

In conclusion, let me say that if you have good carnations and plenty of them and any kind of market for them, the profit will show up all right.

ONE WOBURN GROWER.

We have never seen a more promising field of fine asters than that of C. B. Johnson at Woburn, Mass. The "astermums" are especially handsome and are already producing heavily. Mr. Johnson, who is known as a very successful carnation grower, is busy transplanting from the field to the houses. He grows about 25,000 in which the varieties White Perfection, White Wonder, Matchless, Beacon, Harry Fenn and Benora figure most prominently. Philadelphia he will discard as a poor keeper and this will be his last year with White Wonder, White Perfection proving to be a much better keeper and shipper. In the matter of plants Matchless is far in the lead. Mr. Johnson has a large plantation of candytuft in frames, seed sown June 15th, which is expected to give an abundant and useful fall crop at a time when fine white flowers will be needed. It is a great pleasure as well as very instructive to inspect such a place as Mr. Johnson's where every foot of ground is made to yield to its full capacity and resourceful intelligent industry is paving the way to prosperity and affluence.

PRESIDENT WELCH STARTS FOR "THE COAST."

President P. Welch, with Mrs. Welch and Thos. J. Grey and wife, started on the first lap of their Convention trip on Wednesday, August 4, taking the 10 A. M. train from Boston for Chicago, via Albany. Mr. Welch carried with him letters of introduction from the mayor of Boston to the mayors of San Francisco, Seattle and Chicago, and several other officials of national repute whom he might meet on the way. He also carried a much-prized resolution of parting good wishes, adopted by a little coterie of intimate friends in the Boston "old guard" fraternity, at an informal lunch given Mr. Welch at the Parker House on the evening previous to his departure. Although the unusual convention conditions this year deprived President Welch of the company of many of his eastern friends yet it can be truly said that no S. A. F. president ever started off to a convention followed by more sincere good wishes or greater personal esteem from the members of the society. And it goes without saying that his reception in San Francisco and en route to and from the Convention will be an ovation of which any man might well be proud.

PATRICK WELCH

The feature of the evening was the talk of Charles S. Dulaney on the subject of artificial cooling of florists' ice boxes and the manufacture of ice. Mr. Dulaney showed the florists how they could more than cut their ice bills in half. The outing committee rendered a preliminary report. The outing, previously reported in these columns, was declared to have been the most successful in the history of the club. A buffet supper followed the meeting.

SWEET PEA CULTURE.

In the course of a lengthy paper on the Sweet Pea read before the American Sweet Pea Society, at Newport, R. I., on July 15, J. Harrison Dick had the following to say regarding the modern methods of culture of the Sweet Pea.

A successful English gardener summed up the routine of Sweet Pea culture in the following words: "Trench deeply, manure liberally, plant thinly, stake quickly, water early, and dispoed promptly."

I offer the following as my conclusions as to the most essential points in Sweet Pea cultivation for summer blooms namely, planting as early as it is at all safe to do so. The Sweet Pea is a hardy annual, withstanding very severe weather, and requires a long season for its early root growth in order to strike deeply and so secure a supply of moisture and nourishment during the hot days of summer. The second point I would emphasize is the need of entire liberty and freedom for each plant. One of the most fatal things is to cause attenuated growth, or to prevent the maximum development of leaf and stem growth; these build up a robust, disease-resistive plant, and lay the foundation for large, long-stemmed, solid, bright colored, fragrant blooms. Thirdly, I think all tendrils or nearly all, should be nipped off at an early stage, together with quite a considerable amount of lateral growth, but not all. Given enough space, a number of branches may be allowed to develop, the laterals from them however, being nipped. Fourthly, the need of the utmost care in keeping the plants free of aphids or other insect pests from the start. Aphids is far more dangerous than most of us are aware of. No carnation grower would for a moment neglect fumigating or spraying if he desired anything like a successful crop of first-class blooms. A few aphids in the growing point of a shoot will do enough harm in a couple of days to upset the energies of a healthy vine for some time, and may have paved a way for the entrance of disease germs. As to feeding and watering, they are largely subsidiary, although the manuring of the ground ought to receive careful attention at the time of digging and trenching; afterward, very little feeding should be necessary and watering must be done with judicious care. The late Henry Eckford never watered his peas at all I believe, but relied upon surface cultivation. Water, however, may be necessary occasionally, then a thorough soaking of all the ground should be given.

Work for the Future.

The sweet pea is a plastic flower, else it could never have created such world wide interest. It has a future as large as the United States—and that is literally true, for although it is grown in every state and territory, we want to feel that it is not only grown and prized in every state, but in every section and in every suburban homeplot. There is a great and grand field to be tilled, in a double sense, by the American Sweet Pea Society, which certainly won't be neglected. Yet in the progress of time if the fragrance of our flower gradually diminishes and is only known to posterity through the records of today, who shall bear the blame? The Sweet Pea scentless! What a travesty and tragedy. Yet again, whose could be the blame? The raisers, the growers? No, only our Sweet Pea Society which awarded 25 points to a novelty for length of stem, 25 for color, 20 for size, 15 for substance, 15 for number of flowers on a stem and not one for fragrance! But we will prefer to regard this as too hypothetical to become a fact.

Those who know most about the sweet pea are the most optimistic as to the possibility of its further development. As a society we have before us the improvement of the doubles; the strengthening of the Winter Spencers; the betterment of the Cupids; the quest of a blue that will equal Salvia patens; a yellow that will rival the Buttercup. We have, indeed, as much work as will keep us all busy for the next ten years. Then we can take stock again.

BEGONIA AND ASTER TROUBLES.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Will you please ask Mr. Farrell what is the cause of the buds on potted tuberous-rooted Begonias dropping off just as they seem ready to open. They are in 7-inch pots with good soil, have been in the shade with plenty of moisture; would too much shade, too much moisture or too rich soil cause it? Plants are large and look healthy. I also have trouble with Late Branching Asters, of which a great many are coming "blind" this year. The crown turns white and leaves are wrinkled and misshapen. If Mr. Farrell will answer in an early issue of HORTICULTURE I will be extremely obliged.

Yours very truly,

T. A. L.

Mass.

In answer to the foregoing inquiry I would say that the dropping of buds on tuberous-rooted begonias can be traced to a good many causes. Poor drainage which will always result in a cold and over-wet soil will cause the trouble. Overwatering in any kind of soil should always be guarded against, as well as letting them become too dry at the roots. Either of these extremes will make the buds drop. Again the dropping can be caused by excessive plant food in the compost or by heavy liquid feeding which will produce very healthy looking foliage but to the deterioration of right bud formation. Too heavy shading would also cause the trouble. Which of these applies in this instance will have to be found out by the grower and then means taken to overcome it. Judicious watering, ventilation, etc., will in the end place the plants in better condition to digest the food that is in the soil. Do not keep the air of the house too moist as it always causes the plants to make a very soft growth, which is not good for the flowering. Your asters are probably troubled with aster blight. It can only be prevented by timely spraying with ammoniacal carbonate solution, which can be made by dissolving one ounce of copper carbonate in a pint of ammonia. To every gallon of water add half an ounce and spray your asters every ten days. They should be sprayed from the time they are planted out up till they flower.

National Sweet Peas.

There was an excellent and varied display at the 15th annual show of the National Sweet Pea Society, held in London, on July 13th. The Burpee Cup presented to the Society by W. Atlee Burpee & Co., for a display of waved sweet peas, only attracted one competitor, Miss Baird, St. James, West Malvern. For a bunch of seedling sweet peas not in commerce 15 competitors entered novelties. The prize was awarded to Dr. Hammond T. Hinton, Heytesbury, Wilts, for J. B. Lowe, a variety with scarlet standards and pink wings. Awards of merit were made to the following new varieties: Tea Rose, buff and deep cream, and Margaret Fife, heliotrope with blue wings, from A. Malcom, Duns, Scotland. Victory, mauve, from R. Bolton, Warton, Carnforth, Lancashire. Dora, scarlet and cream, from Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh. The new introductions seen at the trials in Essex and at the show indicate that the specialists are still doing their utmost to excel all past efforts. Mrs. E. Wright, exhibited by R. Bolton, is a bold bloom, of the waved section, with a pure white ground. The wings and standards are edged with deep lavender blue. Old Rose (Dobbie & Co.) is a useful addition to the varieties which lend themselves to table decorations. The President (A. Dickson & Sons) is an excellent orange scarlet. Cream Ground Mrs. Cuthbertson (E. W. King & Co.) has a delightful combination of apple blossom red over a cream ground. Constance Acomb (Robert Sydenham, Ltd.) has a cream ground, the wings and standard being suffused with lilac.

Carnation Show.

The National Carnation and Picotee Society held its annual show in London, on July 22nd. The show was smaller than usual. The production of new fancies, bizarres and flakes still continues, and some very charming combinations of tints have been obtained by the hybridists.

SEEDSMEN

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Second Vice-President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O. Cincinnati, O., next meeting place.

Convention Joys.

Echoes of the recent seedsmen's convention at San Francisco are heard in the way of enthusiastic expressions of appreciation of the almost prodigal hospitality shown the visiting seedsmen by the California seed growers, and it will doubtless be many long days before the memory of the good time the seedsmen enjoyed in the Golden State will be forgotten.

California Seed Crops.

We have mentioned in recent issues that the onion seed crop would undoubtedly prove very disappointing, some estimates placing deliveries as low as 25 to 40 per cent. We think, however, that this is rather low and believe that when actual deliveries are made they will come pretty close to 50 per cent. This undoubtedly will mean a very great shortage, but probably there will be enough to meet the demand at a considerably advanced price over recent years. Nearly all other California crops are reported to be promising, especially sweet peas which will evidently prove a bumper crop.

Vine Seeds.

Vine seeds are still an uncertain quantity. Cucumbers are very late, two and sometimes three replantings having been necessary to secure a good stand. Still if the chinch bugs and other insect pests will only give the plants a chance we will, no doubt, get a very good crop of cucumber seed. Muskmelons are less promising and indications are that there will be a considerable shortage of certain varieties. This estimate of cucumbers and muskmelons will cover conditions both in Nebraska and at Rocky Ford, Colorado. At the latter place we are advised that the shipment of melons to the markets will probably not exceed 25 per cent. of normal. Whether the shortage will be serious enough to affect prices remains to be seen.

Beans and Seed Peas.

Garden beans in both Michigan and New York State are rather late, but in the former state the stand is the best for several years, and there is every indication of at least a full average crop. Conditions are not quite so favorable in New York State owing in large measure to too much rain. The seed pea crops both in Michigan, Wisconsin, Montana and Idaho are very promising, though in the last named states, rather late. They have not yet passed the danger point either of frost or wet weather during the threshing season. These two factors have to be considered in estimating the crop, but assuming that conditions are normal there will be an abundance of most of the leading varieties of pea seed with probably a considerable surplus of some sorts left in the hands of the growers. Speaking of the pea crop it may not be amiss to say that the canners this year are having a very large pack and of fine quality. The extra fine quality will undoubtedly help in putting the peas into consumption, but prices will inevitably rule very low, and very few will be able to realize cost on their surplus. This, of course, is very unfortunate not only for the canner but for the seedsmen and seed growers, as a ready market for the canned products at profitable prices usually means an active demand for the various varieties of seed used by the canners, and this demand is likely to be more or less disappointing the coming season. Inquiry among the canners shows quite conclusively that there was a considerable reduction in acreage from that of a year ago, an average of at least 20 per cent, but the greatly increased yield will probably result in as large a pack the country over as last year, but, as already stated, fortunately of much higher quality.

Important Action on Belgian Plant Embargo.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the Horticultural Importers' Association at a special meeting held at New York July 22, 1915.

WHEREAS, The British "Order in Council" effective March 15, 1915, was intended to stop the export trade of the nations at war with Great Britain, but is at present so interpreted by the British authorities as to also stop the exportation of Azaleas and other Belgian Plants to the United States, because they are grown in that part of Belgium now occupied by the enemies of Great Britain, and

WHEREAS, This interpretation of the "Order in Council" by the British authorities will do incalculable damage to the interests of the American Florists and the Belgian growers, without unfavorably affecting the interests of the enemies of Great Britain, since it is generally known that Azaleas are only grown in the vicinity of Ghent, Belgium, and that the enemies of Great Britain also must get them there, and

WHEREAS, It can be clearly shown that these Azaleas and other Belgian Plants are of Belgian production and origin, exclusively grown by Belgians for Belgian interests, and that none other than Belgians get any revenue or benefit from their sale. Therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the Horticultural Importers' Association respectfully requests our State Department to use its influence to have the British authorities permit these shipments of Azaleas and other Belgian Plants and Bulbs to be exported here the coming fall dating from August 20, and be it also

RESOLVED, That the Secretary of this

Flower Market Reports

Both shipping in and BOSTON shipping out have been seriously impeded by the storms of the past few days. We cannot recall a parallel at this season of the year. We even hear of snow-storms in western Pennsylvania and the lowest temperatures in fifty years at a corresponding date. There is a great abundance of asters, gladioli and sweet peas in market. Most of the latter are badly injured by the heavy and continuous rain and will have to make a new growth before the flowers are marketable. Prices are maintained about as quoted last week, with some stiffening in the case of white roses. Carnations run very small and asters are called for as a substitute for the forlorn specimens coming in at present from the old plants. Lilies are quite abundant. Lily of the valley in adequate supply.

The demand caused by CHICAGO the Eastland disaster used up practically all the flowers that the Chicago market could supply during the closing week of July. There were more or less of garden flowers, of the less attractive varieties left over, but so great was the demand that the market cleaned up every day all roses, carnations, etc. August opens with the prospect of a quiet month and with the usual summer stock curtailed by the continued damp and cloudy weather. Roses have been particularly affected and many of the growers are having their troubles with mildew, as well as having their cut limited. Carnations are being replanted and the limited amount of really good ones is not larger than is needed daily. Asters are more plentiful each day and the stems getting longer. No real fancy stock is offered as yet. Gladioli in the best three varieties are selling slowly and the poorly colored sorts not at all. Miscellaneous stock and green are not coming as fast as earlier in the summer.

Business is very quiet.

CINCINNATI The supply is not as large as it was but at that is still more than sufficient to take care of all present demands. Relatively speaking the shipping business is better than the local business. The cut of roses continues heavy but as a whole they are not as good as they were. Some pretty good American Beauties may be had. The cut of asters and gladioli has shortened considerably but is still more than needed. Lilies too have shortened but are still plentiful. They include many blooms of the highest quality. Auratum and Rubrum lilies meet with a limited call. Other offerings include dahlias, snapdragon, pond lilies and carnations.

The market is laboring under the burden of bad weather, and an over abundance of gladioli, asters and other field-grown flowers which have no fixed value, cannot be cleared out, and are a burden to the wholesaler. Carnations are still coming in and meet with an indifferent demand. The supply of roses of all varieties is more than ample to meet the meager requirements of the retail trade. American Beauties are very plentiful and cheap. Of the smaller varieties good white roses and some long stemmed colored roses are selling moderately well but there is a limit to the number that can be disposed of at a price and the surplus goes for anything that can be realized. Orchids are few in number and the best of them are selling. Lily of the valley is moving very slowly and if carried over has no staying qualities, but goes to pieces. On lead the procession. Other roses are the whole, there is little in the way of business to look forward to this month, for the prospects are good for a full supply of roses and outdoor stock with a falling off in business.

Conditions have not improved any since our last report. There is far too much outside stock coming in for what little business there is. All the growers seem to have been doubling up on their production this year and yet they apparently expect the wholesalers to get as good prices for it as last year and also to sell it all. They just break the market, that's all, and get little or nothing for themselves or anybody else. Local new-crop American Beauty roses have commenced to arrive sparingly. They are of good quality but the northern-grown flowers still in fair supply, but of course most of them have suffered from the hot weather. Asters are very, very plentiful, with prices much in the buyers' favor. Carnations poor in quality and getting scarcer. There are a few tuberoses arrivals—mostly southern-grown. Early cosmos, statice and liatris are among the new items noted among this week's arrivals.

Chrysanthemums

SAN FRANCISCO have put in their appearance which is unusually early here. The second or third week in August is their normal time. So far the Golden Glow is the only variety offered. The quality is very fair for first arrivals, and the supply is readily absorbed at firm prices. The supply of carnations has dropped off abruptly, the demand exceeding the supply the last few days, which has stiffened up prices for good stock considerably. Gladioli are not so much in evidence, and receipts of sweet peas are falling off rapidly. Assters are seen on all sides and the quality is much improved over the earlier offerings. They clean up closely. Liliun rubrum is very plentiful and the specimens are of a higher type than this market has been accustomed to in former years. The downtown florists are featuring these lilies prominently in their displays, and a good demand is reported. Some nice amaryllis is appearing, but the supply is limited. The market is well supplied with tritoma, which shows excellent quality and is very popular. Roses are not so plentiful this week, and the average quality is down, really fine stock being quite scarce. Centaureas, coreopsis, hydrangeas and a variety of other garden flowers are still plentiful. Orchids, continue in light supply.

The wholesale market ST. LOUIS is still crowded up with stock and with the retail business at a standstill all over town the commission men have found it not easy to rid themselves of the consignments. Roses are in heavy supply in the second grades, but in the fancy goods the supply is short. Beauties are about enough for the demand. Gladioli are shortening up somewhat and prices have stiffened up. Assters sell well in lighter shades and dark purple. Lily of the valley and lilies have their usual good demand, as do smilax and asparagus.

There is an excessive over-production of stock of all kinds with the one exception of carnations which are now practically off the market. Those to be had are undesirable and for them there is no sale. Assters are being received in enormous quantities and are replacing to a large extent the dahlias which have been adversely affected by the heat. It seems that the plants are running heavily to foliage and growth. Washington is passing through the hottest period of the season and the city is sweltering in a torrid wave from which there seems no relief. This has caused a marked falling off in business and were it not for funeral work there would be absolutely nothing doing at the retail stores. The exchanges and wholesale houses are complaining of slow business and of the fact that hardly twenty-five per cent of the stock which they receive from the growers finds a purchaser. The heat has effectually killed off the sweet pea crop but its loss is not felt with the influx of other flowers. It is a hard matter to find an outlet even for the finest of roses and the prevailing prices are very low. Gladioli coming into the market in very large quantities are of exceptional quality and there is some demand at low prices. There is little or no call for the more expensive flowers such as orchids and American Beauty roses.

Contestants must have their essays in the hands of the chairman, Wm. H. Waite, P. O. Box 290, Madison, N. J., not later than October 1st. The essay must be signed with non de plume, and must bear no evidence of the author's identification and be mailed in a plain envelope, carefully addressed to the chairman of the committee.

The contestant will place his name and full address, stating the position he holds, in a separate envelope, writing the non de plume he signed to his essay on the outside of this envelope, and mail same in a separate envelope to M. C. Ebel, Secretary, National Association of Gardeners, Madison, N. J. This envelope is not to be opened until the judges have rendered their decision on the contest. Write your essay distinctly and use one side of paper only. These rules must be strictly followed to avoid disqualification.

The subjects have been arranged in four classes, as follows:

Class 1. Prize $35 gold—Subject: Horti-

A competitor is entitled to enter in one class only. The broadest latitude will be allowed in dealing with each subject. The essays are limited to 3,000 words each.

The contest will close on October 1, the judges to report their decision at the next convention of the Association, to occur the first week of December. The Essay Committee will appoint five judges, consisting of three gardeners and two representatives of the horticultural press.

Contestants will address William H. Waite, Chairman of Essay Committee, National Association of Gardeners, P. O. Box 290, Madison, N. J., for further particulars.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

The Page Company of Boston, have just issued two new books of fiction which will fit in admirably for the vacation season. Anne of the Island is a delightful story by L. M. Montgomery, similar in character to and in fact a sequel to the widely read Anne of Green Gables by the same author which has passed its 40th printing. It will be given a warm welcome by the thousands and thousands of girls all over the country who have been yearning for more about Alice. Its chapters teem with simple but snappy humor and just enough of romance to fill the chinks and from first to last its characters are, to the reader, very real and unmistakably alive human beings. As a vacation gift for your own or somebody's else daughter you will make no mistake in selecting Anne of the Island. 326 pages, with frontispiece in full color. Net $1.25; carriage paid $1.40.

Our Little Macedonian Cousin of Long Ago is the latest addition to the popular Little Cousin series, by Julia Darrow Cowles. It tells the story of Nearchus, "a Boy of Macedonia and Companion of Alexander." While making no claim to historical accuracy the typical life of a Macedonian youth in the days of long ago is portrayed in true accord with the spirit and trend of Macedonian history and the boy who is fortunate enough to secure a copy of the book will not only be well entertained, but will have gained a good insight into the customs of a country and an era which in due time he will be called upon to take up more seriously in his school work. 106 pages, cloth finely illustrated in tints. Price 60 cents.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:

$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

NEWS NOTES.

Southington, Conn.—Frederick Francis and John Olson have purchased the Goodison greenhouse property on Bristol street. Mr. Olson formerly had the business and had sold it to Mr. Goodison. Mr. Goodison expects to move to Wallingford.

Chatham, N. J.—Creditors of Samuel Lum, a florist, were deadlocked over the election of a trustee in bankruptcy, and Referee Atwood L. DeCoster had to take a hand in the appointment of Harry A. May of Summit, who has been serving as receiver. The contest over the election lasted for four hours. Three candidates were nominated. They were Mr. May, Henry Hentz, Jr., of Madison and William G. Badgley of Chatham. After a tentative vote was taken Mr. Hentz's nominators agreed to cast his vote for Mr. May. On the first vote thirty-four claims, amounting to $19,287, were cast for Mr. Badgley, and twelve claims totaling $15,800 were voted for Mr. May.

The Greenhouse Builder's Test

What a greenhouse builder has done in the past, what he is doing now, and what he is reputed to be capable of doing, these things constitute the only valid test of a builder's capabilities and claims.

Where an owner makes his selection of a builder on the above basis, the Metropolitan Material Co. organization can stand the test in a fashion which will make choosing easy.

Forty-four years at greenhouse construction has made us experts. We flourish by comparison. Put your Greenhouse Problems up to us. Let us submit plans and prices. We go anywhere in the U. S. A.

One Man's Hindsight Is Another Man's Foresight

SOME of us have the rather expensive habit of seeing things afterwards. Of course, it is better to see them afterwards than to go on blindly and not see them at all. Hindsight has its place. But foresight is the thing that fills the big place. It is the sort of thing that reduces business costs on every hand, now; and makes possible the continued reduction in the future.

If you and I had one-thousandth part of the money growers have wasted working at a disadvantage, because of wrongly laid out ranges, or that has been spent in big lumps to tear down and rebuild poorly constructed houses, we could be taking a cruise together this very minute with our families and friends in our private yachts.

The man who has but his own limited individual problems from which to gain his experience is apt to pay for some of his experience dearly. But when you can come to a concern like Hitchings, who have built hundreds of houses, and get the benefit of their experience without a cent of extra cost, it does seem rather odd the way some growers first plan out their houses and then call us in to build them "their way." And insist on them being "their way." Not that we think we know it all, but why should you spend your time and cultivate worries over things that we have been all through and already successfully solved?

There was a time when houses were smaller and competition less keen, when the growers could handle the building situation well, but that time, so the large grower tells us, is past. With the bigger house, demanded by bigger business, many very serious problems arise that must absolutely be based on facts and figures. Otherwise, results are apt to be far from satisfactory. A mistake that cost you $100 a year amounts to $1,000 in ten years, or actually $1,330, when you figure the interest at 6 per cent. on the accumulated amount each year.

Of course, there's no use going to a concern for advice if that concern has not been in business long enough to have stored up sufficient experience to make the advice worth while.

Off hand, it would seem that not less than a quarter of a century's experience is really dependable, when it comes to the greenhouse question. This being so, then you can depend on depending on Hitchings. And we go anywhere for business—or to talk Business.

BURPEES' WINTER - FLOWERING SPENCER SWEET PEAS

Originated at Fordhook Farms and Grown at Floradale Farm. Absolutely fixed—true to color and type.

We began hybridizing the original Winter - Flowering Sweet Peas, namely, Burpee's Earliest of All (Christmas Pink), Burpee's Earliest White, Burpee's Earliest Sunbeams and Burpee's Re-selected Earliest of All with the finest varieties of the summer flowering Spencers at our FORDHOOK FARMS in 1909. It is, however, quite a slow process to thoroughly "true" and "fix" these seedlings, and it being against the principles of our business to put any novelty on the market in an unfixed condition, we are offering only two varieties at present. The stocks of these, we know to be absolutely fixed, true to color and type. After our crops are harvested we may be in a position to offer, in a limited way, several other winter-flowering novelties, particulars of which will be found in Burpee's Annual for 1916.

FORDHOOK PINK

This is the result of a cross made at our Fordhook Farms in 1909. The color is a beautiful shade of rose-pink on white ground; the coloring deepening towards the edge of the standard and wings. The flowers are of largest size, exquisitely waved and usually produced in threes and fours on long stems. Unsurpassed for cut flower trade. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of the PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915.

In sealed packets containing twelve seeds each, Per pkt., 25 cents; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.25; per oz., $4.00.

FORDHOOK ROSE

The result of a cross made at our Fordhook Farms in 1910. This lovely novelty is a charming shade of rosy-carmine. The flowers are of largest size and usually borne in threes and fours on long stiff stems. Awarded Certificates of Merit at the INTERNATIONAL SHOW, New York, March 20, 1915, and at the Spring Show of the PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915.

In sealed packets containing twelve seeds each. Per pkt., 25 cents; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.25; per oz., $4.00.

YARRAWA

THE SWEET PEA PAR EXCELLENCE FOR WINTER-FLOWERING UNDER GLASS. We were awarded Certificates of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, and at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915. YARRAWA is an easy and good "doer," invariably giving an excellent account of itself, whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds. YARRAWA has the heavy foliage and rank, strong growth of the summer-flowering type and is a true winter-blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20 and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex, or double-flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is a most pleasing shade of bright rose-pink, with light wings.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Chrysanthemums

Keep the chrysanthemums growing right along now. Give plenty of fresh air day and night with an abundance of water, syringing several times daily and wetting down the walks. See that the plants are kept clean by spraying with some good insecticide and light fumigations every ten days. From this out it will be necessary to keep up a diligent fight against the black fly.

Mulching Mixture

In preparing mulch make it rich. I would let it consist of two parts of well-decomposed cow manure to one part of fibrous soil. Where you want to use bone meal or other fertilizer this can be added at any time. Having this mulch in good condition and in a handy place under cover constitutes one of the first elements of success in growing good flowers. Chop it quite fine and make it up into a neat pile and let it stand for about three weeks and then turn it over three or four times at intervals of about every ten days, after which run it through a $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch screen and then store it away where the rain and snow will not reach it.

Roman Hyacinths

Get the flats and pans together so that when the bulbs arrive you will be all ready to care for them. When planting see that they have proper drainage. Use any good compost. See that the top of each bulb is pushed down level with the soil, and the soil made moderately firm. Give them a thorough watering and place in the bulb cellar or outside. If outside see that they are set level and covered with about 4 or 5 inches of soil. If they become dry they will need some extra waterings.

Poinsettias

Lose no time now in getting in poinsettia cuttings.

Next week:—Cyclamen; Begonias; Mignonette; Paper White Narcissus; Propagating Geraniums; Housing Tender Stock.

Poinsettias can be propagated up to the first week in September and make fair stock, but those that are rooted about this time will be better. Give good care when the cuttings are placed in sand, such as shading, watering and spraying. The one point to remember is not to let them flag. When rooted pot off into small pots using a mixture of fibrous loam, leaf mold and enough of sand to make it open. Keep rather close and spray often, with a fair amount of shade. After this keep them well up to the glass where they can have full sunshine. When they get pot-bound shift into 3-inch pots and plunge in ashes.

Stock Geraniums

See that geraniums are labeled true to name. Just now when they are all blooming and at their best it is well to see if any have not come true. It is an easy matter at this date to label or tag any that are not true to name. Much future annoyance can be saved now but only an expert would be able to separate them after the flower has gone. Geraniums left over can be made into fine stock plants by giving them a shift into 5 or 6-inch pots. These will be harder, shorter-pointed and less liable to damp off than field-grown stock. I think the failure to get a greater number of geraniums into flower by Decoration Day is in great part due to the sappy condition of our fall cuttings. When grown this way, they being more under the control of the grower, he can root practically every tip.

Supply of Leaf Mold

Every florist should lay in a good supply of leaf mold before the bad weather sets in. Now is a good time to get it. Leaf mold can be used in so many ways to good advantage that the good grower should always have a good amount on hand.

The Convention

Secretary Young, who has exceptional facilities for correctly estimating the probable attendance at the San Francisco Convention of the S. A. F., writes from the front a very optimistic letter, stating that the outlook for a favorable representation is daily becoming brighter, notwithstanding the accepted fact that the attendance from the far East will be very light. There is so much to be seen in California that is of interest to florists and the gardening fraternity generally that anyone making the effort to be present on this auspicious occasion will be well repaid for making the trip and, as the time approaches, many wavering individuals are pretty sure to come to a favorable decision and pack up for the journey to the Coast. HORTICULTURE's sincere wishes for a numerously attended and otherwise successful and profitable 31st Convention are extended to the grand old S. A. F. and the brethren of the Golden West.

A trade booster

Once a year when the Society of American Florists assembles in national convention HORTICULTURE honors the occasion by dressing up a little and coming out as a special edition. The trade buyers are all interested in the doings of the big organization which for the past thirty-one years has stood in the foremost position in America as the representative of floricultural progress. Our issue for this year is scheduled to appear next week. It will contain full information of the proceedings at San Francisco and will be in all respects the equal of any of its predecessors in publicity value for those trade advertisers who are sufficiently discerning and wide-awake to take advantage of the opportunity offered. There is yet time for the late comers to get in line but please do not delay further. If you have any specialty about which you would like to apprise the active and intelligent trade buyers, there is no better way to "get there" than through the columns of HORTICULTURE's Convention Number.

"Robbing Peter to pay Paul"

Commenting on the reported intention of the fraternal organizations of Waterbury, Conn., to limit their expenditures for floral tributes in memory of dead members to a small amount, the Meriden Record comes out with an editorial condemning the lavish use of flowers for funeral purposes and urging that "the money which is expended on short-lived blooms should be devoted toward relieving material want." It states that according to estimates of Chicago florists more than $100,000 had been spent on flowers for victims of the Eastland disaster and uses this grossly exaggerated estimate as an argument in support of its contention that much suffering and privation might have been averted by a better use of the money. This is another instance of the boom-crang mischief which is always sure to result from these inflated yarns which stupid florists here and there are so prone to give out and the sensational reporter so eager to circulate. Whatever virtue there may be in these repeated propositions to divert money from flower buying to "relieving suffering" is completely counteracted by the impossibility of enforcing such diversion. We see no reason to believe that if the florists of the country were despoiled of half their business the amount contributed for charity would be appreciably increased. As we have repeatedly urged, it is full time that the S. A. F. should raise its voice against these hostile attacks upon a worthy industry.

Preparedness

We take opportunity to again commend to our readers the very practical advice given by Mr. Ruzicka in his rose notes. The warning to get ready and well prepared now to meet the prospective emergencies of winter may not be needed by some readers of HORTICULTURE but we all know that there are many who procrastinate until too late and some time or another have to pay dearly for their indifference and improvidence. The admonition applies to any and all growers as well as to the rose men. "Preparedness" has taken on a startling national significance within the past few months. It is not without its application as a business policy.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur C. Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Storms

The storms that have swept over the country recently, show that it is always best to be ready to meet all emergencies, have all drains clear at all times and have some glass and putty on hand, with the tools. Even the brads that are used to fasten the glass should not be overlooked as these are very important. A large place should have a large quantity of glass on hand. This may look as if a lot of money was laying idle, but we look at it as cheap insurance. In case of cold weather, and heavy glass breakage, the place with everything right there will be all repaired while the other places are figuring how much glass it will take to repair, and then ordering the same, and waiting for it to arrive. There are always a number of these rush orders, and there is always delay in receiving the needed glass and materials for repairs. Right now is the time to study out just how you would handle the place in case of a heavy snow storm of the kind that do damage, and at the same time see how well equipped you are to do the work. There is no time to get ready when the storm comes, as every minute then counts, and besides every stick of wood, etc., is snowed under very deep, or else frozen so that it is impossible to rig up any way of removing the snow from the wide houses, and we know what may happen if it keeps piling on and on as it will when the fall is heavy, and a wind blowing. Of course the houses are very strong, and never a one got damaged yet, but—. A grower with a lot of the old three-quarter span houses that are badly in need of repair, should see that they are properly braced now, while there is time to do it. We know of an instance where timely bracing saved several of these old houses from going down during the winter, and the returns from these houses for that season were enough to nearly pay for rebuilding them the following summer. To be real successful in business nowadays you have to be ready to meet any emergency, without stopping two or three days to think it over.

Picking Leaves on Beauties

With the unusual winters and cloudy weather which prevails all over the country this summer, it will be wise to take especial care to see that all the leaves that touch the soil on the Beauty plants are removed as soon as the plants are of any size. About the time they are tied is a good time. It is best to do this in two or three pickings, as the plants will not feel it so much then, and it will be better all the way around. It would harm the plants to remove the leaves half way up to the first wire, so care should be taken to take only the leaves that lie on the soil or come in contact with it in such a way that they are always wet on the under side. These are very apt to get the first spot and then spread it to the rest of the plant, and from there to the plants surrounding. In doing this it is well to give the benches a little rubbing over and at the same time see that there is no big spot left anywhere in the house. Growers will say that it is all "tommy rot" or something similar, but we look upon this stray spot here and there as we would on a wolf among a lot of sheep. No matter how tame the wolf may seem he is still a wolf and will do damage sooner or later, so it is best to remove the wolf and thus nip the trouble in the bud, as we say.

Mildew

With showers coming two or three times a day and as many times in the night, it will take quite a little managing to run the houses just right, and avoid trouble with mildew. It is very important that the houses should not be put down too soon before the shower, and that they should not be kept closed too long after the shower has passed and the sun is shining. It is best not to put the houses down too low at first, unless the shower threatens to be a bad one, and by no means close the houses up tight the first time the vents are put down. It is only during very severe storms that it is necessary to close the house down tight, as most showers are pretty quiet after the first blow of wind, which generally is without rain. Houses with only one set of vents should have all end doors open and all obstructions removed so that men can go through one house and enter the next one through the far end door. The time thus gained is a wonderful help, especially if the shower comes quicker than was expected. Repair all broken glass at once, so there are no drafts, and should there be any plants that had a dose of mildew because of draughts of cold air coming in through broken glass, see that these are dusted with powdered sulphur or sprayed with Fungine. In using sulphur, do not apply it by throwing it on with hands, but use a good bellows or a good powder gun. Avoid late watering or syringing and make sure some lime is used at night. This will all help in preventing mildew, and "prevention is better than cure," always.

Larkspurs and Astilbes

Our cover illustration this week shows a corner of the beautiful Italian flower garden at Kenarden Lodge, the summer estate of Mrs. J. S. Kennedy at Bar Harbor, Me. Flowers and verdure at Bar Harbor are noticeably more brilliant and sparkling in color than those in places not favored with the prevalent moist sea atmosphere which is characteristic of Bar Harbor. Larkspurs, as seen in the picture, grow and flower grandly. In the foreground are seen some of the new hybrid astilbes which are a specialty of the Mt. Desert Nursery and were shown by that establishment so effectively at the National Flower Show in New York year before last. Just beyond is a group of that sterling novelty Lilium regale or myriophyllum.

The Kennedy estate under the care of W. T. Burton is the leading show place of Bar Harbor and the visitors to the noted seaside resort next year on the occasion of the Sweet Pea Society's meeting and exhibition will find in this masterpiece of gardening art and emerald lawns one of its chief attractions.

Essays

In view of the many and varied attractions of the Convention and Convention City, the Executive Board decided that it would be unwise to take up the time of the convention with the reading of essays. Realizing, however, the value of the presentation of essays at the Society's conventions, the secretary was instructed to invite essays from various gentlemen willing to prepare them, such invitations and the number of them to be within his discretion, the essays to be furnished to the trade papers for publication during the convention period, and to be printed as part of the proceedings of the convention.

The following essays are presented: "Is it Advisable for the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists to Establish a National Credit and Collection Department?" by August F. Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.

"The Problems Attending the Establishment of Permanent Convention Gardens," by Theodore Wirth, Superintendent of Parks, Minneapolis, Minn.

"The Necessity of National Publicity to Advance the Interests of Commercial Floriculture in the United States," by Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.

Fourth Day, Friday, August 20.

OFF FOR SAN FRANCISCO.

The joint party of the Park Superintendents' and Gardeners' Association leaving New York for San Francisco on Saturday, August 7, consisted of Fred C. Green, Providence, R. I.; Hermann W. Merkel and John J. Walsh of New York, N. Y.; Oscar W. Karlson, Riverdale, N. Y.; Charles Haible and William H. Coldwell, Newburgh, N. Y.; John D. McEwen and wife, Queens, N. Y.; Oscar Boehler, West Hoboken, N. J.; E. W. Schoneberger, Madison, N. J.; Robert Williamson, Greenwich, Conn.; A. Bieschke, wife and child, Noroton, Conn.; Miss Una Keith, Bridgeport, Conn.; W. R. Others were to join at Spokane, Seattle and Portland. M. C. Ebel, who organized the party was obliged to give up the trip owing to sickness. He traveled with them as far as Philadelphia and they parted from him with much regret.

President Welch's party bound for the Convention, numbering four when starting from Boston had grown to twelve when leaving Chicago. Mr. Welch reports a very enjoyable visit in Chicago where hospitality without limit was extended by representatives of the Florists' Club, the trade and the park officials.

CLEVELAND FLOWER SHOW.

Six well-known gentlemen, authorities and veterans from the standpoint of judging exhibitions, have been selected by the premium committee of the Cleveland Flower Show to serve as their official judges. They are as follows: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.; Michael Bloy, Detroit, Mich.; Eugene Dailedouze, Brooklyn, N. Y.; John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Canada; Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.

Chairman Herbert Bate, of the premium committee, states that his committee is hard at work on getting the final premium list in shape to place in the hands of the printer so that it will be mailed early in September. Frank A. Freidley, of the James Eadie Company, representing the commercial growers, and J. Curnow, of Akron, representing the private growers, together with Mr. Bate compose the premium committee.

NORTH SHORE EXHIBITION.

The annual summer flower show of the North Shore (Mass.) Horticultural Society opened Wednesday afternoon, August 4, despite a deluge that flooded the tent where the exhibit was held on the estate of Mrs. R. C. Winthrop, West Manchester. The show was continued another day, however, but with no success as far as the weather was concerned.

Among the more notable displays was that of Mrs. H. L. Higginson, who had a number of small exhibits, and won first prize for the best specimen plant lilium auratum and first prize for best dinner table decoration, a rustic arrangement with a miniature tea garden for a centerpiece.

Mrs. W. D. Denegre, gard. H. Clark, took second prize for table decoration in sweet peas. Miss Pauline Croll also entered a table decoration in snapdragon. Mrs. F. P. Frazier won several prizes, including a first for artistically arranged table of lilies, herbaceous flowers and first for specimen plant petunia (Rosy Morn). Mrs. Lester Leland, gard. E. Wetterlow, received many prizes, including a first for best table of flowers arranged for effect, for which Mrs. S. P. Blake took second. Mrs. Leland took first for 12 distinct varieties of specimen plants and Mrs. Lathrop Brown second. Mrs. Leland also received a silver medal for a magnificent group of begonias, first prize for 12 achemines and a certificate for a new geranium.

The vegetable displays were particularly good. Mrs. C. S. Hanks taking first prize for a table very artistically arranged. A silver cup was given to Mrs. Frank B. Bemis for a general collection, and a special prize was awarded Mrs. H. L. Higginson.

The school garden competition was spirited and upwards of 75 prizes were distributed in this section.

Certificates of merit were awarded for new geranium named Mrs. Lester Leland, by Eric Wetterlow; standard heliotrope, by Mrs. T. J. Coolidge, Jr., gard. Gustave Ericson; Pink Mallow, by Mrs. H. S. Grew 2nd, gard. James McIlheney; display of fruit, by William Allen. Silver medal to Col. Chas. Pfaff for Epidendrum rismatocarpum.

There will be an exhibition, mainly of gladioli, of the Horticultural Society of New York, on Saturday and Sunday, August 21 and 22, at the Museum Building, New York Botanical Garden. An invitation is extended to all interested to take part in the exhibition. Schedules are now ready and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, N. Y. City.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

For the fall exhibition of the American Rose Society to be held in Cleveland, November 10th to 14th, the following prizes have been offered:

Twenty-five dollars by A. N. Piereson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., for the best 50 blooms of Hadley roses.

Silver cup from The Lamborn Floral Co., Alliance, O.

Silver medal from Vaughan's Seed Store, New York and Chicago.

Ten dollars in cash from "The House of Burpee," Philadelphia, Pa.

Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., $25 for 50 Killarney Brilliants.

These prizes are specials in addition to those of the regular list and in all probability there will be a number more added. Much interest is arising in this exhibition, and there are two prizes to be offered for the best unnamed rose that will be placed upon exhibition.

AN EFFECTIVE VINE COMBINATION.

Actinidia arguta is slowly but surely coming into use as one of the most rapid growing and desirable hardy climbers where a large space is to be quickly covered with a dense growing vine. It is equally useful for more restricted use as in the example shown herewith, frequent cutting back of the rampant growth being only required. Its thick dark green foliage seems to be immune against all insect attacks and its flowers are beautiful and sweet scented although short-lived. The latter disqualification may be adequately offset by planting Hall's honeysuckle so that it entwines and blossoms among the actinidia foliage. The contrast of the small pale foliage and white flowers with the heavy dark leaves of the latter is very effective and the two vines get along nicely together year after year. The picture shows the gate posts at the entrance to the cottage of the editor of HORTICULTURE at Winchester, Mass.

Obituary

R. J. Groves.

R. J. Groves, the oldest florist in Atchison, Kan., died July 16, aged 83 years. He had been in business in Atchison since 1861. The business, known as the Groves Floral Co., was turned over in July to his daughters.

Alfred C. Burkhardt.

Alfred C. Burkhardt, florist, of Portland, Ore., died suddenly July 28 of heart failure. He was born in Switzerland, but came to this country in 1872 and entered the florist business with his brother Gustave. He is survived by his wife and six daughters.

William H. Westcott.

William H. Westcott, a pioneer florist of Philadelphia, died suddenly on the 5th inst. at his residence in Roxboro. He had a greenhouse plant there which he built in recent years after parting company with his brother, John Westcott, with whom he was associated at Ridge and Lehigh avenues for an extended period. Previous to that he had greenhouses at Second and Tioga street which he conducted successfully in the old-fashioned, conservative way for half a lifetime and brought up his family there. William Westcott was a quiet, easygoing man, and did not take much part in public affairs. But he was up to a few years ago, after an operation at a hospital, a faithful and constant member of the Florists' Club and the S. A. F., and there were but few of their meetings or celebrations but were graced by his genial, quiet, smiling presence. He was 72 years of age and a native of Philadelphia. Interment took place on the 9th inst. at Greenmount cemetery. A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held on the 6th inst. at which appropriate resolutions were passed and ordered sent to the family. The club also ordered that a floral design representing the club membership be sent and that its execution should be entrusted to the loving hands of the deceased's brother, Commodore John Westcott.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Second Vice-President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O. Cincinnati, O., next meeting place.

Crimson Clover Seed

There is apparently a larger supply of crimson clover seed on hand at the present time than in any previous year and much of it is of poor quality, according to specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. While this would indicate that the price should be normal or less than normal it is rapidly advancing.

The greater part of the crimson clover seed sowed in the United States is normally imported from France and Austria. In the fall of 1914 conditions of trade with Europe were such that there appeared to be danger of a short supply of seed for this summer's planting. The desire of the seed trade to secure as much seed as possible, together with the improvement in trade facilities with France during the winter and spring, resulted in the importation of 12,000,000 pounds during the year ending June 30, 1915, as compared with 7,500,000 pounds the year previous and 1,500,000 pounds in 1910.

During May and June much seed of poor quality has been imported, more than 1,000,000 pounds made up of several lots, germinating from 29 per cent. to 62 per cent. Buyers should therefore be sure of the quality of the seed they buy. Crimson clover seed of a bright greenish yellow color usually germinates well, while a brownish color indicates poor germination. All lots containing brownish or brown seeds should be carefully tested for germination to determine the proportion that may be expected to grow in the field under favorable conditions and the rate of seeding should be adjusted accordingly.

Crop Damage in Massachusetts.

Damage amounting to several millions of dollars has been done to the crops of Massachusetts as the result of the extraordinary rainfall of the last few weeks, according to Secretary Wheeler of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture.

Mr. Wheeler, who has just returned from a trip about the State, declared that the agricultural situation has not been so bad since 1817, which was known as the "starvation" year. He declared that the State's annual $12,000,000 hay crop will be cut in half this year, that the potato crop has been virtually destroyed and that the squash, cranberry, onion and tobacco crops have been unusually hard hit. The outlook for the onion and tobacco crops in the Connecticut valley, he declared, is particularly discouraging. He stated that he saw farms of five acres that were planted with potatoes where not a leaf was showing. Hay is selling now for $12 a ton, or higher, he said, than at any time since the Civil war.

Mr. Wheeler said that the situation might be helped if September is fine. To date, he stated, the fruit growers have not suffered a great deal, but that they will if the rain continues.

He accounted for the low price of garden truck by the light season in the hotel business. The weather, he asserted, has kept people away from the beach hotels, which ordinarily require tremendous quantities of vegetables to support them.

Notes.

D. F. Lomason, of the D. M. Ferry Co., of Detroit, Mich., was in St. Louis last week attending to his yearly collection of unsold seeds.

The value of imports of horticultural material at the port of New York for the week ending July 31, 1915, is given as follows: Manure salt, $2,327; sulphate of potash, $3,701; fertilizer, $216; clover seed, $6,256; grass seed, $1,690; palm seed, $2,646; trees and plants, $5,576.

NO QUARANTINE OF CHESTNUT NURSERY STOCK.

Following a public hearing on the subject, the Federal Horticultural Board has determined not to quarantine chestnut nursery stock for the purpose of preventing the distribution of the chestnut bark disease. The board announced that the disease spreads slowly and opportunity has already existed for several years for the distribution of this disease in small quantities to areas where extensive new plantings of chestnut are being inaugurated. Recommendation is made that plantings of chestnut stock be carefully inspected for the presence of the disease.

WASHINGTON.

The Washington Floral Company has recently completed the installation of a large electrical sign bearing the words "Flowers at Popular Prices" above their store.

That Frank E. Miller, an employee of J. H. Small & Sons, is still in the land of the living is due to the capture of a crazy negro who recently threatened to take his life unless the small sum of $12 was immediately forthcoming.

William F. Gude and Mrs. Gude and their two daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. Christian Schellhorn and Theodore Diedrich left Washington on August 11 to attend the convention at San Francisco. They will be joined at that place by Adolph Gude, Jr., who has been employed on the sweet pea range of A. C. Zvolanek, in Lompoc Valley.

Walter Hawley, with Gude Bros. Company, and Mrs. Hawley are visiting relatives in Brooklyn, N. Y. Henry Gottenkenny, with the same firm, and Mrs. Gottenkenny and their two children are spending their vacation in Fairfax County, Va. Mr. and Mrs. James Dalglish and their daughter are spending a month's vacation at Arlington, Vermont.

Government officials are doing their part to have the coming encampment of the G. A. R. a great success. Special floral designs have been laid out on the lawns of the Capitol and other government buildings. These designs include the insignia of the veterans, the Women's Relief Corps and other organizations that will participate in the encampment. Seventy-five thousand foliage plants went into the making of the several badges of the various army corps that have been laid around the Sherman statue just south of the Treasury Building. William F. Gude is at the head of the band of workers having the encampment in charge. Associated with him are a number of florists, several of whom hold positions on very important committees.

There is the usual complaint of summer dullness, but it is interesting to note that nearly all of the leading florists of the city have informed the Washington representative of HORTICULTURE that compared with a similar period of last year, July and the early part of August is entirely up to standard. The florists of the National Capital have learned to look for additional means of outlet and in this way have brought about increased demands for their stocks. Last year was the worst in the history of the jewelry business of the National Capital. The reason was that the florists went after the holiday business with a vim and won. This does not mean only Christmas, Thanksgiving Day, Easter and New Year's, but every other occasion. Flowers replaced candy to a remarkable extent and other lines suffered equally as much. The flower business here has grown to a marked extent in the last two years and the end is not yet—the live ones are ever reaching out after new opportunities. More advertising space is weekly occupied by the florists than ever before; more attention is being paid to window displays, and there is exacted from some of the clerks an efficiency heretofore undreamt of, and all of these efforts are bringing results.

ST. LOUIS.

W. C. Smith, president of the W. C. Smith Floral Co., and Mrs. Smith, left last week for a two weeks' stay in the Ozark Mountains.

President J. S. Wilson, of the Missouri Horticultural Society, says the prospects are good for the annual meeting of the society being held here in November.

It was James Young and not C. Young & Sons Co. who bought the tract of land on the Olive street road recently. Mr. Young says he will build a range of houses on this at once and place his son Charles in charge as manager.

A very small delegation of members will go to the San Francisco convention. They include Frank A. Windler, J. J. Windler, C. C. Saunders and Vincent Gorly. This is the smallest delegation that ever represented St. Louis at an S. A. F. convention.

R. J. Windler, of Rogers Park, Chicago, was here a few days last week to attend the wedding of his brother, Joseph J., to Miss Paula Poss, which took place August 4. R. J. returns home Thursday, and the happy couple left for San Francisco to spend their honeymoon.

The St. Louis County Growers' Club held its meeting August 4. They decided to ask the proprietors of the five wholesale houses to meet with them at their meeting in September, at which great pressure will be exerted to have them reconsider their Sunday closing, which so far has availed them nothing.

SAN FRANCISCO.

At the regular August meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, S. B. Mitchell will deliver a lecture on "Iris."

It is rumored here that Kansas City will be favored for the next meeting place of the S. A. F., as the 1914 convention was held in the far East and this year's will be held in the far West.

John A. Evans, of Richmond, Ind., has joined the advance guard which is here awaiting the convention. Mr. McCabe, of the A. L. Randall Co., arrived a few days ago, also, and expects to remain for the festivities.

Mrs. Hosp and her three daughters, who are in the florist business in Bakersfield and Riverside, Cal., are in San Francisco combining business and pleasure. H. A. Hyde, of Watsonville, Cal., was a recent visitor also.

Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., who has been here the last fortnight concluding arrangements for the convention, says the convention garden is coming out nicely and will compare very favorably with those of former years.

Preparations are complete for the celebration of "Nurserymen's Day" at the exposition, on Aug. 16, which will conclude the joint conventions of the California Nurserymen's Association and the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen.

The most important move in the local wholesale trade in a long time took place the past week when the E. W. McLellan Co. occupied its new place, which provides much better facilities than were available at the old location. Arrangements have been made with about fifty growers to take space in the establishment besides themselves.

CINCINNATI.

Al. Horning is visiting his mother in Toledo, Ohio.

P. J. Olinger is spending the current week at Evanston and Aurora, Ill.

Burglars broke into the store of C. E. Jones at 905 E. McMillan street and attempted to pry open the safe.

Exhibitors at the Carthage Fair this week include Henry Schwarz, T. Ben, George and Fred Bachmeier. All have made extensive preparations for the affair.

BOSTON.

Andrew Christensen started alone for San Francisco on August 11, going via the northern route and planning to return by the southern.

Ed Welch and family have gone to their cottage at Old Orchard Beach for the summer. David Welch is left as sole director of the store on Devonshire street and fills this position with a graceful dignity which seems to ripen and mellow as time passes.

A furious thunder storm accompanied by a fusilade of small hailstones and the heaviest deluge of rain in this rain-soaked season, visited this city and suburbs on Monday, August 9th. It was particularly severe in Woburn, Winchester and other suburban districts on the north side.

Ever-industrious George Hamer is back at the Flower Exchange after two weeks' vacation, more than ever a shining example of perpetual motion. E. A. Stickel, who has represented Montrose Greenhouses for a considerable period, has got through. The long-talked-of fishing trip materialized last Tuesday when a party of thirteen from the Exchange went down the bay to the Graves, as guests of Wallace Greenwood of Winthrop, on his boat. "Bill" Hastings won the pool with the largest fish and second honors were shared between Billy Mix of the Edgar place and Louis Ginsburg. Between 75 and 100 fish of all races and persuasions were captured by the party.

Doorway florists in Lynn must procure a state license or go out of business, according to a ruling of Judge Lummus, who on August 10 found Harry Feinzig of Boston guilty of violating the laws regulating itinerant vendors. The board of control caused Feinzig to be arrested, to make a test case. He was not fined, but his conviction is intended to stand as a warning to others who set up temporary flower stands for the sale of flowers. Since early spring many persons have rented small shops or secured permission to erect stands in doorways, and sold flowers. The florists of the city contended that this business was of a temporary or transient nature, and required a state license.

CHICAGO.

The Chicago florists held a sale of flowers for the benefit of the survivors of the Eastland disaster. The flowers were donated by the wholesale houses of Chicago, and the sum realized was $305.00.

At the Florists' Club meeting last Thursday, arrangements for the Flower Show were discussed, but nothing definite was settled. Vaughan's Seed Store exhibited a vase of delphiniums. There was an attendance of about 40.

NEWS NOTES.

Ravenna, O.—S. P. Pike has leased the Mellen Greenhouses on West Main street.

Forest City, Ia.—J. H. Rine and son, H. B. Rine, of Humboldt, Ia., have purchased the Hill City Greenhouses.

Woburn, Mass.—Lightning entered the boiler room of the greenhouses of R. F. Anderson, 71 Middle street, on August 9, and besides wrecking the place partly paralyzed the left side of one of the workmen.

Flower Market Reports

The flower supply was BOSTON shortened up somewhat during the stormy period early in the week but with the coming of brighter weather the surplus began to pile up again and the temporary activity ceased. What little business is being done at present is confined to funeral work and some insignificant seaside shipping calls. Asters and gladioli are being very heavily overstocked. Gladioli are excellent but are far in excess of the needs and the situation is further handicapped by the large quantities of this flower being shipped direct to consumers all through this section by large New York growers, at 35 to 50 cents a hundred. Asters are far from first quality as a rule. Sweet peas are practically useless from the effects of the recent heavy rainstorms. Small short-stemmed roses from young plants have commenced to come in this week. There is practically no market for them. Cattleyas are now very few and they bring the top price.

Trade has not improved BUFFALO much. There has been a rather heavy supply of carnations and roses. Lilies continue plentiful, in fact too many to command any price. Floral work was only lightly scattered. Gladioli were plentiful and mostly of the ordinary quality. America has had the best sales. Friday and Saturday brought on a heavy supply of asters and the quality was good though the outlet was blocked. On Monday, 9th, the market opened up brisk. The supply of roses was short and a general demand for floral work helped the day.

August has brought the CHICAGO usual midsummer dullness. Local demand is down to bed rock. There is a little spurt now and then for funerals and shipping to outside points is fairly active, these orders cleaning up the market in certain lines pretty well, particularly as regards good shipping quality of roses. Roses in medium to longer length are not at all too plenty. Some fine Russells are coming in and meeting with a brisk demand. Ophelia and Sunburst are also in active call. Killarney Brilliant is among the best in the line of pink and can be had in fairly good length. Pink and White Killarney also are of fair quality, but the bulk of the receipts are in the shorter grades. Thanks to the cool weather which has prevailed most of the time, Richmond is keeping up in good shape. We note some very good Milady and a few Hoosier Queen. Carnations are still hanging on, some whites being unusually good for the season. Lilies are seen in quantity and good quality, but move slowly. Lily of the valley is rather short in supply. As to gladioli and asters, the market is so badly glutted that the wholesale men find it an impossibility to move the stock at anything like a decent price. In fact, a large amount of the daily receipts can't be sold at any price—this in spite of the fact that both are on the whole of very good quality. Shasta daisies, so abundant the last month or more, are nearly cut out. Other garden flowers such as coreopsis, gaillardia, calendula, larkspur, etc., are seen in abundance. A few good dahlias have made their appearance but meet with an indifferent demand.

Business is a little CINCINNATI better but not very good enough to cause a very material stiffening in prices. The supply is large and the to cope with all present needs. Shipping business is pretty fair. The general quality of the gladioli is not as good as it was. Asters are just between seasons, the early and late, while rose offerings include but a limited amount of fancy blooms. Lilies, longiflorum, rubrum and auratum are excellent and plentiful. Early dahlias, snapdragon and pond lilies may also be had. Greens are plentiful. The house-grown asparagus is excellent.

This market has been NEW YORK depressed to the limit during the past week. Very little of the stock coming in is moved in any legitimate channel and then at best very sluggishly. The number of gladioli and asters being sent in is beyond a market which does not really exist is beyond computation, but the receipts for it all are easily counted. Cattleyas are scarce but have no regular call, the demand being only intermittent. Lilies continue very abundant. Small roses from young planted houses come in by myriads but are hardly worth the time required to pack them which might easily be spent to better advantage. Asters are of all types and sizes and degrees of quality, many being badly bedraggled by exposure to wind and weather. Much rain has fallen, which has been very injurious to all outdoor flowers.

There was a PHILADELPHIA slight improvement last week in the general situation here. The overdose of outdoor stock has eased up a little and the demand is rather better. There is a noticeable shortening up in the gladiolus crop which helps very considerably in improving the tone. The early asters are now about over, and as these were more notable for quantity than quality as a rule their demise will not be regretted. They are being followed by the mid-season sorts, which are much superior and all that can be asked for as to quality. In the rose market, American Beauty is in fine supply and is selling right well, the northern-grown stock still having a little the best of it as against the new crop locals. Other roses are not so plentiful as they were and as a rule are but medium as to quality. Carnations are few and poor. Cattleyas and other orchids scarce. Plenty of lilies of fine quality. These are showing up as a summer flower better than ever and are being more and more appreciated by the retailer. They are splendid shippers and keepers and are useful and appropriate for many purposes. The second crop of delphiniums is now in and meets with favor. Fine flowers but not so long-stemmed as the first cuts.

Little change
SAN FRANCISCO has taken place in the local flower market either in conditions, prices or outlook. All seasonables are plentiful, but supplies clean up closely from day to day. German Day at the Panama-Pacific exposition, Thursday, created an unusual demand for corn-flowers, which stripped the market early in the day. When the supply began to run short offers of $1 were made for bunches that brought only 25 cents in the morning. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful, Monrovia and Golden Glow being offered in considerable quantity, and a few October Frost have appeared during the last day or two. The supply of asters shows good quality, and though abundant, finds a ready market. The large majority of dahlias show the effect of hot weather, but a limited supply of excellent stock is still arriving from Marin County. Gladioli are a little more plentiful than they were last week and the really fine offerings bring high prices. Francis King is most in evidence and shows best average quality. America is on the down grade and Panama appears sparingly. Sweet peas are scarce and few of the arrivals are up to standard. The same is true of carnations, the supply being very light, as growers are pulling up their old plants. Roses are quite good for this time of the year, especially Ophelia, and no difficulty is experienced in cleaning up the best and moderate offerings. Lilies continue to dominate the market. Very fine specimens of rubrum and auratum are shown everywhere, and some cold storage giganteum appeared the last few days. Neither orchids or gardenias are in very heavy supply, but the offerings come nearer filling the demand than they did a week or so ago.

The market was all to
ST. LOUIS the bad last week.

Buyers were few and those who did buy bought little. The weather was remarkably cool all week and stock at the wholesale market looked better than at any time this summer. Prices are very low in all grades, especially in outdoor grown stock, including tuberose and gladioli, which are coming in daily in big lots from our home growers. Roses are many and in big lots sell cheap. Carnations are not so many, but asters take their place.

The local market,
WASHINGTON as is usual at this time of the year,

is overstocked with all sorts of flowers and although the quality in the main is good, it is impossible to find an outlet for much more than one-fourth of the supply. Nothing is scarce except orchids and these are at a premium. Asters show the effect of the recent rainstorms, which have beaten down the plants and spotted the flowers. Some very good stock brings a fair price, but the bulk of the asters go to the street vendors at five cents per hundred and less. New crop roses are naturally very short-stemmed and worthless except for funeral work, but there are plenty of good roses to be had, especially in Ophelia, Tatt, Kaiserin and American Beauty. Dahlias are not yet quite up to standard. The market can get along very well without them, however, and this same may be said of carnations.

BELGIAN PLANT SHIPMENTS WILL BE PERMITTED.

With reference to fall shipments of azaleas and other Belgian plants, which were under embargo by the British authorities, we are pleased to be able to now advise definitely that shipments will arrive this fall on schedule time from Belgium, unless the German authorities intervene or the progress of the war disrupts the present arrangements.

The plan worked out is that permits are given by the British authorities to individual Belgian shippers, when proof is submitted that the stock is of Belgian origin and production, for Belgian interests, and that the enemies of Great Britain do not get any revenue or benefit from the sales. The proceeds of the sales remain in control of the British authorities so long as the Belgians remain under control of the Germans.

It was largely by reason of the pressure brought to bear on the British authorities by the Belgian shippers that permission was given. The Belgian shippers through their powerful organization—"The Chambre Syndicale des Horticulteurs Belges"—protested direct to the British authorities, and in this protest we understand they were assisted by the British National Organization of Florists.

From our side, protest to the embargo was made through the State Department by the N. Y. Horticultural Importers' Association, assisted by individual importers and backed by the National Merchants' Association of N. Y. The combined pressure, strong but just, caused the British authorities to investigate, with the result that Belgian shippers who have secured permits can ship their orders to the United States.

This decision is important to florists who depend largely upon azaleas for their Christmas and Easter sales, but still more so to the Belgian shippers, since the United States is practically the only market left open to them.

PUBLICATION RECEIVED.

The Principles of Floriculture.—By Edward A. White, Professor of Floriculture in the N. Y. State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, and formerly at the Mass. State College, Amherst. This book is the latest addition to the Rural Text Book Series, edited by Dr. L. H. Bailey and published by The MacMillan Company of New York. The names of Prof. White and Dr. Bailey in connection with it will at once fix the position of this volume in the estimation of our readers. As would be expected, its chapters give abundant evidence of close application and painstaking work in its preparation. There are nineteen chapters comprising no less than 750 distinct topics and filling 454 pages, minutely indexed. There are 52 illustrations and it would seem that every question that could possibly present itself in regard to the cultural needs, the growing and marketing of plants and flowers, both wholesale and retail, the construction and heating of greenhouses, soils, diseases, etc., etc., is fully answered in this really remarkable book. We do not hesitate to assert that it will acceptably meet the needs of the flower growers and to unreservedly recommend it as an indispensable manual. At the very low price of $1.75 it is sure to have a wide sale.

Copies can be supplied from the office of HORTICULTURE.

During Recess

N. Y. Florists' Bowling Club Outing.

President Meissem has appointed the writer, historian of this very enjoyable picnic party. On Wednesday, July 28th on the 1 P. M. Sandy Hook Boat, there assembled the following named gentlemen: John Meissem, Wm. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Wm. P. Ford, H. C. Reidel, Chas. W. Scott, Peter Jacobson, Wm. Duckham, Chas. H. Totty, Roman J. Irwin, and the writer. Each in the best of spirits, weather ideal, the party leaving all cares and prejudices behind, entered into the realm of harmony.

The sale to the Highlands was a perfect tonic. Upon landing, the party entrained for Highland Beach, and was met by Joseph Fenrich with his car and best smile. Joe Fenrich and W. P. Ford had been delegated to work out the plan for the party, and what follows will reveal how well they succeeded.

In two autos we proceeded down along the Jersey Coast, through Seabright, Red Bank, West End, Long Branch, Deal Beach, Allenhurst, Asbury, Ocean Grove, Etc. The writer confesses to inability to adequately describe the beauties of that section of country, its beautiful homes, magnificent and artistic gardens and grounds, also Mr. Fenrich's beautiful home at Bradley Beach, where Mrs. Fenrich and her husband entertained us royally for an hour. Mr. Irwin took a photograph of the party. We next stopped at Lakewood for some very welcome refreshments, then drove around Mr. George Gould's estate, Georgian Court, a veritable dreamland. We continued through real country to Toms River, where more timely refreshments were had, and arrived at Forked River, our destination. After a good dinner we explored the town a bit and made purchases of fishing paraphernalia, etc., and passed the evening playing cards. The next morning found everyone masqueraded, Ford looking like the banker, Siebrecht the rich farmer, Totty and Duckham like lawyers, Scott a miner, Fenrich as healthy as a butcher, Meissem the veteran fisherman, Jacobson, a boat builder, Irwin and Reidel like enthusiastic young fishermen. After breakfast, a stage conveyed us to the boat landing. The Evelyn is a gasoline yacht, constructed for long cruising, well built and comfortable. All hands got busy with their tackle, and soon we reached the fishing grounds, where the weakfish made some more welcome than others, and one humorous incident after another followed. About 100 fish were caught, Scott and Meissem having about 50 per cent of the total catch to their credit.

The first disappointment was the announcement by Messrs. Totty and Duckham, that they were obliged to leave us that evening, so retaining a few of the weakfish for our breakfast, the remainder were duly packed into a basket, and we weepingly escorted the two to the railroad station, and bid them God speed. That evening was spent playing cards and planning for the morrow. Meissem, Scott, Reidel, Siebrecht and Jacobson arose at 3 A. M. to go pickerel fishing in the Forked River. It is very pleasing to note such real enthusiasm and joy, and it is a sign of fine character to be able to transform into a perfect boy now and then. The four men returned in time for breakfast, three of them loaded with fish stories, and one with a real pickerel.

This proved the big day, however. After sailing for twenty miles, we arrived off the Barnegat Light. Trolling for bluefish, only two or at the most three men can have a line, as otherwise the lines would get tangled. The more experienced in the party very willingly gave the others a chance at the sport. When it came the writer's turn to hold the line he was lucky enough to get three with the assistance of others, one being an 8-pounder. Off the Whistling buoy, Reidel distinguished himself by catching two big sea bass at one haul, with rod and reel. All the others caught some bass, fluke, sharks, sea robins, skates, etc. We got seven large bluefish in all. It was a glorious day indeed, a deep and pleasing memory to all. The same autos conveyed us back to Lakewood, and thence we proceeded to Asbury by way of Pt. Pleasant, Sea Girt, Belmar, Avon, Bradley, Ocean Grove and were obliged to part from Mr. Fenrich, who had constantly looked to our comfort with the skill and grace of a perfect host. Almost before we knew it the brakeman called Jersey City, and after crossing the ferry, we parted to go to our homes. Let us hope that next year will find all well, young and enthusiastic, and that we may repeat this most pleasant of all picnic parties.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
 $4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

When writing to advertisers kindly mention HORTICULTURE.

And this is the greenhouse we built at the Yale and Towne factory, Stamford, Conn.

20,000 bedding plants are grown here—enough for all the grounds and a liberal surplus for distribution among the workmen.

Another Link in the Story of the Great Floral Awakening

WITHOUT doubt you recall the page we had a few weeks ago telling the interesting story of how the Bethlehem Steel work came to beautify their grounds with flowers. Also the way it finally resulted in their building one of our finest curved eave greenhouses for growing their thousands of bedding plants needed. And now here is the story of Yale & Towne's, another similar case. The making of high grade building hardware, that they do; and the growing of flowers; seem a long way apart.

But Mr. Towne believes that the making of better hardware is best accomplished by making better men.

Those things we do best are those things in which we take a pride in the doing.

To awaken interest and pride in the environment of workmen is undeniably reflected in the pride in their work.

To beautify a factory's grounds is not a matter of sentiment. It's just a matter of plain, every day economics.

In this factory beautifying movement the greenhouse plays a vital part. It is one of the necessities.

For over half a century we have been building greenhouses. Logically, we know how they should be built, which accounts for so many of these big corporations buying our houses.

When you are ready to build, we would like to talk with you about the building. Say when and where and we'll be there.

CONVENTION NUMBER

BURPEE'S WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCER SWEET PEAS

Originated at Fordhook Farms and Grown at Floradale Farm.
Absolutely fixed—true to color and type.

We began hybridizing the original Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas, namely, Burpee's Earliest of all (Christmas Pink), Burpee's Earliest White, Burpee's Earliest Sunbeams and Burpee's Re-selected Earliest of All with the finest varieties of the summer flowering Spencers at our FORDHOOK FARMS in 1909. It is, however, quite a slow process to thoroughly "true" and "fix" these seedlings, and it being against the principles of our business to put any novelty on the market in an unfixed condition, we are offering only two varieties at present. The stocks of these, we know to be absolutely fixed, true to color and type. After our crops are harvested we may be in a position to offer, in a limited way, several other winter-flowering novelties, particulars of which will be found in Burpee's Annual for 1916.

FORDHOOK PINK

is the result of a cross made at our Fordhook Farms in 1909. The color is a beautiful shade of rose-pink on white ground; the coloring deepening towards the edge of the standard and wings. The flowers are of largest size, exquisitely waved and usually produced in threes and fours on long stems. Unsurpassed for cut flower trade. Awarded Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of the PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915.

In sealed packets containing twelve seeds each. Per pkt., 25 cents; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.25; per oz., $4.00.

is the result of a cross made at our Fordhook Farms in 1910. This lovely novelty is a charming shade of rosy-carmine. The flowers are of largest size and usually borne in threes and fours on long stiff stems. Awarded Certificates of Merit at the INTERNATIONAL SHOW, New York, March 20, 1915, and at the Spring Show of the PENNSYLVANIA HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY, Philadelphia, March 23, 1915.

In sealed packets containing twelve seeds each. Per pkt., 25 cents; ¼ oz., $1.35; ½ oz., $2.25; per oz., $4.00.

YARRAWA

THE SWEET PEA PAR EXCELLENCE FOR WINTER-FLOWERING UNDER GLASS. We were awarded Certificates of Merit for this superb novelty at the International Flower Show in New York, March, 1914, and at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915. YARRAWA is an easy and good "doer," invariably giving an excellent account of itself, whether grown in pots, boxes, raised benches or solid beds. YARRAWA has the heavy foliage and rank, strong growth of the summer-flowering type and is a true winter-blooming Spencer. From seed sown early in October at Fordhook Farms, the plants came into bloom December 20 and flowered profusely until May. The flowers are exquisitely waved and when well grown will average two and one-half inches in diameter, many of them being duplex, or double-flowered, thus adding greatly to the general effect of the bunch. They are borne usually in fours on extra long, strong stems. The color is a most pleasing shade of bright rose-pink, with light wings. FLORADALE-GROWN SEED EXCLUSIVELY, ¼ oz., $1.00; per oz., $3.50; ¼ lb., $12.50; lb., $45.00.

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weather-proof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

ROCHESTER EXPOSITION AND FLOWER SHOW

AUG. 30 TO SEPT. 11, 1915

One Quarter Million People Visited Exposition Last Year—Greatest Permanent Municipal Exposition in the Country

To the Florists

Come to the Rochester Flower Show; see the new and standard varieties in plants and flowers. You cannot plan a better vacation than to visit the Exposition and see the Flower City. If the florists in New York and other nearby states will give us their support by attending, another year will see almost every prominent Grower as Exhibitor. An annual Mid-Summer Exhibit is needed, where Florists can see the different lines and meet the Growers without traveling the Country over.

List of Exhibitors

J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; C. Betscher, Canal Dover, O.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I.; Wilbur A. Christy, Warren, O.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.; R. & J. To the Growers

The Exposition and Flower Show opens August 30. There is plenty of time to secure space. Write the Committee the amount required. Prospective Exhibitors will receive every attention, including a good location.

A Declaration

We hereby declare that our next year's Flower Show will be larger and better, although you will see, by looking over the list of exhibitors, that we are going some this year.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Cyclamen

Now is the time to think of next year's cyclamen. First of all procure the best strains as they pay the best in the end. Do not take mixtures; they will probably contain some good colors but others will be included which no one will want. At the holidays the red shades are always in keen demand and while whites and pinks do not then move so quickly they are salable if grown cool until Easter. Do not omit the salmon pinks; they do not carry as large flowers as some other varieties, but the color is decidedly taking. The first half of September is the best time to make a sowing of cyclamen seeds. If given proper treatment plants started now will prove one of the best investments for the Christmas trade of 1916. Either pans or flats may be used for the soil, but be sure the drainage is good. Cyclamen should always be grown as near the glass as possible, for if the least drawn they lose much of their beauty.

Bouvardias

Many kinds of florist's stock can only be grown to perfection during the warmer season in open field rows. Bouvardias are such, but they are equally as sensitive as other plants to untoward weather conditions such as may now be expected. All bouvardias should be lifted before the nights become too cold. These plants do well in five inches of soil. A good compost is three parts fibrous loam to one of well decayed cow manure. Bouvardias recover slowly after being lifted from the field, unless the job is assigned to careful hands. Though quite resentful in this respect they are in no way particular as to the grade of soil used in potting and in any fair sample of good florists' compost they will do nicely. If this work is attended to properly the plants will show no bad effects. A foot apart is little enough for any of them. It is easy with almost any temperature to get the first crop of bouvardias but not so easy to get them to make a growth and a profitable crop of flowers in midwinter.

Mignonette

It is now time to sow the main crop of mignonette. To flower well after the new year the seed should be planted before the first of September. When planted later than this they do not move along very fast. They can be sown in 2½ or 3-inch pots. Any house that can be kept at about 45 degrees during the cold weather will suit mignonette. New soil three parts, leaf mold one part and some sand will be a good compost. Place in a frame and keep shaded until they show signs of coming up, when they should have full sun. They should be kept moist at all times as they will not stand to be allowed to dry out too often. Keep a lookout for the greenworms and fly.

Paper White Narcissus

"Any old soil" for these bulbs is wrong. Use good, sweet soil, have proper drainage in flats and don't plant too closely. The more space between the bulbs the better, for only by so doing can you expect to produce flowers on stiff stems. A deep cold frame is a good place for the bulbs after being planted. Cover the frame with boards or other material to prevent the sun from drying out the flats. By the middle of October the first batch can be brought to the violet house, or anywhere that there is plenty of sunshine and the temperature can be kept down; for the cooler you grow the paperwhites the better for them. Keep them always moist at the roots, for when allowed to dry out they receive a check which will show in the blooms.

Propagating Geraniums

A good plan for growers who have any large stock plants to cut from is making a clean sweep at this time, putting in all the cuttings needed for the coming season's stock, and then done with it. Those having at their disposal but a limited space in greenhouse or garden save a reasonable number of good stock plants from spring sales. Take well-ripened tips, three or four inches long, as short-jointed as possible, cut or break off at or below a node or joint, trim off the lower leaves firmly, insert into sand. It will do no harm to let them wilt. Give one good watering after insertion and keep them a little on the dry side ever afterward. Some growers root their geraniums in two-inch pots, using any kind of good sandy earth, but I have found the regular propagating bed to be the better place for them. If you are short of stock plants you had better start now as you will then be able to get another batch of cuttings in September.

Housing Tender Stock

We are soon coming to the end of August and whatever tender stock you may have out should be in the greenhouse by that time for after the end of this month the nights become too cool for hot-blooded plants. So start early with this work.

The President's Message

The address by President Welch to the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists compares favorably with the best presidential messages of his predecessors. That old worn-out question "What has the S. A. F. done for the profession?" is not only answered by Mr. Welch but he has also given a most forceful presentation of what the Society can do, should do and will do if rightly supported by those who would be the greatest beneficiaries. It is a paper which will read well to the practical man and make a strong appeal to his business judgment, clean-cut and healthy in its sentiments and reflecting the best thought of the leading exponents of organized usefulness. We hope our readers all will do Mr. Welch, and the great association for which he speaks, the honor and justice of a careful reading of his thoughtful message.

Big May Show for Boston

The preliminary schedule for the 1916 exhibitions of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society which we publish in this issue mark a quite radical step in the activities of this old but alert organization. The usual Spring Exhibition taking place in March has been reduced in scope and prize appropriations and its importance minimized as compared with a new and very ambitious show to be held in May, at which, in addition to a number of valuable cups and medals, some four thousand dollars in cash prizes will be awarded. One reason for curtailing the March exhibition is the very laudable purpose not to detract from the National Flower Show which is scheduled to take place during that month at Philadelphia or to divert the attention of large exhibitors from that important event. Doubt has been expressed by some as to the practicability of attracting sufficient public support for such an enterprise so late in the spring season but, with commendable courage, the Society has cast the die and will test it out and we hope to see the project heartily seconded and supported by the leading plant and flower growers of the country, all of whom are invited to compete. We commend to all such a careful reading of the schedule the dissemination of which has been hastened in order to give intending exhibitors as much time as possible for preparatory work.

A point for careful consideration

Taking it for granted that the dominant motive behind the Convention Garden feature of the annual meetings of the S. A. F. is to educate the public and stimulate the desire for a better and more general use of plants and flowers, then the suggestion of President Welch and others that these gardens after having been once established should be made permanent, seems most appropriate and to the point. Under any conditions the job of locating, planting and care of such an undertaking is very far from being a sinecure and if permanency as a cared-for public reservation is to be considered in all cases it will mean plenty of serious business for the newly constituted Convention garden committee. The preparatory work and general layout for an enduring affair which will be creditable to all concerned and accomplish the purpose for which

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Syringing

Syringing will play an important part in the growing of roses from now on, much more important than ever before. Before attempting to syringe make sure that the plants are wet enough, so that the leaves will not burn afterward. We find that it is best to syringe as quickly as possible, with good pressure, holding the hose in front of you, and walking forward instead of backward as has been the custom to do. Then we go over the plants twice, syringing them from one side and then from the other, but very quickly, so as not to wet the benches enough to make much difference in drying out. The benches should not be found soaked after syringing, as by doing the work with a little care the water can be thrown so that most of it will go across the benches into the walks. With Beauties, especially in the earlier planted houses, it will be necessary to shake the plants so that they will be sure to dry off properly for the night. This is more important than may seem, as the houses will dry very little at night now, for with so much rain the air is very damp and dew is heavy. Later when it is cool enough to run steam the houses will dry much better at night, but the days will be shorter, so it will be even more important to have the houses dry for the night. There should be no spider anywhere at this time of the year, and if there is a trace of it, make sure that the place is marked and special care taken to clean it out. If it promises to be bad at all, get some good insecticide and apply it with a brass greenhouse syringe so that it gets well under the leaves where the spiders stay. Applying it with a sprayer will not be as good, as the spray will be too coarse and it will be difficult to reach under the leaves.

Painting

With the heavy showers that came almost daily, painting this year has been almost impossible for a month or so. However, the weather is more promising now, and all hands that can be spared should take the work up in earnest. It does not pay to let the houses go unpainted. Remove as much of the old paint as can be taken off without cutting into the wood, and if the houses have not been painted a long time, better figure on two coats, using the paint thick enough to keep it from running, but no thicker for the first coat. Use pure white lead and raw oil only, avoiding all turpentine or drier, unless a shower threatens or the painting is done in a place where water has to be sprinkled soon after the painting. Then a little drier can be used, but not too much. With the hot weather, there will be no trouble to make the paint dry and it will wear much better if only oil and lead are used. If the houses are painted two coats, let the puttying go until just before the second coat is applied. The first coat will help show up the cracks and then the putty will stick better, for the wood will then be saturated with paint, and will not draw the oil out of the putty, leaving it dry, and ready to fall out much sooner than it should. All houses painted on the inside should also be done on the outside, for if they are not the water will come in and freeze in the winter and thus push and loosen the putty so that the houses will leak again the first season after painting. Aim to have the putty very thin—so thin in fact that it cannot be handled with the hands. It will work into the holes better and then give the wood a chance to take up some oil without leaving the putty dry. To do this a lump of putty can be placed on a piece of glass and then taken off as needed with a putty knife. Avoid using too much white lead in the putty, as this makes it very hard, and although it will stick better it is almost impossible to remove it when repairing broken glass. If plain putty is used with very little white lead, and the houses kept painted, it will last good, and there will be little trouble to remove it should it be necessary to do some repairing. In glazing, keep the glass the bowed side up. There is a theory that if the glass is reversed the water will run down the center of the glass instead of running down along the bar. This does not work however, for the water will not run over the laps, but will condense there until there is enough to push it to the bar, and it will then run down alongside of the bars, no matter which way the glass is turned. In a recent hailstorm the number of lights broken in a house glazed bowed side down was nearly twice as large as the breakage in the house glazed properly. There is always a little spring or give to a glass when placed bowed side up, whereas if placed the other way it breaks with the least pressure. Use good rust-proof zinc points, not the three-cornered things used in glazing house windows, but the special greenhouse brads, for sale by greenhouse builders. Avoid getting paint on your hands. Lead is poisonous and the hands should always be kept clean. There is no excuse for having more paint on your person than on the greenhouse. Men doing considerable painting should be especially careful, as no ill effects are felt until the system is saturated with lead, and then the person will collapse all of a sudden. Put the paint where it should be put, and do not waste it by letting it fly all over.

it was created will necessarily be quite a different matter from that of merely making ready for a temporary display to be dismantled at the end of the season. If this attractive proposition is to be incorporated as one of the Society's accepted functions and properly carried out then the necessity for selecting the Convention City two years in advance instead of, as heretofore, one year ahead, becomes obvious. We are pleased to see that President Welch has attached so great importance to this question in his address. The selection of a Convention location will certainly have to be done with much more deliberation and careful investigation than it has been under the hit-or-miss custom in vogue for the past few years if the installing of a permanent outdoor garden is to become an established feature of every Convention.

OPENING SESSION.

The opening exercises took place in Hall H., east side of the fourth floor of the Civic Center Auditorium. The hall was handsomely decorated with boxwood trees, palms, ferns, asters and garden lilies. Vice-president MacRorie introduced the several speakers, the first item on the program being an address of welcome by Hon. James Rolph, Jr., Mayor of San Francisco. It was an elaborate and graceful speech recounting the city's new birth after the great disaster of earthquake and fire, and voicing a warm welcome to the land of sunshine and bright flowers. He spoke in great praise of the work of John McLaren who presides over the horticultural interests of the city and had transformed the wilderness of shifting sand dunes to beautiful Golden Gate Park.

Wm. F. Gude responded on behalf of the visitors to the Mayor's words of welcome, acknowledging with deep gratitude the cordial reception received. Mr. Gude, continuing said: "As practical florists, it may be that we appreciate more than the average visitor to your shores, your floriculture and horticulture, and, from the expressions I have heard already, every member here present of our Society has experienced a double pleasure—that of being at the International Exposition is being held here, we deem ourselves most favored.

It is needless for me to say that I am honored as the presiding officer of this great National Society, one of the few in the United States possessing a charter issued under a special act of the National Congress and signed by the President.

This great opening of our Convention proves that we are not an association of New Yorkers, New Englanders, Pennsylvanians or Virginians, but confirms our boast that we are a national association in representation as well as in name.

We should and we do feel proud of our profession for the wonderful progress it has made. According to the last available census—that of 1899-1909—the sale of plants and flowers advanced from 18,758,864 in 1899 to 34,872,329 in 1909, an increase of 91 per cent. The total number of establishments in the United States in our business in 1909 was 10,614.

The leading states in value of flowers and plants produced are—New York, $5,110,000; Pennsylvania, $3,761,000; Illinois, $3,681,000; New Jersey, $2,839,000; Massachusetts, $2,432,000; Ohio, $2,357,000; California, $1,374,000; Indiana, $1,202,000; Michigan, $1,132,000; Connecticut, $1,042,000.

Membership.

A society gains much of its influence and usefulness from a large membership, and while the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists has been adding strength to its membership, I feel we can do much more in that direction. What work can be more pleasant than the gathering together in one great organization of all our business association in this country?

Experience has shown us that what is everybody's business is not attended to by anyone, and so I say, let the increasing of the membership be an individual matter of pride to us all. We all have a high estimate of the benefits derived from membership in our society; let us memorialize it during the coming year by doubling our membership list.

This is an age of co-operation and affiliation and what was formerly advanced individually is now accomplished only by thorough organization. If we are to perform the mission of this society we can only be satisfied when we have joined to its ranks every man engaged in floriculture and horticulture, whether he is doing business the thrill which prevades every citizen, and the practical feeling of the florist when he considers how you have seized on, and multiplied the advantages given you by Nature."

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

President P. Welch received an ovation as he stepped forward to read his address. The message in full was as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

On any occasion the members of this Society, especially those residing east of the Rockies, could have visited this city with pleasure and profit, but at this time when the great Panama Pain the North, South, East or West of this grand country of ours.

Every state in the Union in which we have members is wisely entitled to a National Vice-President; wisely, I say, because every state has then at least one national officer within its limits. One of the principal duties of the Vice-President is to increase the membership in his state, therefore I urge the Vice-Presidents during this year to conduct active, spirited campaigns for new members in our society. Very few men join an organization such as ours without being invited, and anyone on being informed of the progress which this society has made in the last thirty years will hardly hesitate to become a member when he is invited.

We are proud indeed of the position of our Society today with two thousand members and $30,000 balance in our Treasury, thanks to the wise, discreet and courageous policy displayed by our officers. I feel that with a little effort on the part of our Vice-Presidents especially, our membership can be materially advanced and our usefulness increased accordingly.

The National Flower Show.

For the past six years we have witnessed the success of the National Flower Show and recognized its great value as a medium for educating the public in the love and admiration for horticulture and floral products. It has proved a safe financial enterprise for the society. To insure the continuance of the National Flower Show and in keeping with the ambitions of the society, it is necessary that the best and most efficient members should be placed on that committee.

There is no branch of the work which the S. A. F. has undertaken to put through that calls for co-operation with all other interests as much as the work of the Flower Show Committee—co-operation with the Rose, Carnation, Sweet Pea and Gladiolus Societies, the Private Gardener and all other kindred organizations. What can be accomplished through co-operation in other fields can likewise be accomplished here. All that is required is to emphasize the benefits that are to be derived and the determination to secure them. We have always been successful in securing the aid and support of the horticultural interests in the city where the National Flower Show has taken place and that we must always continue to have, for without it we cannot have a full measure of success.

There is no better agency for horticultural advancement than the one which has for its end a National Flower Show once in two years.

School Gardens.

I am much impressed with the work accomplished in the past by the permanent committee on School Gardens under the leadership of its able and efficient chairman Mr. Benjamin Hammond. This work is of much practical benefit and interest to the boys and girls of this nation, bringing health and strength to growing children. Its installation in school districts throughout the country would bring thrift to many a rising family. The School Garden affords much pleasure and broadens mentality. The training tends to improve home surroundings. A little instruction in this line helps to form habits of thrift and economy. Every member should assist in this work with a hope that it may create an interest in your town or city and be of inestimable value to the future welfare of commercial floriculture.

The Convention Gardens.

Our convention gardens of Minneapolis and Boston have undoubtedly met with the approval of the great majority of our members and the profession in general. Their value from an educational and commercial point of view is recognized by all and the question before us now is: "How can we best continue this important work, in what way and manner can we improve and advance its scope and how can we secure for those gardens permanent existence in the cities where we establish them?"

In the way of advancement it should be made possible to improve upon the plan of the Boston Garden. I should like to see those gardens designed and executed in such a way that they will represent good garden landscape effects, as well as good plant cultivation. It is necessary that all proper planting material and appurtenances known to good garden architecture be employed in the creation of those gardens, where each individual plant or group of plants would be given its proper place in the garden as a whole. This, I realize, cannot be done in one short season and would require not less than two years of planning and execution. To make this possible it would be necessary to select the convention city two years ahead of the meeting in place of one and I want to advance the question at this time, as to why this could not be done.

If the convention garden work can be enlarged upon, along the lines of this suggestion, I believe that the secretary and the local authorities of the convention cities, having the execution of the plans in charge, should have the assistance of a permanent committee of the S. A. F. members consisting of three members well versed and experienced in this work. They shall be appointed by the president, one for three years, one for two years and one for one year. Each president thereafter would make an appointment annually.

In this connection I recommend that after the appointment of this committee the first question they should consider would be an amendment to the constitution providing for the choice of the annual convention city two years in advance. Their recommendation should be submitted to the Executive Board for consideration before being acted upon by the National Convention.

Legislation.

The pioneers in commercial floriculture took conditions as they found them, surmounted difficulties and conquered many obstacles. They did it in their own way without any great assistance from legislation, but that method can no longer go on. We must see to it, that no hostile laws are put upon the statute books. Legislation emanating either from Congress or from any of our State Legislatures, may be helpful, or result in great injury unless prevented by the active work of our legislative committee.

The requirements of this committee call for a reasonable annual appropriation to be used when needed to encourage favorable and prevent hostile legislation. I would recommend that the chairman be given power to secure counsel in Washington or in any of our states, to appear before national or local legislative committees and make known our needs whenever in his judgment this may be necessary.

I would also recommend that our representative in Washington should in the future be given the same privilege that is accorded all other executive members, namely, the right to vote on all questions that may be brought up for adjustment before the Executive Board at the annual meeting. At present he is required to attend all meetings of this Board, but is denied the right to vote which is depriving the society of the benefits that would accrue from the exercise of this privilege by a member whose judgment and experience is of great value to the society.

Co-operation.

The parent society has ever been renowned for her many activities in behalf of advanced horticulture. It has played an important role with patience, zeal and determination, to the end that co-operation between the allied societies should be a fitting and notable achievement. To the committee comprising Messrs. Theodore Wirth, George Asmus and William F. Kastings, we owe a debt of gratitude for their labor, loyalty, unflinching patience and persistence.

The first practical step towards real affiliation with the kindred societies and florists' clubs throughout the country was passed at the last convention in Boston. Under the terms of this amendment the New York, Boston and Philadelphia Florists' Clubs, the Telegraph Delivery Association, the American Rose and Carnation Societies are now represented on the Executive Board by their President. This increase in the Board ought to prove of great value to this society and contribute much toward a liberal policy between the clubs and the parent society.

The wisdom and success of having the various minor organizations made a sectional portion of the S. A. F. & O. H. is no better exemplified than in the instance of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and the consequent effects upon the parent body. This organization has grown immensely within the past four years. Approximately two hundred and thirty-five firms have joined the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and resultantly members of these firms are also members of our National Society.

The benefits from this important branch of the flower business are not retained by the retailer alone, but are passed on through the various branches to the humblest employee of the grower. This certainly makes it worth while for every retailer of standing to join and receive the benefits of its workings and also to assist the national association which has helped materially in its formation. We ought to make every effort possible to induce other clubs throughout the country to become interested in this movement.

I would recommend that the constitution be amended so that the members before taking their seat in the Executive Board have the consent of the majority of the club or society they represent.

Publicity.

It is needless to point out the value of publicity for the dissemination of proper knowledge and educating the public in the more general use of horticultural products. It is necessary for the society to organize a "Publicity Bureau," whose work would be along the lines of a campaign, directed primarily for the annual increase of the sale of flowers, plants and plant products, through new and varied channels and also to take means to prevent any society, corporation or individual from decrying the use of these products for special occasions. We very often learn of repeated attempts made to discourage the use of our feel that the results would justify a reasonable expenditure annually for the maintenance of such a committee.

National Credit and Collection Department.

I am forcibly reminded by a large number of the members of our Society of the pressing necessity for creating a national bureau of credits, a central office where credit information can be kept and references obtained. The commercial interests of our business have grown to such an extent during the past fifteen years as to call for a more up-to-date standard of business practice.

There ought not to be any objection to such a movement as it is highly probable that it would do a great deal of good and there is but little danger that it would do any harm. It should, however, be carefully guarded so that it could be used mutually by both of the country, to consider this subject and report at the meeting of the Executive Board in 1916.

American Products.

There is a constantly growing sentiment in this country among those who have given the subject study that the time has now arrived when a large part if not the whole of the horticultural products which have been grown and imported from Europe should be grown in this country. This is something I have had in mind for some time past.

We should not seek to take advantage of the unfortunate conditions existing in Europe at the present time, and this society will do its part toward helping to maintain the commercial honor of the United States so that we shall emerge from this war period with the love and admiration of all nations concerned.

products. Such cases should be taken up by the Publicity Bureau and every means possible taken to offset the effects of such adverse influences.

I am very much in favor of a standing committee of five members whose duty it shall be to co-operate with the retailers, wholesalers and producers so that our business shall be brought before the public in a much more favorable and effective light than it has been in the past.

We should have recourse to the leading daily papers throughout the country, which I believe will gladly publish from time to time articles on Commercial Floriculture. This will have a wonderful effect for it will bring before the American people the merits of our business and the enjoyment derived from the use of our products.

The hour has come when we should give this question our best thought and action. I think greater benefits can be secured from aggressive work of this nature than any we can engage in. I debtor and creditor. The slightest intimation that a creditor was benefiting to any extent at the expense of the debtor would create dissatisfaction and lead to serious results. The preservation of the rights of commercial life, liberty and the pursuit of trade should be upheld and not interfered with.

It is apparant, however, that ways and means should be considered and adopted by which the financial standing, honesty and integrity of the commercial florists could be measured, determined and circulated among our members to the end that honest, upright, just and creditable business men may be singled out from the unjust and unscrupulous operators. I regard this problem a fundamental one, and believe it should be considered and adopted only after a very careful study.

I would suggest the appointment of a committee of nine members to be elected from the large floral centers tions are, according to our best authorities well adapted for the growth of palms, bulbs, nursery stock, etc., which now go to make a total of imports of $2,000,000 annually.

I recommend that a permanent committee of three be appointed to study this problem and seek the advice and counsel of the United States Department of Agriculture, and devise ways and means by which those interested may be encouraged and assisted in taking up this work which ought to bring about good results, and report annually to the society in convention.

Voting.

Experience has taught us that our present system of electing officers at our annual convention occupies too much time. It is wrong to ask a man to stand in line for half an hour and some times longer before he can cast a ballot for the choice of officers.

As a remedy for this condition I would suggest that a list of the members be alphabetically arranged in four books:—Book No. 1 to include all names beginning with the letter "A" and ending with the letter "D." Book No. 3 to include all names of members beginning with the letter "E" and ending with the letter "K." Book No. 3 to include all names beginning with the letter "L" and ending with the letter "R." Book No. 4 to include all names beginning with the letter "S" and ending with the letter "Z." It will be necessary that one teller for each book be appointed to check names, also one to receive the ballots.

This calls for an amendment of our by-laws which I hope will be passed and made effective at the opening session of our next annual convention.

Finish.

The trade and commerce in seeds, plants and flowers are of such national magnitude and importance that they are justly classed among the great business interests in this country. There is no more charming art and occupation than the cultivation of flowers, plants and fruit-bearing trees. There is no calling more conducive to human welfare than that of the horticulturist.

Today let us applaud the work of our chosen officers for what they have done in the past but let us make this applause count by seeing that the good work continues. Let us see to it, that the society is built up, its influence increased by the combined efforts and with the co-operation and assistance of all kindred organizations, so that the next generation can look with pride on the work accomplished and take for their motto the inspiring words of Edward Everett Hale "Look up and not down, look out and not in, look forward and not back and lend a hand."

REPORTS.

Secretary John Young's report was the next article on the program. It was followed by the report of Treasurer W. F. Kasting and both were appreciatively applauded.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Secretary John Young read his annual report, as follows:

At the time of our last convention the florist trade, in common with many other industries, was feeling the effect of conditions brought about by the regrettable war precipitated in Europe, and while these conditions have not improved by any means, we have become somewhat accustomed to them, and we shall congratulate ourselves that business has not been much worse. Some localities have felt the depression more than others, while in other communities business has been near to the normal point. The cut flower section has felt the decline perhaps more keenly than other sections of the business, but preparations for another season have been pushed along in an atmosphere of cheerfulness, with the hope that the business horizon will clear before the end of the year.

Exhibition

Our trade exhibition has suffered this year from causes beyond control. The florists' supply trade has been unable to make the usual showing, for the reason that imported goods are just now a very poor possibility, and our own manufacturers have not had time to adjust themselves to circumstances, at least as far as the production of novelties in various lines is concerned. Distance, and cost of transportation to San Francisco are other factors which have tended to cut down our exhibits. Notwithstanding, our trade exhibition is this year most creditable, and the interest it has provoked quite as strong as at previous conventions.

Membership.

The bulk of our increase in membership is provided by California and the Pacific coast states. While it is not unusual for the Society to experience a large influx of members from a convention city and nearby territory, the business standing of those initiated this year is extraordinarily high in the aggregate, and your secretary hopes this means that the names of these new members will long remain on our membership roll, reminding us that their interest in the society and its work was not merely of a "passing" character.

The following have sent in one or more names for membership since the last convention:

Daniel MacRorie, 102; Florists' Telegraph Delivery, 24; J. F. Hahmann, 15; E. T. Mische, 11; W. R. Nicholson, 5; J. J. Hess, 3; Patrick Welch, J. F. Huss, F. H. Holton, Florists' Hall Assn., Harry S. Betz, 2 each; J. W. Duncan, 3; J. H. Dick, L. M. Gage, A. Farenwald, 1 each.

The report of the Legislative Committee given by W. F. Gude created much interest. The committee was continued with power to combat the harmful legislation complained of, especially that requiring inspection of low pressure small capacity greenhouse boilers and requiring licensed engineers to operate them. President Welch recounted the success achieved by the Massachusetts florists in killing proposed legislation of this character in that state as applied to horticulturists. The report of the committee follows.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON LAW AND LEGISLATION.

Your committee had but two propositions referred to it during the past year. One of these propositions was brought up by J. A. Petersen of Cincinnati, Ohio, who complained of the classifications of express rates in reference to plants shipped in pots and plants shipped out of pots, insisting that there should be a lower rating on plants shipped in pots or tubs. The matter was promptly taken up with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Commission, in turn, corresponded with the several transportation companies, requesting an expression of their views. After receiving all the data that could be reasonably obtained, including copies of the correspondence between the Interstate Commerce Commission and the express companies, your committee reached the conclusion that, as the express companies seemed to be losing money on the present rates, it was an inopportune time to attempt to bring about a reduction of our rates. In other words, your committee felt that it would be the part of wisdom to "let well enough alone," and that an agitation of this matter at that time might result in our rates being raised, rather than lowered, under the authority given the Interstate Commerce Commission by Congress, in March last, to revise or change the express rates.

Subsequently, your committee received notice from the Interstate Commerce Commission that a hearing would be given on the question of express rates, May 26, 1915. Feeling that the florists should be represented, your committee had A. Leftwich Sinclair, an attorney, appear at this hearing, as counsel for our Society. In his reports, attached hereto, Mr. Sinclair explains the purpose and scope of the hearings attended by him and points out the procedure which will have to be followed, if our Society wishes to obtain a formal hearing on the question of the rating of plants. Mr. Sinclair also suggests that, before filing the necessary petition with the Interstate Commerce Commission, our Society should arrange for a conference with the representatives of the various express companies with a view to an amicable adjustment of this matter.

The other question referred to your committee relates to legislation concerning boiler inspection. It appears that, from time to time, numerous bills are introduced in the state legislatures to require the inspection and regulation of boilers. It has been suggested that, within the next year or so, there will probably be a large number of bills of this character introduced in the state legislatures, and that our Society should provide machinery by which we can resist the passage of legislation which would work a hardship on our industry. As illustrating the vicious character of some of these bills, your committee is informed that, only a short time ago, there was introduced in the legislature of the State of Pennsylvania a bill requiring every owner of a low pressure heating boiler to pay $5.00 a year for the inspection of that boiler, if his boiler should be over four feet of grate area and carry over ten pounds of pressure. Had that bill passed, every florist in the State of Pennsylvania would have been obliged to pay to that state the sum of $5.00 a year, or more, depending on the number of boilers in use.

Your committee is also informed that there are statutes in force in several of the states which provide that every steam boiler carrying over ten pounds of steam pressure must be in charge of a licensed engineer, and that a movement is on foot looking to the enactment of similar laws throughout the country.

All such propositions, in the opinion of your committee, should be fought by our society with all the force at its command. It is, therefore, recommended that the scope of your committee be enlarged, without delay, so that the committee can keep in touch with proceeding of the State Legislature, as well as those of Congress, and be prepared to resist the passage of all bills found to be detrimental to the members of our society.

If the foregoing recommendation of your committee is adopted, your committee should be authorized to arrange for a reporting service of some kind, and to employ counsel to represent the society, whenever, in the judgment of your committee the services of counsel are required.

Mr. Gude presented an addenda to the foregoing report stating that most important action the committee had been called on to take referred to fall shipments of azaleas and other Belgian plants at present under embargo by British authority, which, being exclusively of Belgian origin and production and the enemies of Great Britain getting no revenue or benefit from their sale, the embargo while not helping British would work considerable harm both to Belgian shippers and American importing florists. The U. S. trade advisors had informed committee how to proceed in the matter of securing permits for the importation of azaleas, etc., from British authorities and the committee has good reason for believing that these shipments will arrive this fall on schedule time. Definite information will be given in the trade papers as soon as an official decision is rendered by the British authorities.

(A favorable decision on this matter was published in HORTICULTURE for August 14—Ed.)

The report of Mr. Gude as Washington representative of the S. A. F. follows in full.

REPORT OF WASHINGTON REPRESENTATIVE, WM. F. GUDE.

The past year has been one of watchful waiting rather than strenuous action in the National Capital, so far as the interests of our Society are concerned. The demands on your representative there have not been excessive, from which I assume that the florists of our country have no fault to find with the laws enacted by Congress during the year.

In the early part of the winter a communication was received by your representative in which objection was raised to the classification of express rates on potted plants and plants not in pots. Another communication was received, in relation to bills introduced in the State Legislatures, providing for the inspection and regulation of steam boilers. Both of these communications were referred to the Committee on Legislation and will, doubtless, be dealt with by that committee in its annual report.

The most important event of the year, both locally and nationally, was the formal dedication of the Rose Gardens, at Arlington Farms, on June 2nd, 1915. Some fifty odd florists came from different cities, as far away as Boston, to be present at the ceremonies. A meeting of the American Rose Society was called in the rooms of the American Institute of Banking, where the party met on the date mentioned. After this meeting, they went in automobiles to the Arlington Farms, three miles away, in a downpour of rain. While the Gardens were in full bloom and showed up well, the drenching rain storm, which had lasted three days, had a very depressing effect on the general beauty of the Gardens. After viewing the Gardens, the party returned to the city, where the formal dedication took place and interesting addresses were made by officers of the National Government, the President of the Rose Society, and others.

After the dedicatory exercises had been concluded, the party went by automobiles to Twin Oaks, the home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell, daughter of the late Mrs. Gardner G. Hubbard, donor of the Gardner Hubbard Memorial Medal. Mrs. Bell had extended a kind invitation to the party to inspect her rose gardens. The party was most cordially received by Mrs. Bell and an

Other reports were presented, including the minutes of the Executive Board meeting last winter. Reports of State Vice Presidents were not read but ordered printed as usual.

MEETING PLACE FOR 1916.

Invitations were extended for Houston, Texas, championed by W. W. Coles of Kokomo, Ind., and backed by telegrams from various officials and the Florists' Club of that city; from New York, presented by A. T. Delamare, representing the N. Y. Florists club and several business organizations; by William Allen seconded by R. M. Ward and others for New Orleans, La. After considerable spicy oratory nominations Francis Hotel. The result gave Houston, Texas, 105 votes, New York 28 votes and New Orleans 12 votes. Houston was accordingly declared winner amidst much cheering.

PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION.

The President's Reception, in all cases one of the most popular of the convention features, was held according to program in the St. Francis Hotel. President and Mrs. Welch were assisted in receiving by a brilliant line of local and visiting society officials and others. There was music, dancing and refreshments, and the affair will go down into history as a most delightful success.

hour and a half was pleasantly and profitably spent at her beautiful home. The affair was voted a big success and one of the most interesting events in the annals of floriculture and horticulture.

I am pleased to state that the pride taken in the S. A. F. and O. H. by the florists of the National Capital, is surpassed by no other city in the Union, and is attested by the presence here today of nearly a dozen members of this Society, from Washington, three thousand miles away.

With hearty greetings and best wishes to all, I remain, as ever,

Yours for service,

TUESDAY EVENING SESSION.

Houston Wins.

Balloting for choice of convention city for 1916 took place at the St

WEDNESDAY'S SESSION.

The first business following the formal announcement of the result of the ballot for next Convention City was the presentation of the report of the National Flower Show Committee by George Asmus, chairman.

REPORT OF THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW COMMITTEE.

By Chairman George Asmus.

Since making my last report to the Convention in Boston a year ago, matters pertaining to the Show in Philadelphia next spring have progressed and favorably. At a meeting held in Philadelphia last November the local organization work was drafted and chairmen of committees carefully selected. They are as follows:

Committee on Press, Publicity and Advertising, W. F. Therkildson; Securing Exhibits, William Kleinheinz; Decorations, John Habermehl; Special Premiums, Wm. P. Craig; Special Features, Chas. Grakelow; Lease and Contracts, A. Farenwald; Music, Leo Nielsen; Printing, S. S. Pennock; Concessions, Henry F. Michell; Trade Tickets, E. J. Fancourt; Lectures, J. Otto Thilow; Bureau of Information, Frederick Cowperthwaite; Secretary and Treasurer, A. A. Niessen; Committee-at-Large, George Burton, Louis Burk, Robert Craig.

These gentlemen appointed from among the craft in Philadelphia, others to serve on these committees. The chairmen of these committees form what is known as a Local Executive Committee to carry out in detail the work of the show. Such committees have met from time to time, about once a month, and are enthusiastic about the coming exhibition. Through the generosity of H. F. Michell Co. and H. A. Dreer the grass plots in front of the big Convention Hall, where the show is to be held, have been tastefully planted and serve as a beautiful advance guard of what will happen in the near future in the building. There recently appeared in the Philadelphia Record about a half page, showing the building, in front and grounds, as treated by the above mentioned firms. This shows the good work that is being done by the Publicity Bureau of which Mr. Therkildson is the head.

I also wish to mention the good work of Mr. Farenwald and the Committee on Lease and Contracts. By their earnest efforts the rental for this mammoth building has been secured at the low rate of $100 per day. We have been able to secure the co-operation of the American Carnation Society, this being the 25th year since the organization of that Society, the same to be celebrated by a silver jubilee to be held at Philadelphia in connection with the show. Their premium list has been prepared by them and, underwritten by the Society, will be published in the next edition of the "Premium List" which will go out some time this fall. By this time The American Rose Society will have their list completed and same will also be a part of the next schedule.

The plant growers, of whom there are so many in the vicinity of Philadelphia, are already making preparations. The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society have joined hands and have appointed a committee of three to work in conjunction and act as part of the Local Executive Committee. The guaranteed funds of $10,000 has been completed and contains the usual country-wide list of guarantors. William P. Craig, Chairman of Committee on Special Premiums, reports a very large list of donors and expects to more than double what he now has in the near future.

The size of the building, which will enable all of the show to be on one floor, should work out very favorably, and then the large balcony with its great seating capacity will prove to be a feature of the show that will appeal to the public as there seems to be a delight to sit among the flowers and listen to the music. The installation of heat for the building has been cared for and will be installed at a very normal cost. The total premium list, as offered, is $15,000, the largest sum ever offered in this country at a flower show.

I will conclude my report by saying that in my estimation the coming exhibition in Philadelphia will, from all standpoints eclipse anything ever before attempted in this country, and I have no doubts about the financial success. This annual Convention of the Society not being held in the east this year or next will no doubt help to sell space at the National Flower Show, as the records of previous exhibitions show that the attendance by the trade at the past exhibitions have been greater than at the convention and it is at a season of the year when the buyer is usually in the market for his spring or Easter business.

Secretary Young stated that all prospects are favorable and he can see a bright augury for the National Flower Show in the whole-hearted cooperation which is assured in Philadelphia. A ladies' organization has been started in Philadelphia and preliminaries are developing satisfactorily in all respects.

COMMITTEE ON PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

The committee on President's address made a well-considered report favorably endorsing all the recommendations made by President Welch. They recommended the appointment of a special committee to draft proposed amendments to the Constitution for submission to the executive board and on their approval to be voted on at the next Convention, covering the president's views as to the selection of the Convention City two years in advance, the employment of counsel to assist the legislative committee, making the Washington representative an ex-officio member of the executive board, providing that directors be elected instead of appointed and that executive board members from affiliated organizations shall furnish credentials of their election. The president's publicity recommendation was endorsed and adopted, also his recommendation as to a committee of nine to consider how best to handle national credits and collections, but the committee to incur no expense and report to the executive board. This recommendation was adopted after a very full and interesting discussion generally participated in, the consensus of opinion being that this matter requires careful handling because it treads dangerous ground and probably would be best if conducted by some affiliated body not directly involving the parent organization. The recommendation to improve voting methods was also endorsed and referred to a special committee to draft the proper constitutional amendment. The general acceptance of the president's recommendations was a signal recognition of his ability, zeal and devotion which fact the committee in concluding its report called attention to.

NOMINATION OF OFFICERS.

Vice-President Daniel MacRorie was unanimously nominated for the presidency, the nomination being made by W. F. Gude and seconded by H. W. Kruckeberg. W. W. Coles nominated and J. J. Hess seconded Robert C. Kerr of Houston, Texas, for vice-president and George Asmus nominated W. F. Kasting for treasurer, no other candidates being presented for either of these offices. For the position of secretary John Young was nominated by J. A. Peterson, seconded by W. W. Coles, and John R. Fotheringham by D. Raymond, seconded by H. A. Hyde.

VARIOUS MATTERS.

Robert Pyle moved resolutions of sympathy to Edwin Lonsdale, now in the hospital at Los Angeles, which were carried unanimously by a rising vote. Benjamin Hammond moved a similar resolution to Wallace R. Pierson in the hospital in San Francisco, which was seconded by J. J. Hess and carried by an unanimous rising vote. W. F. Kasting moved resolutions on the death of Prof. J. F. Cowell, Botanist of the Society to be formulated by a special committee and chair appointed E. G. Hill, Theo. Wirth and George Asmus to report on Thursday. Ex-President Wirth presented an invitation from the Association of Park Superintendents to attend a stereopticon lecture by Hon. Sam'l B. Hill, president of the Columbia Highway Association, and the invitation was accepted for Wednesday afternoon. Consequently the business scheduled for Wednesday afternoon was proceeded with at the forenoon session—viz., the discussion, "Are Not Insurance Rates on Modern Greenhouse Establishments Too High, in view of the lighter risks accruing from better and less dangerous construction?" led by Wm. F. Kasting, and the report of the committee on National Publicity by Irwin Bertermann, chairman. Mr. Bertermann's report, which follows, was referred to the executive committee to be treated in line with previous action on President's recommendations.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLICITY.

National publicity, a much talked of problem hard to solve, yet with wonderful possibilities and a great future, particularly in the field of the florists' profession.

As a sequence to the talk of Mr. Philip Breitmeyer during the Executive Board meeting at Chicago, March 2, our president appointed the following gentlemen, George Burton, Irwin Bertermann and W. F. Kasting as a committee to deal with the problem. Little has been done further than making the following report which we trust may have a stimulating effect in an undertaking the National Society stands much in need of.

Large appropriations for the furtherance of publicity throughout the land are impractical from a financial standpoint and unless carefully safeguarded and given detail attention, there is much liability that a large percentage of the same be wasted.

Advertising experts of the larger cities have in several instances made suggestions to prominent members of the S. A. F. in regard to national publicity. In the main, their ideas were practical and would no doubt bring results, but it was also very evident that the cost of the same was at no time in accord with the measure of direct returns receivable by the florist fraternity. In fact, one prominent expert had it that $25,000 would be a very reasonable sum with which to start in the city of New York. This, of course sounds well and no doubt would be of immense value, but at the same time it would be impossible to carry such a project forward through the country.

One of the self-evident features that has brought itself clearly to the front in the past few years is the following: that the great national flower shows given in larger centers, the extensive advertising campaigns of the larger individual firms of the country and the national publicity campaign of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery show that there is a great wealth of strength in the S. A. F. and O. H. itself; that we have a strong advertising feature to stand on within our organization.

There are approximately two thousand of the better florists throughout the country closely united, willing and only waiting the proper call to send forth the proper issues before the public. It is true that one florist hasn't the strength in the smallest fraction of a large newspaper, but one individual florist has within himself the power to carry forward a campaign which will interest thousands of people. The florists of a large city like Chicago alone, if properly united on a single subject can place the same before its immense population. This is shown in the newspaper features of united florist advertising in Detroit, Cleveland and Philadelphia newspapers.

It is the firm belief of this committee that if any special line of advertising be taken up and set before the members of this organization in the proper manner, the advertising will be carried throughout the breadth of the country and the expense from the parent source be entirely within the reasonable bounds to be expected.

A few hundred dollars expended by this organization, or obtained collectively from individuals, in properly placing an outline before its members and in aiding them to carry it out will within a reasonable time make its appearance as a national message to the flower buying public. This has been clearly demonstrated through the efforts of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, each individual member using feature advertising on his letter heads, on a majority of one million folders or in his advertising space in newspapers and periodicals. This same plan can easily be carried forward as there is not a member who is not willing to aid the parent association and himself in such a manner. The sum of money expended at the start whether it be one thousand dollars or five thousand dollars, will easily return to the source in the way of strength and influence or in membership itself, for every one connected will be pleased with the results and satisfied with the good accomplished.

We say confidently that if the Society of American florists wants its members to sell a particular flower next Christmas or if it wants a certain line featured or if it has any publicity of any special nature in mind, it can safely do so through its membership and at a cost that is less than one-twentieth of what would be charged by any professionals who are interested in doing the work without the aid of two thousand florists themselves. It did not take long for Madame Russell rose to be known generally—Why? Because thousands of florists boosted it. Neither would it take long for any worthy publicity to reach the public if handled along the same lines.

The coming great Philadelphia show will in itself add a stimulus to the local flower business and with an advertising secretary of the S. A. F. acting with its members themselves, publicity space could be procured for a few dollars that could not be had for a larger sum in a direct manner. Many new, also immensely worthy exhibits will be shown there and great good will come to this organization and financial benefit to the trade if this be used as a small instance, by every florist in his dealing with the public.

A telegram of greetings and congratulations from J. C. Vaughan was read. Vice-President MacRorie announced that on Friday morning at 10 o'clock the Exposition authorities would present a plaque to the S. A. F., this to be followed by an address by C. W. Ward of Eureka. The lecture on Wednesday afternoon was much enjoyed by all who attended. It presented magnificent views of road building, mountain scenery and wonderful light effects well worth the trip to the Coast.

THURSDAY'S SESSION.

At the opening of the session Mr. Fotheringham asked to have his name as candidate for secretary withdrawn and that John Young be unanimously elected. This was agreed to and there being no contest for any office all the candidates on the ticket were elected by unanimous vote. A query from the question box as to the best way to increase the supply of carnations for Mother's Day was spiritedly discussed by many members. C. W. Ward extended an invitation to visit with him the redwood forest which it is proposed be set aside for bird protection. R. Vincent, Jr., invited all to visit the Dahlia Show in New York next September. John McLaren and Hans Plath, being called upon, addressed the Convention in words of compliment and good fellowship. President Welch responded appreciatively and several other members spoke, including Robert Pyle who urged the advisability of systematic effort to produce in this country new roses and other plants so as to become independent of Europe.

JUDGES' REPORT

The judges of the trade exhibits reported recommending a gold medal to R. Diener, for improved gladioli; bronze medal and certificate of merit to H. Bayersdorfer & Co., for their elaborate and instructive display of new and novel baskets and supplies; honorable mention to M. Rice Co., for florists' accessories and novelties; highly commending exhibit of A. L. Randall Co.; certificate of merit to S. S. Pennock Meehan Co., for novel ribbons and baskets; bronze medal to Domoto Bros. for new double hydrangea; certificate of merit to The Ferneries for ferns and palms; honor-

Obituary resolutions on Prof. J. F. Cowell were adopted. Speeches by the elected candidates followed, W. W. Coles speaking for R. C. Kerr. Prof. E. A. White also addressed the meeting in an interesting manner on the education of young men in horticulture. After several other felicitous talks by various members adjournment was in order, the only further business being to receive the plaque and pass final resolutions at the Exposition Grounds on Friday morning.

Your committee feels hopeful of receiving some goodly sums from influential citizens and a liberal support from the Congress of the U. S.

Your committee has not decided what form of a memorial to suggest as their decision will no doubt be largely governed by the amount of subscriptions collected and Government influence that they may be able to secure.

WM. F. GUDE, Chairman.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

This important department of the Convention showed up finely—much better than was generally looked for, on account of the great distance away from the headquarters of the many exhibitors who have been accustomed to make large displays in previous years. The Advance Company of Richmond, Ind., was represented by R. E. Jones with his usual exhibit of greenhouse ventilating apparatus and other fittings. Sidney Bayersdorfer and Martin Reukauf were on hand with an excellent array of florists' supplies in full assortment from H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. Hugo Plath of San Francisco showed ferns in variety. H. J. Kessel of San Francisco, Ideal maiden hair ferns. C. F. Gutting, representing the Superior Nurseries, Los Angeles, new fern "Superior." Herbert & Fleishauer, McMinnville, Oregon, new improved asters. John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind., 20th Century ventilating apparatus, etc. Richard Diener, Colma, Cal., thirty-two new varieties of gladiolus. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Ohio, usual display of begonias. A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, florists' and nurserymen's supplies. The Rice Company, Phila., Pa., florists' supplies and ribbons. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, represented by E. J. Fancourt and J. R. Fotheringham, a comprehensive line of florists' ribbons, chiffon, baskets, etc. MacRorie McLaren Co., San Francisco, phalaenopsis. Mrs. Reidy, dahlias. Swiss Floral Company, Portland, Oregon, represented by J. G. Bacher, new forms of petunias originated by themselves.

Atlee Burpee & Co., 750 sq. ft.; Hillsborough Nurseries, 500 sq. ft.; W. F. Kasting Co., 300 sq. ft.; Ferrari Bros., 250 sq. ft.; Fred Grohe, 200 sq. ft.; Chas. H. Totty, 500 sq. ft.; H. A. Dreer, 200 sq. ft.; Swiss Floral Co., 100 sq. ft.; Vaughan's Seed Store, 1000 sq. ft.; Hogan & Kooyman, 100 sq. ft.; E. Gill Nursery Co.

Among the many kind telegrams from San Francisco received at the office of HORTICULTURE during the convention the following one from Prof. A. H. Nehrling, of Amherst Agricultural College, was particularly gratifying:

"I send you greetings from San Francisco and the S. A. F. convention. The opening session was the most interesting and enthusiastic I have ever attended. Our president handled all matters in a creditable manner and Massachusetts may well be proud of him."
A. H. NEHRLING.

A report of the third annual exhibition of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio, also the address of President Paul Huebner before the Railroad Gardeners' Association and several other items which we have in type are crowded out this week but will appear next week.

LADIES' S. A. F.

Greetings by President Mrs. William F. Gude.

Ladies of the S. A. F.:

It is with much pleasure that I welcome you to this, the ninth annual session of the Ladies' S. A. F. and I extend to you all a cordial and heartfelt greeting. We are assembled here to consider the work of the past year and to make plans for the future. May our deliberations be guided by wisdom and may this session be so filled with good work that nothing will mar the harmony of the occasion. May our past experiences help us to improve our present opportunities. Keeping in mind at all times the saying that it is good for men to dwell together in unity and practicing that, it is even better for women to meet and confer together in harmony, sincerity and devotion, to our cause, assisting the men in their able calling by enabling us to make them brighter and happier by the inspiring influences gathered at these meetings. And so when we return to our homes from this convention may we all feel better and happier for having met, refreshed in health and spirit and better enabled to pursue our duties for the coming year. May good health, happiness and prosperity ever abide with you.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION.

The annual report of Secretary John G. Esler for the year ending August 1, 1915, gives in detail the amount of insurance on glass in the different states as well as the number of hail storms and the losses paid in each. The figures show an insurance upon 40,411,003 square feet of glass.

The total receipts for the year ending August 1, 1915, and including last year's balance, as per Treasurer's Report, are $61,590.90.

The total expenditures, as per Treasurer's Report, for the year ending August 1, 1915, are $24,860.78.

The cash balance on hand is $36,730.12, of which $1,713.90 belongs to the Reserve Fund.

The Reserve Fund now amounts to $35,713.90, of which $34,000.00 is invested in first class municipal bonds, and $1,713.90 cash in hands of the Treasurer.

The amount of interest collected on bank deposits for the year is $431.44.

The amount of interest collected on Reserve Fund investments for the year is $1,347.50.

Twenty-two hundred losses have been adjusted since the organization of the F. H. A., involving a total expenditure of nearly $317,000.00.

The number of members at date of closing is 1621.

An equivalent of 110,276 square feet of single thick glass was broken by hail, for which the Association paid $5,513.80; and an equivalent of 196,733 square feet of double thick glass was broken, which cost the Association $13,771.28.

The F. H. A. liabilities at the close of this report are a number of unadjusted losses, the proofs of which are not at hand.

Treasurer Heacock's report was presented at the same time and was in accordance with the foregoing figures.

The Florists' Hail Association re-elected the old officers also C. L. Washburn, Fred Burki and Chas. P. Mueller as directors for three years.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

News of the S. A. F. Convention monopolizes our reading columns to such an extent this week that the fact of the 17th annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents occurring in San Francisco on the same dates as the former has been temporarily side-tracked. But the number of members in attendance from all parts of the country is quite large and the program of the meetings is elaborate and covers many important matters of business as well as a series of inspection tours and entertainments of more than usual interest. The park superintendents leave San Francisco on Sunday morning for the San Diego Exposition.

We hope to present a more detailed account of the proceedings of the association in a later issue.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF GARDENERS.

There was a very light attendance at the meeting of the National Association of Gardeners on Wednesday afternoon in the S. A. F. Hall. Vice-President W. S. Rennie of Ross, Calif., presided, President J. W. Everitt and Secretary M. C. Ebel being unable to attend. Addresses were made by Theodore Wirth and Richard Vincent, Jr., ex-presidents of the S. A. F.

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY.

The meeting of this organization was held on Wednesday forenoon, August 18, as scheduled. In the absence of President Bertermann, also Secretary Pochelon, Wm. F. Gude, vice-president, conducted the meeting. All the officers were re-elected. Frank D. Pelicano of San Francisco, Frank X. Stuppy of St. Joseph, Mo., and August Lange of Chicago were chosen directors for a three-year term, succeeding Philip Breitmeyer, E. Weinhoeber and George Asmus, whose terms had expired. The reports showed a healthy condition financially, and a gratifying increase in membership. J. J. Hess urged that the utmost care should be exercised in scrutinizing the qualifications of all candidates for membership. The committee on revised constitution was continued.

The Gladiolus and Phlox exhibition at Horticultural Hall, Boston, on August 7 and 8 was an attractive affair although not very extensive. Some of the displays were of a very high order of merit, notwithstanding the stormy weather which had used outdoor vegetation very roughly. C. F. Fairbank's one hundred vases of gladioli arranged for effect was a superb display the equal of which has never been seen here and well entitled to the special silver medal bestowed. Phloxes from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Blue Hill Nurseries and others were fair, considering the untoward circumstances. Herbaceous perennial flowers, greenhouse plants, fruit and vegetables were staged by the usual contributors.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

SOUTHAMPTON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The ninth annual exhibition of the Southampton Horticultural Society was held in the Park Grounds in Southampton, N. Y., on July 28 and 29.

The entries this year were a record and the competition in some cases was very keen, as most of the classes were filled. The display of flowers were, according to the oldest members of the society, the best ever seen at Southampton, both in number and quality; in fact, according to various experts, the exhibition was spoken of as the best of its kind ever held on the Island. This exhibition is one of the annual events of the fashionable society that flocks to the colony at Southampton for the summer and the success of the exhibition is due to a large extent to their active assistance.

The most sought for prize is that offered by the Southampton Garden Club of $25, for best 12 varieties of hardy perennials. This was won by Mrs. Pomeroy, gard. J. Cassidy. Other noteworthy exhibits were 12 gloxinias by Mrs. Horace Russell, gard. Wm. McCord, and the display of vegetables tastefully arranged by Mrs. W. G. Curtis, gard. J. Johnson; without doubt this latter was the most talked of exhibit. The display of water lilies by H. A. Dreer was deserving of great praise as also were the many groups by the various nurserymen and florists, including C. E. Frankenbach & Sons, local; G. E. Stumpp & Co., Southampton and New York; Oak Park Nursery Co., Patchogue; Swan River Nursery Co., Patchogue, and John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I. The judges were John Canning of Ardsley, J. Malcolm of Shinnecook Golf Club, Southampton, and W. Halsey, florist, Southampton.

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Despite the intense heat of the past week, the regular monthly meeting of this society was well attended. Honorable mention was accorded to Owen A. Hunwick for a fine specimen plant of Torenia Fournieri gr.-fl. The outing committee made their final report, and was discharged with a vote of thanks. The fall show will be held in the Casino at Stamford, Ct., Nov 5-6. Letters were read from several good friends of the society offering substantial prizes. Messages were read from several of our members enroute to the Coast to attend the convention. All report having a splendid time. The next meeting will be held Sept. 10, when we anticipate a fine display of seasonable flowers. P. W. Popp.

PACIFIC COAST HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

As the monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held Aug. 7th, was the last regular meeting before the S. A. F. Convention, final preparations for that event took up most of the time. Reports were made by the different committee chairmen, which showed that all arrangements for the convention had been well looked after. Announcement was made that a permanent organization to be known as the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society has been organized by the ladies connected with the trade in this vicinity. Members of the society were invited to attend the convention of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association, Aug. 12, 13 and 14. A lecture on "Iris" by S. B. Mitchell was very well received. The evening's exhibits made a splendid showing. A fine display of hybrid seedling gladioli by Mr. Diener was rated at 99 points. A sample of Nephrolepis tuberosa by H. Plath took 80 points. An exhibit of late Crawford peaches by Mr. Shilling was rated at 75 points, and a collection shown by F. T. Pelicano including four samples of cactus dahlias and a vase each of gladiolus Niagara and dahlia Hampton Court was judged at 70 points.

THE ATTRACTIONS OF THE MAINE SEA COAST.

In our notes last week on one of the foremost examples of fine gardening at Bar Harbor, Me., we referred incidentally to the treat that is in store for all who make the trip to that famous "down-east" resort on the occasion of the meeting and exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society which will probably be held there next July. There will be not only the attraction of the beautiful summer estates which abound in the several famed "Harbors" of Mt. Desert but the sublime panorama of rugged coast, islands, reefs and sombre evergreen forests which help to make every minute of the sail from Boston to Bar Harbor a never-to-be-forgotten delight.

On each occasion that we have made the trip to Bar Harbor by either of the several routes provided by the Eastern Steamship Corporation we are more and more deeply impressed by the matchless scenery of the Maine coast. One may go direct by the Bangor steamer from Boston to Rockland, there transferring to the Bar Harbor boat which winds its way around and through the picturesque islands of Penobscot Bay, with the highlands of Mt. Desert in view for hours, passing at Southwest Harbor, far-famed Somes' Sound unrivaled in its placid loveliness by any other view on the Atlantic coast. Even the renowned Hudson River with its wonderful scenery has nothing on the surf-lashed crags of the Mt. Desert coast from Seal Harbor to Bar Harbor. Between Boston and Rockland there is a choice of several routes, via Portland with its magnificent harbor and among the romantic islands and the swirling "hell-gates" of Casco Bay, or via the Bath line, and Seguin light which guards the mouth of the great Kennebec river. One may go by either of these routes and return by another and we have no doubt that the steamship people will be ready with an ideal itinerary when the time comes to get ready for the sweet pea show. Sweet peas grow grandly on Mt. Desert. In common with all other outdoor flowers their colors have a rare purity and sheen, due to the moist and often misty atmosphere, and the lawns present a picture of purest emerald. Few there are who realize until they see it the gorgeous brilliancy of a field of roses, phloxes, irises, peonies, delphiniums or aconites in this soft atmosphere. The Mt. Desert Nurseries have quantities of all these garden favorites and a myriad other gems of the herbaceous garden. During the present month one of the most impressive sights is a section of Arend's wonderful hybrid astibles, of which there are nine or ten distinct varieties, ranging from pure white to deep pink. The flower spikes rise to a height of from three to five feet.

While on the subject of Bar Harbor gardening we must not skip John Stalford, who has a well-managed commercial place. Melons under glass are one specialty with Mr. Stalford. He has five houses of them in bearing at the present time, one house having 170 of these fruits, each suspended in a net. After the melons are gathered the house will be filled with carnations.

NEW NEPHROLEPIS FERN—JOHN WANAMAKER

In presenting this fern to the trade, we feel confident that it will make a place for itself.

The John Wanamaker fern is a wonderful advance over all plain or wavy frond varieties. The side pinnae of the fronds are very fully undulated, giving the plants a very wavy appearance. It will make as many fronds as Teddy, Jr., plants in 4-inch pots having over sixty fronds. It is a beautifully formed plant, full and compact.

Orders will be filled strictly in rotation.

Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, - $ 4.00 per dozen.
20.00 per 100.
250 at 1000 rate, 150.00 per 1000.

SEED TRADE

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

Officers—President, J. M. Lupton, Mattituck, L. I., N. Y.; First Vice-President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Second Vice-President, F. W. Boigiano, Washington, D. C.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.; Assistant Secretary, S. F. Willard, Jr., Cleveland, O. Cincinnati, O., next meeting place.

Pea Outlook Dubious.

Since our last crop report was published, conditions have changed more or less for the worst, with respect to certain crops. Peas in Montana and Idaho are not as promising as two weeks ago, and particularly in Idaho. What with hail storms, frosts and latterly a shortage in the water supply the pea crop in Idaho has deteriorated and unfortunately it affects the long-pod, late varieties, such as Alderman, Duke of Albany, Telephone, etc., though of course all of the late or medium late varieties are more or less affected. The extent of the damage probably will not be definitely known until threshing time. Had the damage fallen on the canners' varieties, such as Horsford's Market Garden, Alaska, Advancer, or Admiral, it would not have been an unmixed evil as there was a considerable carry-over of one or two of the canners' sorts, and prospects for a full average crop of all of the varieties this year. This means a demoralized market, with no fixed, nor anything approaching fixed minimum prices on any of the varieties, though Alaska promises to be the firmest. Another and very important factor, is the condition of the canned pea market. With a considerable surplus in the hands of the canners, with jobbers buying very sparingly, either because they look for lower prices or are already overstocked the immediate future at least does not look very rosy to the average pea-packer, and prospects for another year, are not any too bright. The growers and dealers in seed peas know only too well what this portends, and view the future with many misgivings.

A Disquieting Feature.

There is another feature of the business much more disquieting, that is, that the canners expect to be, and insist on being babied. A prominent pea seed grower said not long since, that during the years of short crops, when he could deliver only 25 to 50 per cent. on his contracts, that he experienced far less trouble than now when he is delivering 100 per cent. When the deliveries were short, there were of course vigorous kicks, but it ended there. Now, the canner insists on throwing a considerable part of all of his future order back on the seed growers and making him carry the load, and this is especially true if spot seed can be bought at a lower figure than the price of "futures."

It is of course not our intention to indict the entire list of pea canners, nor even a majority of them, but what we have said unfortunately does apply to a considerable number. The canner of this class justifies his action often by saying that the jobber imposes the same conditions on him, but two wrongs do not make a right, and every man, be he canner or engaged in any other business, should feel in honor bound when he makes a contract to accept the fortunes of war as he expects the other fellow to do. This is a condition which seed growers and dealers are likely to learn more about to their sorrow the coming autumn and winter.

Beans and Corn.

Beans are not so near maturity as peas, and the final results cannot be calculated so nearly, but beans have not improved—in fact, they have deteriorated, but that is as far as we can go at this time. Corn is still a source of anxiety to growers, and it depends on how early Jack Frost pays his customary visit the coming autumn as to what sort of corn crop is harvested. We have learned of no radical changes in other seed crops from last reports in HORTICULTURE.

The European Situation.

Several inquiries as to what we know of the European situation have come to us. These inquiries have to do less with the volume of the crops than with the chances of getting them into this country. To all such we must say we don't know. It would require a seer to even prognosticate the future in this line. The actions of the allies will doubtless be governed by expediency, and in any event we can hope for but little from Germany or Austria-Hungary. Considerable quantities of seeds from Germany came through by way of Holland, Denmark and other neutral countries last season, but whether these sources will be open or closed the coming autumn and winter is a question only the future can answer.

The Lily of the Valley Situation.

Owing to the fact that German lily of the valley pips cannot be exported this season, even by way of neutral ports as was the case last year, the Danish pips have been taken up so rapidly that prices are being advanced on account of the limited quantity available. Higher values for the cut flowers for the coming season are inevitable.

Providence, R. I.—Hamlin Johnson, former seed merchant of this city, observed his 90th birthday Monday at his home in Seekonk, near Hunt's Mills. Monday a party of about 50 relatives and friends paid him a surprise visit at the Johnson homestead on Fall River avenue, and the celebration proved to be a most enjoyable affair. Mr. Johnson was born in Brooklyn, Conn., and came to Providence when a young man. He was employed as bookkeeper with the Oliver Johnson Company in his younger days, and in 1879 opened a seed and farm implement store at 6 Exchange place. He sold this business in 1890, and retired about the time that his wife died. Fifty years ago he located at his present home in Seekonk and for a number of years had a greenhouse there.

Of Interest to Retail FloristsTO BLOCK THE FAKIR.

The following letter from Secretary William H. Day, Jr., of the Chamber of Commerce, of Lynn, Mass., sent last week to Chief of Police Thomas M. Burckes, is self-explanatory:

"Chief of Police Thomas M. Burckes, "Dear Sir: In behalf of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce, I desire to compliment both you and Sealer of Weights and Measures Charles P. Murray, on recent decisions obtained from Judge Lummus on test case brought against residents from nearby towns for disposing of flowers from doorways on Market street.

"The Lynn Chamber of Commerce, in general, and the retail merchants, in particular, have no objections to anyone earning a living, but have long felt that the disposing of fruits and flowers by outsiders from doorways, alleyways and yards has been a menace to our regular merchants and a nuisance to our city. It is my understanding that new ordinance now being drafted gives to the board of control supervision over itinerant vendors, the same as over hawkers or peddlers and it is sincerely hoped by the Chamber of Commerce that you will continue your efforts until these vendors are either put out of business or on a plane with other legitimate merchants whose taxes help to make possible our city government.

"Very truly yours,

(Signed)

"LYNN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,

"W. H. Day, Jr.,

"Acting Secretary."

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK.

Phil. Kessler has returned to the mountains for another week's vacation with his family.

W. P. Ford has been rusticated as time and business would permit, down in Chester County, Pa.

Miss Rose Grafmann, bookkeeper and cashier for J. K. Allen is spending two weeks at Rockaway Beach.

Twenty-eighth street seems rather lonesome without John Young. His return from San Francisco will be a welcome event.

J. K. Allen has stretched an awning over the open area in the rear of his wholesale flower store and finds it an admirable place for the gladiolus blooms, which are coming in by the thousands at present.

Hadley rose is said by some to be a difficult variety to grow. A. S. Burns, Jr., does not find it so. He says it wants plenty of room and when so planted it will give a big account for itself. His success with this superb rose is well demonstrated in the quantity and quality of the shipments to P. J. Smith every morning.

C. C. Trepel's new greenhouse 48 by 100, on the roof of his new building, 89th street and Broadway is nearing completion. It is an iron frame structure and one of the best examples of Jacobs & Sons' construction. It will be connected with the street by elevator service. C. C. Trepel is enjoying a well-earned vacation in Oxford.

Francis Scott Key is a leading specialty on the tables of W. F. Sheridan daily. It is a tough fibred bloom and is a favorite with buyers because of the amount of handling it will bear without injury, but the growers are cutting it in a too mature condition. The same criticism applies to Ophelia, a rose that is divested of much of its beauty when allowed to spread out too much.

Quite a number of the horticultural trade advertisers have placed their advertising business in the hands of the Tuthill Ad. Agency at 1133 Broadway. The latest addition to Mr. Tuthill's growing family is the National Florists' Corporation. The country is overrun with advertising agencies. A few of them are helpful to their clients and appreciated by the magazines and foremost among these in matters horticultural we would place the Tuthill for intelligent, conscientious and effective service.

Anyone who has not visited the block on West 28th street, between Broadway and Sixth Ave., for several years, would scarcely recognize the place. Once the busy centre of the great cut flower industry of the metropolis, the majority of the stores on both sides of the street occupied by wholesale flower dealers, it is now largely a series of buildings and stores to rent. A few of the flower establishments are still there, but many have betaken themselves to other quarters, leaving the old haunts vacant, all because of the rapacity of landlords, who set out to grasp everything and who now are paying the penalty for their greed. There is a certain satisfaction in seeing the plight the landlords have brought upon themselves.

CHICAGO.

A. J. Zech and wife will leave Saturday night for two weeks' vacation in Wisconsin.

J. C. Schubert, who formerly had a retail store in Chicago is reported ill at the Kennilworth Sanitarium.

B. Juerjens and son, Wallie, from Peoria, Ill., passed through Chicago this week en route to New York to spend their vacation.

C. L. Washburn and wife are back from California, and Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett are expected to arrive in Chicago Saturday. They are making the trip by auto from Pasadena, California.

SAN FRANCISCO.

H. A. Avansino of the Fairmont Floral Co., Powell street florists, is spending a vacation at his beautiful summer home in Fairfax.

Arrangements have been completed by Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Paul for reopening the Hanford Floral Shop in the Ashby Theater Building, Hanford, Cal.

A handsome bowling trophy arrived the first of the week from the Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J., to be awarded for the highest individual score in the contest between the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, the National Association of Gardeners and the American Association of Park Superintendents.

The Spokane Florist Co., of Spokane, Wash., has secured a new location, having taken a five year lease on a store in the new Mohawk Block on Riverside street, between Howard and Stevens, which is nearing completion. The shop is to be nicely fitted up. The main floor will have a floor space of 23 by 90 feet.

PHILADELPHIA.

Harry Bayersdorfer and family are sojourning in Atlantic City at present, Mr. Bayersdorfer coming up daily to business in Philadelphia.

E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, will deliver his lecture on the flora of northern China before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, next January. Secretary Rust says this will be the first of an interesting series now being arranged for the coming year.

On the opening day of the Convention the following telegram was sent from this city to San Francisco:

"To P. Welch, President S. A. F., San Francisco, Cal.—Greetings from special meeting, Stewart, Westcott, Watson, Forbes, Michell and others of Philadelphia, New York and Boston. May wisdom guide you, and may you have a successful convention. Sorry we are not with you in person as we are in spirit.

WASHINGTON.

Mrs. G. Supper, who is employed at the Gude Bros. store, started last Saturday on a four weeks' vacation. With Mr. Supper, she will soon leave for one of the popular summer resorts.

A telegram from the Washington delegation which went to attend the convention of the S. A. F. and O. H. at San Francisco, tells of the safe arrival of the party, all of whom are very enthusiastic at the efforts made by associations and individual florists all along the line to entertain them.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pfister were scheduled to leave Switzerland, during the week for the United States, according to a postal card just received by Albert Schnell. They have been abroad for a number of months and would have returned earlier were it not for the fact that great difficulty is experienced in securing transportation.

Detlef Witt, who was connected with his brother in business at Silver Hill, Md., for about two and a half years, is a member of the army stationed in Russia. Mr. Witt returned to Germany with his father about a year ago with the intention of taking charge of the latter's farm in Holstein. Early in the spring he was called on to take his place in the German army and was assigned to a regiment of infantry.

Carlos J. Jensen, representing L. Daehnfeldt, Ltd., of Odense, Denmark, last week conferred with the Foreign Trade Advisers of the State Department with a view to securing their aid in obtaining a modification of the British embargo, as set forth in the Order in Council of March 11 and subsequent regulations, in order that it may be made possible to secure the shipment of seeds to the United States from this country to Denmark. This firm has seed gardens in the San Jose valley of California, in Denmark and in Germany. Unmolested exportation from Denmark is permissible under England's restrictions only where it can be proven that they are Danish products. This is a hard matter to do in the case of the seeds grown in Germany. With respect to shipments of seeds from and to Denmark, this can only be accomplished where it is guaranteed to the British authorities that they will not be re-exported to enemy countries.

PITTSBURGH.

George C. McCallum of the McCallum Co., left last Saturday to spend his vacation in Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius W. Ludwig, of the Ludwig Floral Company, left last Thursday to visit relatives at Milwaukee.

B. L. Elliott, president of the John Bader Co., with his wife and daughter have returned from an extended trip in California.

Harry Ackermann, secretary of the Ziegler Co., left Thursday night to spend three weeks with his family who are occupying a cottage at Ocean City on the Jersey Coast.

During Recess

WESTCHESTER AND FAIRFIELD HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual outing was held Tuesday, Aug 10, at Rye Beach Inn, Rye Beach, N. Y., the weather was ideal and a very large number of the members, their wives, families and friends formed a happy and care-free party. The horticultural trade and press were well represented, also there was a large delegation from Tarrytown Horticultural Society and several from Glen Cove. The games were interesting and amusing, and there was an excellent shore dinner. "Breaking the flower pots" proved a humorous and amusing pastime. A tug-of-war between the members from Westchester county and those from Fairfield county was a laughable event.

ROCHESTER FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The grand picnic of this association was scheduled for Thursday of this week, our "press day," and consequently we can only conjecture what has happened. But knowing the Rochester "bunch" so well as we do we feel quite safe in saying that the affair was a glorious, howling success. We know that the stunts' committee have been very busy for weeks inventing new and striking novelties in that line. After the boys get through and have recovered we are looking for a veracious account of the proceedings, and shall give it space as soon as it comes.

On Saturday, August 21, the Michell Seed House baseball team journeys to Riverton, N. J., to play the Henry A. Dreer nine. The Michell boys have defeated some of the strongest amateur teams in Philadelphia and vicinity, and will be accompanied by at least fifty loyal rooters. They expect to make the trip in the Michell Company's two big auto trucks, and will bring along all sorts of noise-producing instruments to make things lively on the Jersey side. The last two games played by the rival seed houses were won by the Michell team, but the Dreer boys will try hard to win this year.

Cincinnati — The prizes at the floral exhibit at the Carthage Fair last week were pretty thoroughly distributed between T. Ben George, Henry Schwarz and Fred Backmeier.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Critchell are planning an auto trip through Indiana for the latter part of this week.

ALLIE ZECH.

Allie Zech is probably the youngest man in the wholesale flower business in Chicago. Upon the death of his father, the late John Zech, he succeeded him as head of the firm of Zech

ALLIE ZECH

& Mann, one of the best known of the Chicago wholesale commission houses. Mr. Zech has a number of years' experience to his credit, as he was right hand man to his father, who was known as one of the most capable men in the trade. This firm stands well with the trade of Chicago and has the disposition of some of the best cut flower stock coming into the Chicago market.

PERSONAL.

John S. Doig has been appointed head gardener to Mrs. J. M. Sears, Southborough, Mass.

P. J. Donahue, of Boston, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation at Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard.

Charles Richardson of the Wyndhurst greenhouses, Lenox, Mass., has accepted a position in the Brookside greenhouses at Great Barrington.

Edward W. Breed of Clinton, Mass., president of the Worcester County Horticultural society, and Mrs. Breed, have returned after a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

St. Louis.—Miss Julia Mottell, cashier of the Nicotine Mfg. Co., had a tussle with a robber last week when she was returning from the bank with the weekly payroll. Miss Mottell wrenched herself from his grasp, thus saving the money. She is a basket ball champion and an athlete and surprised the robber with her strength. Her boss, J. S. Carter, is away attending the S. A. F. convention with the St. Louis delegation.

Not A Competitor of the Florist Telegraph Delivery

WHEN the telephone began cutting into the business of the telegraph, they introduced night letters of 50 words for the cost of 10 day words.

And what happened? The telephone was not used any less, but the telegraph was used more.

There are some people who want to do what they do quickly. The snap and go of life is for them. The F.T.D. suits their needs exactly.

There are others who never use the telegraph unless very urgent, but they use letters freely. To these people the National Florist strongly appeals.

It is also apparent that one will help the other, because both will help people to form the habit of ordering floral gifts for distant points.

Send for booklet giving full particulars about the National Florist plan.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON It is a very dull and lifeless market this week. There is an excess of flowers, of course, and with no trade outlet the only fate for much of the shipments to the wholesale markets is the cart which carries away refuse. Quality is all right but that alone does not make trade, and this is the deadest August Boston florists have ever had to face. Roses have not been very heavily overstocked, but are not beginning to heap up as the new planted stock comes along. It is the gladioli, asters, lilies and miscellaneous outdoor products that makes most of the trouble.

BUFFALO Business is very weak. The receipts of gladioli have been very heavy and with no outlet, there being no set price and everything having to be forced. The early crop of asters is nearly over, with some fine stock of the branching type slowly coming in, though the sales on these, too, have been very slow. There are enough roses. Carnations are about done for. Lilies are still plentiful and sales also slow. There is very little floral work to consume hardly any portion of the receipts, and most of the merchants are taking vacations right in their own stores.

CINCINNATI Business was rather dull last week. Not even the opening and close were very active. A large supply of good stock is coming into the wholesale houses. Shipping business is only fair. Rose offerings include some very good American Beauties, Taft and Radiance. Carnations from the young stock are beginning to come in and up to this time have found a very ready market. Lilies are plentiful and excellent. Late asters may now be had in all colors in quantities. Gladioli are coming along steadily and are plentiful.

ize the entire wholesale cut flower district this week. They are of all types and qualities, some very good and some very bum but on the whole much better than those offered a week ago. Gladioli seem not quite so numerous as they were but there are still plenty of them and they have to be offered very low to get a taker. Roses are looking pretty good, even the little midgets from young stock showing clean foliage and bright color. Cattleyas are very few but even those are not readily disposed of, there being no trade that demands them. The trading at present is of the "catch-can" sort and there is nothing in the situation that warrants any synopsis.

PHILADELPHIA There is but little change in the business situation here. The slight improvement previously reported continued and with some diminution of receipts and there was rather less unsold stock. This refers mostly to indoor crops. There is still a little too much outdoor stock. Asters continue good as a rule, although there are still some tailenders of the inferior early-flowering varieties coming in. There are not nearly so many gladioli. Quality continues excellent. Roses are in fair supply, but rather soft and do not keep very well. Among the best are Russells and Beauties. Carnations are practically over for the time being and what few keep coming in are of poor quality. Orchids are still very scarce. There are a few gardenias, but they are mostly of southern origin and the demand for them is slow. Lilies are still plentiful, with prices reasonable. These find favor with the retailers for design work and various decorative uses, as they keep and ship better than most flowers at this season, when nearly everything is lacking in substance and virility.

SAN FRANCISCO Business continues are above the average here for this time of the year, owing to the increased counter trade caused by the large number of visitors in town for the exposition and the large amount of decorative work connected with the many conventions and exposition festivities. Stock is still plentiful. Asters are offered in all colors and quantities of them are being sold. The supply of chrysanthemums is increasing rapidly, but the offerings find a ready market at firm prices. Gladioli are offered quite freely and the fine stock moves readily. While dahlias are on the decline, some excellent specimens are still to be seen which demand a good price. Carnations are exceedingly scarce, and the quality is so poor on the average that they demand little attention. The light offerings of sweet peas show poor quality also. Amaryllis is appearing abundantly, and some zinnias are being brought in. There is little change in the rose situation. Stock is not over-plentiful, and the quality of some varieties is hardly up to standard. Russell and Hadley show some improvement. Wonderful tiger lilies are to be seen everywhere, and the offerings of rubrum and auratum show excellent quality also. A good many double sunflowers are being used.

The wholesale market ST. LOUIS is in the same old rut as for the last few weeks. Everything is plentiful and prices at their lowest. Business conditions in general are bad and, of course, the florists have to suffer their share. As to stock at the wholesale market we can only say that everything in season is plentiful. Roses and asters are more than the trade can handle and most any price will buy them in big lots. Gladioli were about to go up in price a little when along came outside consignments. Lily of the valley, lilies, tuberose stalks and carnations field grown are plentiful.

WASHINGTON There has been no improvement in trade here during the past ten days. Very little of the stock coming in can be moved at any price. Enormous quantities of asters are being sent in, only to be eventually carted away as refuse. The supply of gladioli has decreased to some extent, but the demand has fallen off in proportion. Lilies continue very abundant. Carnations are few and very poor. Cattleyas and other orchids are scarce and it is hard to get these at a price. Some few good dahlias are to be had, but on the whole the heat has badly affected this flower and has put all the life into foliage. Among the roses are some very good Hoosier Beauty. This flower is finding great favor with some of the retailers and the sale has been boosted to quite an extent. On the whole roses are very good for this time of the year, but with a sluggish market. American Beauty from the North are very good. Snapdragon and water lilies are seen in the stores.

ROCHESTER'S BIG FLOWER SHOW.

The attractive proposition made by the management of the Rochester, N. Y., Exposition Flower Show has invited the attention of the best known growers in the country, as had been expected. With no charge for space and the promise of adequate service, and a daily average attendance of over 20,000, it would have been surprising if the big growers had not responded to the invitation to send exhibits to the Rochester Show. August 30 to September 11 are the dates. The management of the Rochester Exposition declares that the Flower Show is to be an annual event. The Exposition itself is on a permanent basis. It is held at the City's own exposition park, and is now in its eighth year. The park has ten large fireproof buildings, and one of the best has been assigned to the Flower Show. A committee of the Rochester Florists' Association is co-operating with the management and hopes to make the Rochester Show a meeting place for florist and grower, seedsman and importer. They believe that there is need for such an exhibition, as it will give the florists a chance to see, without traveling the country over, what the growers have to offer in new and standard varieties of plants and flowers. That the plan has every promise of success is evidenced by the permanency of the Exposition itself, which is practically under municipal auspices.

A personal invitation has been sent to every florist in New York state, as well as in some adjoining states, informing them of the names of the exhibitors and suggesting that they combine business with pleasure by arranging to spend an early fall vacation in the Flower City and, at the same time, see what the growers have to offer.

Following is a list of the exhibitors already entered: J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; C. Betscher, Canal Dover, O.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I.; Wilbur A. Christy, Warren, O.; Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston; A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind.; Burt Olney Greenhouses, Albion, N. Y.; A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Ct.; F. R. Neun, Salter Bros., F. Schlegel & Sons, Jacob Thomann & Sons, James Vlek's Sons, H. E. Wilson, Geo. T. Boucher and J. B. Keller's Sons, Co.

New York, N. Y. Dealers will move September 1st into the store formerly occupied by J. K. Allen 100 W. 28th Street.

THE VERY NEWEST AND QUICKEST METHOD OF DESTROYING WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

This fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

big man in more ways than one. He is treasurer and director in the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co, and although a very young man has the backing of seven years of practical work. While his education has been largely in the school of experience he has taken advantage of the opportunities offered by one of Chicago's largest technical schools, and so is well equipped to take a prominent place in the construction and manufacture of greenhouse materials.

PURDUE UNIVERSITY RANGE, LA FAYETTE, IND.

THE houses shown above were designed, manufactured and erected complete by us, including installation of boilers and heating apparatus.

They are of our standard Iron Frame type, with channel gutters and I beam posts.

Our malleable iron bar brackets, "the one which you can drive on with a hammer," securely fasten the roof bars to the gutters. You will agree with us when we say that this is really the best bar bracket on the market. No bolts are necessary. The bracket is hooked over the channel gutter and driven on with a hammer, where it holds its place firmly. The end of the wooden roof bar is exposed and can be easily painted. This is but one of the many points which make Foley Houses so popular.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toll, we ought to blame the culture, not the sell."—Pope.

Carnations

Let the plants have the benefit of a full circulation of air all around. Keep the ventilators wide open and if possible the doors, especially on hot days. Sunlight and fresh air are what the plants need before fire heat touches them. Cultivating, cleaning and watering are the main things to be attended to now. You can overdo the watering but not the other two. It is needless to say that no weeds should ever be allowed to get established among the plants; don't wait for them to come nor neglect the removing of every bad leaf on the plants. Give the soil a thorough soaking when it is in need of it and don't repeat it until it dries out—not dust dry for that would stunt the growth if repeated and be as wrong as to continuously keep it in a wet state.

Chrysanthemums

Make it a rule to look over the benches every morning and water where needed, but only where needed as saturation all the time will work ruin now. Syringe only in the morning now and on clear days, so that before night fall all the superfluous water will have time to dry up. Give attention to disbudding and liquid feeding. Keep on feeding until the flowers show color. If we run into a spell of damp and rainy weather have a little heat run through the pipes. Keep the plants clear of all by-growth, so the full strength will be carried to the bloom. Keep them clear of fly by timely fumigation done carefully.

Decorative Stock

Now is a good time to go over your stock and see what you are short of. Lay in a supply of Phoenix Roebelenii, Areca lutescens, Cocos Weddelliana, Lantana borbonica and Kentias, also ferns, Pandanus and Aspidistra. Scan the advertisements in HORTICULTURE and place your order early. Money invested in a good stock of these and the half dozen other plants usually found at the retailers' always comes back with good interest. Give the palm house a good cleaning, then fill it up and make things attractive for the opening of another season—the best one you ever had. Only by carrying a good supply of salable stock can we expect to do business.

Marguerites

Suitable cuttings are not procurable on marguerites during the hot months but are now to be had and a good batch should be placed in sand at once. These can be grown into nice bushy plants in 6-inch or 7-inch pots for spring sales. When rooted they can be potted into 2½ or 3-inch pots using any good rose or carnation compost. When they will stand the sun place them in the highest house. To keep them growing they will want a winter temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees night. These should not be allowed to suffer from want of a shift and be sure to give them a rich soil. If your old plants were carried over in the field lift and pot them during the present month. Be sure each has a good ball attached and keep them well watered and shaded for a few days until they cease wilting. In a couple of weeks they will have to be housed.

Bulb Stock for Winter

To make bulb growing pay a careful study is absolutely necessary to prevent waste of material. The smaller retail grower depends to a large extent on the Dutch bulbs to furnish him flowers during the first four months of the year. Roman hyacinths and the paper-whites are the next thing on the program to be planted out for flowers from Christmas on.

Stevia

Do not leave it too late before lifting the stevia as the least bit of frost will injure it. For a week after they are lifted they will want some shade and careful handling, but after this give them full light and in a cool house as they do not like to be grown too warm.

Next Week:—Cattleyas; Chierarias for Easter; Freesias; Tulips; Winter Flowering Geraniums; Watch Out for Frost

Clematis paniculata

This popular climbing vine is too well known to our readers to require any detailed notes in connection with the picture which adorns our title page this week. The residence shown is that of Edward Harris, Weymouth, Mass. The extent to which this Clematis varies when raised as usual from seed is perhaps not generally realized. Most are fragrant, but some have no fragrance, some are purest white—others creamy, while they vary greatly in size of individual flowers and in form of truss, some being in long scattered racemes—others almost flat heads. The most interesting fact, however, to be remembered is the wide variation in the time of blooming of different plants, a difference of two or three weeks being possible. For this it is easy to assure customers of a long season of flowering period by classifying nursery stock as early or late blooming.

previous disaster. It requires some courage in the face of such a visitation as has befallen Mr. Kerr to take so philosophical a view of his loss as is expressed in his letter. The vice-president elect of the S. A. F. has evidently a goodly portion of "gritty sand" in his make-up.

The gladiolus

Of the several flowers now in the public eye, which have responded readily to the art of the hybridist, none have made more rapid and sensational improvement than the gladiolus. The exhibitions of this flower at various places during the present season have brought out material which is nothing short of marvelous and one of the most interesting facts in this connection is that the varieties showing the greatest advancement over the old types are the productions of American specialists. Unfortunately for these earnest workers the emoluments from their triumphs have been and are likely to be very very small so long as conditions are such that foreign growers can swamp our markets with stock of our own best production at prices with which home competition is next to impossible.

One lesson of the Convention

HORTICULTURE feels a bit proud of the fact that, although much farther removed from San Francisco than any of its competitors, it was able to give to its readers the most complete account and latest news of the Convention proceedings of any published last week. The record of the Convention, summed up, would appear to fully justify the judgment of those members at the Boston Convention who were responsible for the acceptance of the invitation to take the Society to the far-away Pacific Coast. We might say, however, that as it appears to us, the unquestioned success of the San Francisco Convention lies not so much in the amount of direct practical work accomplished as in the evidence presented of the firm grasp which the national organization now holds upon the progressive horticultural interests of the country and in the demonstration of the rapid growth and spread of this sentiment of loyalty which is now in progress.

The part of wisdom

With the big Exposition beckoning and every spare moment crowded with entertainment of some kind, it was not to be expected that any great measure of serious work could be accomplished at San Francisco and it is no surprise that the principal business done by a Convention primarily bent on sight-seeing seems to have been the good-natured approval and passing on to the Executive Board of the various projects so earnestly thought out and formulated for months previously and recommended by the President for the organic and structural strengthening of the Association and the systematic development of its channels for usefulness. Obviously it is too much to expect from a gathering made up as S. A. F. Conventions are, that calm deliberation and far-seeing judgment which should underlie every important enactment by such an institution. Consequently the inclination to avoid the hazards of hasty action, by first submitting momentous matters to responsible officials for leisurely, thoughtful consideration, is the part of wisdom. In our humble opinion, an application of a goodly portion of the same conservative reasoning will be in order when the time comes to decide whether the selection of two directors each year shall be cast into the impetuous politics of a convention election or entrusted, as hitherto, to the president-elect to appoint after he has had several months' opportunity to study the immediate needs of the Society.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Lime

If the soil used in making sod heaps had the least trace of acid in it, it will not be very long after planting that the houses will need a light dose of lime. If green appears here and there on the surface of the soil, and the plants have not the dark color that they should have, or are a little soft, it is a sure sign that lime ought to be applied. Use pure air slacked lime, preferring lime bought in barrels and slacked at home, to any mixture that is on the market as agricultural lime. To slack a barrel of lime quickly, dump it into a large box and then sprinkle a can or two of water over it. Avoid using too much water as the lime might remain damp, and although it would be just as good for applying to the benches it would be worthless to blow around the houses at night and it is best to have the lime so that it can be used for both purposes at the same time. When applying have the lime cold and free from unslacked lumps. Do not apply too much all at once but just enough to whiten the benches nicely. We find it best to apply it right after watering, after the benches have dried off just a little, then going over the surface and rubbing the lime in a little. Avoid going deep, as the roots are sure to be disturbed, and this would harm the plants. After this the plants can be watered when they require it, which will be a little sooner, for the lime and the rubbing over of the surface will make them dry out a little quicker. Do not apply lime if the benches have just been mulched or if they have just received a dressing of bonemeal, soot, or sheep manure. The lime coming into contact with the last named fertilizers would release a large portion of the ammonia and other fertilizing elements, and these, suddenly turned into gases would be sure to harm the plants.

Blackspot

When tying or cutting, in fact when doing anything at all around the plants, always watch out for spot. Wherever it appears see that it is picked off at once, and then see that the foliage is dry at night as it should be. Also see that the rain does not beat in when showers come up and should it happen that the houses are open and do get wet, care for the plants properly. This applies especially to Beauties which are more apt to get it than any other rose we grow. When tying, distribute the wood well so that it is not bunched up too much, shutting out air and making it easy for the disease to gain a foothold. Once it gets in it will not be very easy to rid the plants of it, and only by good culture and keeping the plants growing all the time will they eventually grow out of it. It is well to apply a spray of the ammoniacal copper carbonate mixture if the attack promises to be bad at all. This is no cure, by any means, but it will do a good deal to keep the spot from spreading. Avoid overwatering at all times, at the same time being careful not to dry the plants out so that they will get a bad setback. Beauties are very particular in this respect, and once severely checked it is a big undertaking to get them going right again. If the first few spots that appear are removed at once the danger of their spreading will be very small. Keep right after it.

Fumigation

As soon as the plants begin cutting, the use of tobacco stems for smoking should be stopped at once and other materials used to keep out the always-on-hand greenfly. It is strange where these little rascals come from, for no matter how clean the house was they will be sure to appear unless it is smoked or sprayed regularly. Try to spray or fumigate the night before syringing. If it is raining so much the better for then the houses are sure to be tight. If hydro-cyanic acid gas is used be very careful to inform every one of the fact or else lock the house, or better still have a sign on chains stretched across the door, with the word, "Cyanide." That ought to be sufficient warning for every one to keep out. The gas is very poisonous and it does not take very much of it to kill a person, so great care should be taken in using it. It is very good, however, and very effective and will clean out insects quicker than anything we know. Even snails and sow bugs were found dead in the morning under the benches after it had been used the night before. Avoid using it too strong and be sure to figure out the volume of air in your houses instead of guessing at it. You will then know just what you are doing and there will be no harm done by using too much of the deadly gas. Make sure that the houses are wet enough, no matter what is used for fumigation or spraying, otherwise the foliage is likely to get scorched and this is bad for the plants, for they are still young and need all the leaves that they can hold.

The Boilers

Katydid's are already singing at night, and they are the very first sign that frost will soon be here. It may not be true that frost will be here in six weeks, but nevertheless with their song they serve as a reminder of what we should prepare for. Are the boilers all right? Have they been looked over? Have all the necessary repairs arrived? All these things should be attended to at once. Clean all flues well and see that the smoke pipes are good enough to last all winter. Every loose joint in these interferes with the draft so they should all be made tight with asbestos. Make sure the dampers work well and that the grates are in good condition. If poor at all order a new set, keeping the old for emergency. Make sure that the ash pit under the boiler is deep enough. Shallow boiler pits are responsible for more grate troubles than all the flaws that may be in the grates themselves. Try to have at least a foot of air between the grates and the highest level of ashes ever in the pit. This will keep the grates cool and avoid their burning out. We once had occasion to see a new set of grates burned out the very first time a fire was made in a steam boiler, all because the ash pit was not clean and the grates had no chance to cool, for the heat reflected from the ashes was terrific. It is better to have the ash pit deeper than to have it too shallow. It can still be changed if it is not deep enough. It will also make a good draft in the draft if there is plenty of air space under the grates. See to it now that the boilers are all in good shape for the coming cool, and ever-getting-colder nights.

CONVENTION REPORT CONCLUDED

HORTICULTURAL COLLEGE EDUCATION.

An interesting communication from Prof E. A. White of the Department of Floriculture at Cornell University was presented at the meeting on Thursday morning. Prof. White said he was proud to have been a pioneer in courses in Floriculture for young men at State Colleges. He was pleased with the change of sentiment among practical men regarding the value of such courses. He said that he does not believe the establishment of a school of floriculture, as a W. R. Smith memorial, to be practical, because of the high cost of establishment and maintenance and the difficulty in locating such a school to meet the needs of students in different states in which culture conditions vary. He recommends instead the establishing of an endowment fund for floricultural training in a few important educational institutions in different parts of the country where floriculture is now well taught. The apprenticeship system extant abroad is not practical here. Better courses may be developed in the agricultural colleges than at present if the florists will co-operate. Many American gardeners cannot grow plants successfully because they are ignorant of them. A young man should take theoretical work in summer and practical range work in winter. It is difficult to get successful florists to permit students on ranges. He recommends three years' theoretical work and one year in an up-to-date commercial range.

THE SMOKER.

Thursday night's smoker was a big enjoyable affair, Angelo Rossi presiding. There was a very large attendance, with music, vaudeville and a boxing contest. W. F. Kasting made a speech, presenting to Daniel MacRorie President Welch's prize offered to the member securing the largest number of new members during the year. The president-elect responded, stating that he would make the same offer next year and urging all to meet him at Houston in 1916. Mr. Rossi called upon President Welch who made a very clever speech, asserting that all Californians are but imported easterners and that the east can, if necessary, furnish plenty of more good timber but it will not be needed as there is already talent enough in the far west to elevate horticulture to the highest standard. He said he would take great pride in carrying back to Boston the news of California's achievements and California's hospitality.

FRIDAY'S SESSION.

The session on Friday morning was held at the Panama Pacific Exposition, President Welch in the chair. A handsome bronze plaque was presented to the S. A. F., with appropriate sentiments, by Commissioner General Chas. A. Vogelsang. The plaque was received on behalf of the Society by C. W. Ward, who made an address giving the history, growth and standing of the S. A. F. Park Commissioner Shearer of Los Angeles extended an invitation to attend a barbecue there on August 26th. A magnificent beaten silver dinner service was presented to President Welch, the presentation speech being made by Hans Plath. President Welch responded in words of grateful appreciation. It was announced that the Ladies' reception would be held in the California Building on Friday afternoon. E. G. Hill then read the report of the committee on final resolutions after which the convention adjourned.

FINAL RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, The officers and members of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists in 31st annual convention assembled, in the city of the Golden Gate during its exposition year, have enjoyed to the utmost that magnificent hospitality which is peculiar to the California coast and have had every want anticipated, every convenience and comfort afforded by our hosts of San Francisco and the Pacific Coast, and

Whereas, The manifold labors incident to the preparations for this convention and our entertainment while here have been most efficiently performed and have been contributed to by so many of the citizens here as well as by our brothers in the trade and allied industries that it would be invidious to select individuals out of the many deserving mentioned, therefore, be it

Resolved, That individually and collectively we the visiting members of the Society and our ladies with grateful appreciation tender our unstinted thanks to our hosts one and all including His Honor Mayor James Rolph, Jr., the officials of the Pan-American Pacific International Exposition, the various committees of the city and state local organizations, the nurserymen of this locality, and all others who have contributed to make our stay here so enjoyable that we will carry home remembrances of the many kindnesses shown us which will linger like the perfume of the California flowers blooming beneath its cloudless skies.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Your committee to whom was assigned the duty of making report on recommendations contained in the annual address of President Welch beg to submit the following as their conclusions and recommendations as to some of its salient features, to wit:

GROUP OF SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS MEM

Convention Garden.

Your committee approves of the idea of changing the time of selecting convention city so that the selection shall be made two years in advance, and would suggest that a committee of three be appointed to draft necessary changes in the by-laws to carry out this idea and present such proposed amendments to the next meeting of the Executive Board for approval and subsequent submission to the entire membership as represented at the convention. We heartily endorse the statement of the president of the importance from both an educational and cultural point of view of the establishment of Convention Gardens.

Legislation.

With respect to the recommendation as to employment of counsel to assist the Legislative Committee, this having been already acted upon by the convention, necessitates no further action.

Washington Representative.

We endorse and recommend your concurrence in the recommendation of the President that the Washington representative of this society be made ex-officio a member of the Executive Board; and further recommend that the same committee as above provided for be entrusted also with the duty of drafting a suitable amendment to the constitution to carry this recommendation into effect.

Election of Directors.

We endorse the recommendation of the president favoring the election instead of the appointment of the two annually retiring members of the Board of Directors; and further recommend the concurrence of the convention in the same and the reference to the same committee hereinbefore provided for to draft suitable amendment to the constitution to carry this into effect.

Credentials for Affiliated Board Members.

We endorse and recommend concurrence in the following: That only the president of a subsidiary society or club be entitled to represent such society or club under the plan of affiliation on the Executive Board and he cannot take his seat on the Executive Board without credentials from his organization properly attested by the secretary thereof; and further recommend the drafting of suitable amendment to the constitution of this society to carry same into effect as hereinbefore provided by committee.

Publicity.

We endorse and recommend concurrence in the recommendation of the president to have a Committee on Publicity and suggest that the Executive Committee at its next meeting make a suitable appropriation to carry this into effect.

National Credits and Collections Bureau.

We have carefully considered the recommendation of our president with regard to the desirability of a more effective means of handling credits and collections, and believe that this work might well be taken up by a separate organization affiliated with this society as there is an urgent need as indicated by President Welch for some better machinery of a protective nature than is now available to us.

This question is one of such vital importance and involves such detail that we are not prepared during the limited time during the convention period to make any further or more definite recommendation for your adoption than the foregoing.

Development of American Products.

Believing firmly and unequivocally in the solidarity of the American people of this United States, we note with approval the utterances of President Welch as to encouraging American products and endorse any movement tending to develop self-reliance and independence where such development will beneficially affect our trade and avocation.

Improved Voting Method in Annual Elections.

We endorse and recommend concurrence in the following recommendation of President Welch, and their submission to the same committee as hereinbefore provided for to incorporate in a proposed amendment to the constitution, to wit:

That for election purposes a list of the members of this society be alphabetically arranged in four books:

Book No. 1 to include all names beginning with the letter "A" and ending with the letter "D."

Book No. 2 to include all names of members beginning with the letter "E" and ending with the letter "K."

Book No. 3 to include all names beginning with the letter "L" and ending with the letter "R."

Book No. 4 to include all names beginning with the letter "S" and ending with the letter "Z."

One teller be appointed to check the names listed in each book, also one to receive the ballots.

Your committee in conclusion believe that we voice the unanimous approval of this organization of the spirit of devotion to the highest interests of this society which permeates the President's address and commend the zeal and devotion that he has evinced therein.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH OF J. F. COWELL.

WHEREAS, in the removal by death during the past year of Prof. J. F. Cowell, Buffalo, N. Y., the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists has been deprived of the valued services of one whose contributions to the work of the society were always freely given in his capacity as Botanist, and whose services were greatly appreciated by us; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED: That this Society tender to those near and dear who mourn his loss our sincere sympathy in their bereavement; and that a copy of this resolution be officially attested by our Secretary and forwarded to the family of the deceased.

E. G. Hill, Theodore Wirth, George Asmus, Committee.

We have received a very optimistic letter from Vice-President-elect R. C.

MEMBERS PHOTOGRAPHED AUGUST 17, 1915, IN FRONT OF CIVIC AUDITORIUM, SAN FRANCISCO.

Kerr, concerning the selection of Houston for the 1916 convention. He says, in part:

"We appreciate this great honor, and I assure you that we are going to try hard to make this the greatest Convention the S. A. F. has ever held. We propose to give it a great deal of publicity and pull hard for a large attendance, as our future work will show. We have the support of the Chamber of Commerce, the City of Houston and the Rotary Club, as well as the other Civic organizations.

"We want to call attention to the fact that we have one of the largest auditoriums in the South for convention and exhibition purposes. We have a citizenship which has left nothing unturned to make our visitors enjoy their stay here. We have many side attractions which makes it worth while for conventions in Houston. These matters will be taken up from time to time. I want to express for Texas and the florists of the South our gratefulness for this convention.

"The convention came as a complete surprise. We really did not figure on getting it for next year. We did not have a single Texas representative on the ground, to my knowledge, although I have not received the details of the nomination. However, I will learn all this later."

LADIES' S. A. F.

The annual business meeting of the Ladies' S. A. F. was held at San Francisco on August 18, forenoon, the president, Mrs. W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., in the chair. The meeting opened with an address of welcome by Mrs. F. H. Howard, of Los Angeles, who spoke as follows:

Dear Ladies:—On behalf of the members of our organization I extend to you all our happiest and most heartfelt greetings in this the 31st annual convention of the S. A. F. held in the city of San Francisco.

It is the first time in its history that a meeting has been held in California, and I am sure it is the first time many of the ladies present have set foot on the golden shores of the Pacific. We trust that you will enjoy the trip with an ever increasing pleasure as the scenes of our state's beauty so infuse themselves to you, that the recollections will be pleasant ones and linger long in your memory.

Our members in the state are but few, but our hearts are big and we extend to you all a truly western welcome, always looking forward to the time when the pleasure of meeting you again in some other state shall be ours. I thank you.

An appreciative response was voiced by Mrs. R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md. The address of Mrs. Gude, which was published in HORTICULTURE last week, followed.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. John Vallance, Oakland, Cal.; vice-president, Mrs. W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.; second vice-president, Mrs. Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Texas; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.; secretary, Mrs. George W. Smith, Cleveland, Ohio; special committee, Mrs. J. G. Hancock, Chicago, chairman.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

RAILWAY GARDENING ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of this Association held in Detroit, Michigan, Aug. 17-20, officers for the ensuing year were chosen as follows: President, J. A. Byrne, B. & O., Relay, Md.; vice-presidents, C. W. Eichling, Q. & C., New Orleans, La., and R. J. Rice, M. C., Niles, Mich.; secretary, Chas. E. Lowe, P. R. R., Sewickley, Pa.; treas., J. K. Wingert, C. V., Chambersburg, Pa. New Orleans was chosen for the next meeting. The address of Pres. Paul Huebner follows:

President's Address.

It certainly gives me great pleasure to greet you on this auspicious occasion, the ninth annual meeting of our association, and to see so many of my fellow members gracing the occasion from far and near. It certainly shows a keen interest in our chosen profession and I congratulate you. I also wish to congratulate you on the splendid work you have accomplished during the past nine years. The progress has been marked in all sections of the country and we have come to be a power for progress such as we hardly dared to hope for in our modest beginning. This is true not only of the Atlantic Coast, but all over the country to the far Pacific. Those of you who have visited the western roads not only in this country, but in Canada, can testify to the vast improvement in railroad gardening in recent years. I feel proud of the honor you have done me in electing me your president and it goes without saying that I have been anxious to do everything in my power to further the interests of our profession and place it on a still higher standard.

In the way of practical suggestions for appropriate action at this Convention I would call your attention to the following features of organization:

First, the permanent committees upon the several subjects under which all of our work may be grouped. It is intended that the membership in these committees be slightly changed each year, but that a broad scheme for the systematic development of each topic be followed continuously, working from the most general aspects of the subject gradually into the details and collecting all available information upon each phase of the subject as we progress, as was stated in my recent letters to chairmen of committees. In this way we should ultimately accumulate a large and orderly mass of facts of everyday value to railway gardeners, especially, but also to gardening people in general, and such results should warrant a distinctive recognition of our association for practical achievements.

That indeed should be the sphere or slogan of our association, achievements along lines of practical, horticultural work under a great variety of natural conditions. In order to accomplish a respected standing for our association in horticultural circles the conscientious effort of every member to produce the best possible report upon each topic that is assigned to them is absolutely necessary. Each problem should receive thorough investigation in libraries as well as in the ground and among fellow gardeners, and the report should be a complete and concise statement of the facts of practical value thus obtained.

Second, the suggestion has been made that for our future meetings we follow the points of the compass in successive years; this is our northern meeting, let next year be our southern meeting, then an eastern and then a western meeting. Further, that the date of meeting be determined largely by the climate of the place where we will meet, later for northern situations and vice versa. Consideration should also be given, in this regard, to timing the meetings so that we shall see some feature of horticultural interest, during the meeting, that meetings shall not be fixed closer than six months from the previous meeting and that, so far as possible, the meetings shall be held during our least busy season. I should like to have a full discussion of this matter with a possible determination of our meeting places and dates for the remaining three years of this cycle.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I wish to thank you in advance for your kind co-operation in the sessions to follow this, and for your careful and conscientious work on the various committees. May wisdom and harmony prevail in all our doings and may you all enjoy yourselves not only from the professional standpoint but in every other way, so that when we return to our homes we may all feel the wiser and the happier for our experiences at Detroit.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The sixth annual exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society which was held at Newport, R. I., in the Casino Theatre, was the grandest show of gladioli that has ever taken place in America. The wonderful collections of the best standard varieties, and the great number of the newer sorts was a revelation to all, both amateur and professional admirers of these beautiful flowers, and the quality of the blooms has never been equalled at any of our former exhibitions.

The stage was filled entirely with a magnificently arranged exhibit by Charles Francis Fairbanks of Boston, which was not for competition, and the Newport Horticultural Society bestowed on him a silver medal. Other splendid exhibits were staged by B. Hammond Tracy, Wenham, Mass.; William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.; Knight & Struck, New York City; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., and John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I. Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy exhibited a superb basket in competition for the silver cup, but it was disqualified because it contained one more spike of flowers than specified in the schedule. The judges were James Wheeler, Natick, Mass.; J. Leestraten, Saxonville, GLADIOLUS SOCIETY OF OHIO.

The third annual exhibition of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio was held in the Hollenden assembly room, Cleveland, Ohio, on Friday and Saturday, August 13 and 14. This is the third consecutive year that this society has met in the "Sixth City." The showing was the best ever made, there being a number of very good seedlings in evidence.

The Cleveland Florists' Club handled the local arrangements of the show in excellent manner and as a result the public attended in large numbers. Twelve thousand invitations were issued and mailed to friends and customers of the club members.

Interesting table decorations were shown by Jones-Russell Co., The J. M. Gasser Co., Westman & Getz, The Jas. Eadie Co., Smith & Feters and Knoble Bros. Several tables were filled with well arranged baskets by A. M. Albrecht, Jones-Russell, Westman & Getz, Knoble Bros., Ohio Floral Co., The Jas. Eadie Co., Charlesworth & Son, and The J. M. Gasser Co. A prime attraction was a brides' bouquet of white gladioli, shown on a standard, by A. M. Albrecht.

The prize for the best display by any one exhibitor was awarded to The Austin Co. Other prize winners in the commercial section were J. Thomann & Sons, Perkins King Co., R. E. Huntington, Bidwell & Fobes, Munsell & Harvey, Madison Cooper, C. Betscher, J. F. Rychlik, E. E. Stewart and Wayside Gardens. Three certificates for new varieties never shown before were awarded to The Austin Co. and one to J. Thomann & Sons.

The judges were W. C. Werner, of Painesville, O. and F. W. Griffin of Cleveland.

Table Decorations by Leading Retailers of Cleveland, at the Annual Exhibition of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

At the annual meeting held on Saturday morning it was unanimously decided to hold the 1916 meeting and show in Cleveland. The election of officers was postponed to come up at an adjourned meeting to be held in Cleveland, Nov. 11th, during the Cleveland Flower Show.

ST. LOUIS FLORIST CLUB.

The St. Louis Florist Club held one of those much enjoyed outdoor meetings on Thursday afternoon, August 12, at Joseph Hauser's Dahlia Farm in Webster Groves. The secretary's notice for the meeting, headed with,

"Before green apples blush,
Before green nuts embrown,
Why one day in the country
Is worth a month in town," brought one of the largest outdoor meetings the club ever held. They inspected the dahlia fields and were much impressed with Mr. Hauser's new single red and other new varieties.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, the only lady member of the club, sent in her resignation, which was accepted and she was placed on the honorary member list.

Walter Weber, of the Weber Nursery Co., extended an invitation to meet at their place in the country in September, which was accepted with thanks. The election of officers for the ensuing year took place. Jules Bourdet, president, and J. J. Beneke, secretary, were re-elected by unanimous vote. E. S. Wells and David Geddis fought it out for vice-president and Mr. Wells was re-elected. W. C. Smith and J. J. Windler opposed each other for the treasurership and Mr. Smith was re-elected. W. W. Ohlweiter, trustee for a three-year term, was elected by unanimous vote, and W. A. Rowe and F. A. Windler will serve with him. This closed a most interesting meeting. Mr. and Mrs. Hauser then invited all to partake of a bounteous lunch. They were assisted by Mrs. Hauser's sister, Mrs. Grossart and Mrs. Pilcher.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

The convention of park superintendents, coincident with that of the S. A. F., at San Francisco, was a very busy and enjoyable affair, one of its greatest educational features being the many opportunities offered for visits and inspection of the many local and national public reservations in San Francisco and on the way to and from that city. Addresses, discussions and stereopticon lectures crowded the business hours and everything went off smoothly under the guiding hand of President Amrhy and his official retinue. Officers were elected as follows: President, Emil T. Mische; vice-presidents, J. W. Thompson, J. F. Walsh, Alex. Stuart, E. P. Griffin, L. P. Jansen, E. V. Goebel; secretary-treasurer, R. W. Cotterill. John McLaren was elected to the office of honorary president. New Orleans was chosen for the convention of 1916.

Beans Deteriorating.

Reports reaching us within a few days indicate that the bean crop is deteriorating every day, and this applies particularly to wax pod sorts, although green pods are also hard hit. This situation has been brought about as a result of excessive rains, and the damage comes so late there seems little hope of recovering. In fact, there is none, and if deterioration should cease now the crop situation would be almost as serious as last year.

There is much pessimism about corn, and it will require a long open autumn free from frost to mature the crop. Both growers and dealers are reluctant to accept orders for this season's crop, or even old corn, as it is liable to be worth much more a few months hence. The same may be said of beans and peas, particularly beans. We may say here that the reports on the bean crops given herewith are mainly from Michigan, and while our information is not as authentic, we believe conditions in New York State are little better. In fact it would be an ill informed or rash grower or dealer who would accept orders for beans in the present circumstances. These dealers who have failed to cover their requirements will pay heavy toll for their procrastination, and they will find little sympathy anywhere.

Tomatoes.

Tomatoes are very late but there is little cause for anxiety here. A total failure of the crop no doubt would prove embarrassing, but that is wholly improbable, and a considerable shrinkage in the output of both seed and canned tomatoes would be far from an unmixed evil. It is regrettable that a considerable shortage did not occur in canned peas and the seed, also, of the canning varieties.

This is a good time for jobbing houses to go slowly. Crop conditions affecting most staples produced in this country are either bad or doubtful, while the European situation is an unknown quantity.

Crop Report on Dutch Vegetable Seeds.

The annual crop-report of Sluis & Groot, seedgrowers and merchants, of Enkhuizen, Holland, has been received in which they state that although the winter was very mild but a small percentage of the biennials did set seed, generally speaking. By a continuous wet period in the preceding autumn, the plants were much weakened and the following spring brought no recovery for even then the weather was not at all favorable. Drought, cold and, worst of all, considerable frost in May and June kept the vegetation backward and many items could not be re-planted, and under the circumstances many growers simply ploughed up those poor looking fields. They conclude that there will be in almost all articles a shortage more or less. Of the following items they give a more detailed account.

Cauliflower—Scarcely better than average.

Cabbage and Red Cabbage—Small plantings in general and some varieties almost totally failing, especially Red Cabbage.

Savoy, Brussels Sprouts and Borecole—Little better than the foregoing.

Turnip and Swedes—Sufficiently planted but much ploughed up. In some districts the seed-pods are fearfully eaten by worms. Many sorts will give but a small crop.

Kohlrabi—Almost total failure.

Mangels and Sugar Beets—Although the stand is fair and in some places good, the total yield will be small.

Beets—As with Mangels and Sugar Beets, much has been lost in consequence of the persistent drought, especially on the light grounds.

Radish and Winter Radish—Small acreage; though the stand may be considered good, the crop will not answer the usual demand.

Onion—Dutch flat yellow excepted, all sorts fail, so to speak. Of the Dutch blood-red there is some left, but Zittau is a total failure. Up till now the stand of what is left is very good.

Garlic Bulbs—Small acreage. Stand pretty good.

Parsley—Sufficiently sown, but only little remained. Here and there very weak in consequence of the drought.

Chervil—Very little left. Average stand. Spinach—We expect in general but a small crop.

Cucumber—Of our local sorts scarcely sufficient is planted, of others very little. In some districts late frosts have done much harm. Generally speaking the stand is poor.

Peas—Extraordinarily small acreage, especially little of the wrinkled varieties. Average stand. There is a general expectation of a small crop.

Dwarf Beans—The variety "Best of All," white seeded, was sown on a very large scale. Of other leading sorts the acreages are scarcely normal and of the by-sorts even very small. Up till the present the stand is pretty good, on average.

Running Beans—Very small plantings, especially of the improved long-podded sorts.

Broad Beans—Insignificant area sown. Stand not bad.

Parsnip—Small plantation. Stand not bad.

Scorzonera—Average plantation. Stand good.

Cornsalad—Dutch large seeded was but little sown. Of the other varieties only small patches, which look well.

Celery—Very small crop.

Flower Seeds—In consequence of the persistent drought in spring and even partly still in summer, planting conditions were very bad for the Annuals and scarcely a middling-crop is to be expected. The sown articles have partly suffered from late frosts, especially Nasturtiums. Nasturtium Tom Thumb insufficient. May be Nasturtium Tall may produce a middling crop. Myosotis and some other Biennials did not very well run to seed. The Perennials promise a good average crop.

Spades Versus Shovels.

The Treasury Department has made a ruling that is expected to go a long way toward solving the perplexities of customs men regarding the difference, for classification purposes, of spades and shovels. Up to this time there has been a wide variation in the practice at the several ports in returning these articles for duty. It is announced that following an investigation the department has decided upon these rules:

Spades, both long-handled and D-handled and whether polished or black, are chiefly used for agricultural purposes, while ordinary shovels, both polished and black, and whether long-handled or D-handled, are chiefly used for purposes other than agriculture. In view of this conclusion, customs officials will hereafter pass free of duty as agricultural implements, under Paragraph 391, spades of the kinds mentioned above, while shovels, either polished or black, long-handled or D-handled, are to be assessed at 20 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of metal, under Paragraph 167.

Notes.

Montgomery, Ala.—Greil Bros. Co. will open a wholesale seed department about September 1.

The value of imports of horticultural material at the Port of New York for week ending August 14 is given as follows: Grass seed, $15,478; palm seed, $583; trees and plants, $22,373.

TO PROMOTE SOIL FERTILITY KNOWLEDGE.

Believing that they can render material assistance in the upbuilding and maintaining of soil fertilizers, the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co. have employed practical greenhouse men in their research and laboratory department, and in the handling of correspondence pertaining to questions arising on soil requirements and plant foods.

Their object is to demonstrate the practicability of making up soil mixtures and build up soils that are deficient in plant foods through the addition of fertilizers or commercial manures as the season progresses. In connection with this work they are taking into consideration the uses of stable manures and legumes, supplemented by commercial manures that carry nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash and also the scientific uses of horticultural lime to meet the greenhouse soil's particular needs.

This work is under the direction of J. E. Pollworth, who has surrounded himself with graduates of the floricultural course of the University of Illinois and Massachusetts, also three leading growers who have held responsible positions with large greenhouse establishments and who are well versed in the practical uses of commercial manures as practiced at this time among the most successful greenhouse establishments.

During Recess

Lancaster County Florists' Club.

On Thursday, Aug. 19th, the regular car for Elizabethtown was filled with florists bound for the Avondale Farm and nurseries of our President, B. F. Barr. We had as guests, B. H. Farr, President of The American Peony Society; H. C. Huesman and F. H. Laucks from Reading, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. August Shaeffer of York, Pa., and Dennis Connor of The Lord & Burnham Co.

After an inspection of the nursery, bowling on the green, croquet, cards, quoits and conversation were indulged in. In the bowling Jacob Fleer carried the honors for the greatest number of points. In the first match between teams made up by B. F. Barr and Albert M. Herr, the Herr team won out with flying colors and in the match between teams made up by Geo. Goldbach and Rudolph Nagle, the Goldbach team won out. In croquet, J. Ralph and J. Rutter Hess from the Gap showed Ira Landis from Paradise and Chas. B. Herr from Strasburg that the Gap is not a sleepy town in spite of its name. In the quoits, Willis Girvin of Leola and Mr. Shaeffer of York, showed they had some science and knowledge of other things than those pertaining to the florists' business. In cards, I think Elmer Weaver of Ronks won the booby, and in conversation H. A. Schroyer, Frank L. Kohr, A. F. Strickler and Dennis Connor seemed to be in the lead.

About six o'clock, Mrs. B. F. Barr took the party in charge and fed us royally, ably assisted in the serving by Rodney Eshlemen and Chas. B. Herr.

Japanese lanterns were then lit all over the lawn and a half hour of general sociability followed, after which a unanimous vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Barr for their generous hospitality.

The regular meeting was called to order at 7.30 P. M. A report was heard from the dahlia Show Committee that they had secured 800 square feet of space in the main building at The Lancaster County Fair grounds, about half of which will be reserved for out-of-the-county trade exhibits, as this will be an exceptional opportunity for the dahlia growers to show their products to several hundred thousand people. Volunteers were asked for to help at this show and there will be two or more members of the club in attendance all the time to make it educational and advertise the dahlia. The date is Sept. 8th to Oct. 1st, inclusive.

Mr. Farr was scheduled for an address on Peonies, but unfortunately was unable to stay for the evening meeting. Frank Suter made an elegant display of dahlias and received the thanks of the club.

The meeting will long be remembered as one of the red letter days for the year 1915 by those who were with us.

ALBERT M. HERR.

Rochester Florists' Association.

The Rochester Florists' Association Outing, held on Thursday, August 19th, at Salmon's Grove, was "a rattling good time." Pretty much everybody was on the job at the time dinner was served at 1.30 and relished an excellently gotten up and well served repast.

Stunts were pulled off during the feast. C. H. Vick, president of the Association, was presented with a fitting remembrance by the boys, in the absence of the ladies (which he had been in favor of inviting to the outing, but the committee had voted against) in the shape of a very delicate reminder of femininity. H. E. Bates, vice-president of the Association was also remembered fittingly, being given a pair of baby sandals and he is still wondering if the token was a reminder that the job's shoes were too big for him. John House, the venerable standby of the Florists' Association, was presented with a garden set, he being the oldest and fattest man there. Charlie Chaplin was on deck to give the occasion the touch of up-to-dateness.

After the refreshments everybody was called to the baseball field to witness a ball game between the single men captained by Harry Glenn, and married men captained by George Boucher. We say witness a ball game but in reality it was a slaughter. The two umpires, Lavigne and Bates, were called upon at regular intervals to get off the grounds before there was bloodshed, but they either misunderstood the temper of the crowd or the players reconsideration for they stayed until the last.

Chas. Schomberg, the official score keeper, called for roll after roll of paper and finally through sheer exhaustion of both players and those who witnessed the game, time was called. The official score was given out as 22 runs for the single men and 15 runs for the married men.

The sports were under the leadership of Harry Glenn.

Following were the events:

50 yd. dash—H. Salmon, Cuff Buttons; C. Vick, Bot. Wine. 100 yd. dash—W. Briggs, Umbrella; W. Rypma, 25 cigars. 3-leg race—W. Rypma, Flash Lt. Eastern; Elder, Knife. Shoe race—Elder, Safety razor; W. Gommel, 25 cigars. Walking race—G. Cramer, Barometer; J. Brown, Feather Ruster. Shoe race—Geo. M. Demith, Ball glove; F. Bobuke, Baseball. Backward race—Elder, Necktie; C. Vick, Note book. Quoits—Ed. Vick, Thermos Bottle; Elder, Umbrella; Lavigne, Tobacco; Thomas, Cigars. Ball Game—Single men. 50 cigars.

Holyoke and Northampton Club.

The third annual outing and field day of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held in Smith's Ferry, Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 18. There were about 100 present, including members and families from Holyoke, Northampton and Amherst, in addition to guests from Springfield, Westfield and Greenfield.

The greenhouse of Gallivan Bros. and the residence of D. J. Gallivan were the principal headquarters for the outing, although by courtesy of the Holyoke Canoe Club, the sports and bake took place on the club grounds.

The assemblage enjoyed an outdoor bake at 1 o'clock, after which the sports program took place. The married men, represented by a team of nine, proved far superior to the single men in the tug-of-war, but the single men redeemed their lost honors by emerging from a baseball game with a 12 to 8 victory to their credit. Summary:

100-yard dash, unmarried women—Won by Miss Fowles of Amherst; Miss Doris Kellogg of Smith's Ferry, 2nd.

100-yard dash, married women—Won by Mrs. Thomas Bray of Holyoke; Mrs. Keyes of Florence, 2nd.

100-yard dash, unmarried men—Won by Michael Gee.

100-yard dash, married men—Won by G. H. Sinclair of Holyoke; R. F. Carey of South Hadley, 2nd.

100-yard dash, boys—Won by Dawson Bray, son of Thomas Bray, Holyoke.

GEORGE E. M. STUMPP'S SUMMER ESTABLISHMENT AT SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y.

The accompanying cut shows the summer establishment of G. E. M. Stumpp at Southampton, Long Island, which has proven to be a most successful venture. The store at the right has a front of fifty feet and depth of seventy-five feet, and besides a large stock of cut flowers and plants. There are numerous novelties for the table and porch, together with useful ornaments for the lawn and summer home.

In front of the house in the center, which Mr. Stumpp occupies, there is a lily pond encircled by a driveway.

Connecticut Nurserymen's Annual Outing.

The morning of August 19, 1915 dawned bright and clear and everything looked good to the members of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association, their "better halves," and enthusiastic friends, as they motored to the annual summer outing, held this year at Lake Compounce. On arrival at this beautiful summer resort the autos were parked, greetings exchanged, after which a base ball game was played with Messrs. Burr and Campbell as captains. Burr's team, nicknamed the "Berberry Thunbergliis" were defeated by Campbell's "Forsythias" by a heavy margin. The features of the game were Burr's coaching, Hunt's batting, Hoyt's catching, Campbell's pitching and Wilson's stealing bases. Dinner was partaken of, after which the party visited the points of scenic interest about the lake, grounds and mountain. A short business session was called later on, and one new member added to the association.

All present voted it a most enjoyable occasion.

The annual outing of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will take place Tuesday, September 7th. The steamer "Commander" has been specially chartered. The party will get a three-hour sail on the Sound to Valley Grove at Northport, L. I., where a good meal will be awaiting them.

PREPARING FOR THE NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The Dreer Garden and Lawn in Front of Convention Hall, Philadelphia.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the Dreer Gardens and Lawn in front of Convention Hall, Philadelphia. These gardens have a 90 ft. frontage and 45 ft. depth. At the rear and next to the building they have planted a large, irregular border, 90 feet long, varying in depth from 10 to 16 feet, the rear being planted with Canna Louis Reverchon, and in front of these is Canna Gustav Gumpper, and the entire bed is bordered with Pennisetum Ruppelianum. The two large oval beds contain Dreer's Single Fringed Petunias. Between these there is a large specimen plant of Phoenix sylvestris.

The gardens and lawn are now in a flourishing condition and are creating a great deal of comment which will undoubtedly bear fruit when the great National Flower Show opens its doors next March.

AN IDEAL GLADIOLUS.

L. Merton Gage may justly be proud of his new Kunderd gladiolus Mrs. Dr. Norton. In our estimation it is one of the finest varieties yet introduced and it was entirely reasonable and appropriate that it won the first prize and certificate of merit at Newport. Its color, a beautiful pale rose pink, deeper flushed at the extremities of the petals and illumined by a faint glow of primrose yellow on the lower segments, is very captivating. In size and arrangement of blooms on the spike it is an ideal gladiolus.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON

This week is characterized by a very stagnant market. Last week was poor but this week seems even worse, although the presence of many distinguished guests of the city and state might have been expected to start up a little trade. Gladioli continues to dominate everything and they are selling "for a song." Many superb varieties are in evidence. One named Schwaben, which S. E. Spencer is sending in seems to have particularly caught the popular fancy and it, at least, can be sold. Asters are abundant, of course, many of them poor and a few of them excellent. Lily of the valley is in short supply and the initiated will have no trouble in surmising the reason. Lilies are in sufficient supply but not so badly overstocked as they were. Of roses, there are more than enough and they are very good indeed for the season.

BUFFALO

There has been no improvement in market conditions thus far. Stock is plentiful and there is very little business. Gladioli have not shortened up and asters of ordinary quality have been plentiful. The late branching asters are gradually coming in and some choice ones are seen and have had a fair sale. Lilies continue plentiful and sales slow. Roses are enough to supply all needs and lily of the valley and other stock is coming in normal supply. Asparagus, smilax and greens are also plentiful with no special demand.

CHICAGO

The market condition has changed very little from last week. Local demand is very light. There is just a little stir now and then for funeral stock. Supply is more than ample for all demands. On the whole roses in most lines are clearing up fairly well, the cut at present being rather light though a prospect for an early increase in the output is apparent. Beauties have been moving well; most of the call is for medium 24 to 30 inch and these in most cases realize as good a return as the long-stemmed stock. Some very fine Russells may be had of various lengths of stem. Ophelia and Sunburst are fine and meet with good demand. There are more Killarneys, both pink and white. Of the longer lengths, good flowers of shipping quality are rather scarce. Short Wards are hard to move. Hoosier Beauty is seen at a number of houses and meets with ready sale. This appears to be a rose of great promise. Some good Maryland and Richmond may be had. Gladioli are still much in over supply, in spite of the fact that a number of growers report being pretty well cut out and a good many others having stopped shipping to this market on account of the extremely low prices that have been realized. The later varieties of asters are now in full swing and have cleared fairly well and some very fine greenhouse-grown stock is seen. Chrysanthemum "Golden Glow" is shown in increasing numbers but they move rather slow. There is a good demand for lily of the valley which is a scarce article. Very few orchids are seen. Lilies are quite plenty and move none too well. There is a fair market for green goods, especially Asparagus plumosus sprays. Ferns move slowly. New crop carnations have made their appearance though in short stems as yet, but the quality of bloom is good.

The tail end of the CINCINNATI Galveston storm hit this vicinity at the end of last week and the heavy rains probably caused very considerable damage to the outdoor cut flower crops. The supply in the market is as heavy as it was while the demand for stock, although steady, has shown no marked improvement. The rose cut is heavier and better than it was. Carnations, too, are a little more plentiful than at the last writing. The gladiolus supply is steady and more than able to take care of the present demand. Aster receipts include large supplies in the various colors. Lilies are not very plentiful.

The flower trade situation here shows no improvement, with few exceptions. Lilies and lily of the valley are going better owing to a decreased supply and to an unusual amount of funeral work. Orchids are in very limited supply; the few there are of best quality are selling at top figures. Roses are in larger supply and in quality and length of stem are notable for August. Of course there are thousands of the short grades but never have there been so many good roses to be had in mid-summer. The sale of these is limited, however. Asters are still plentiful but gladioli are not so abundant. General business is very dull.

NEW YORK

Friday and Saturday of last week were pretty good days but business was rather slow until then. Roses have sold better, especially in the higher grades, these being rather on the scarce side. There are some excellent Russells also some good White Killarneys and Sunbursts. The new crop local Beauties have greatly improved and are now preferred to the northern grown as they arrive in better condition. The hot weather is against even fine stock coming from a distance. The oversupply of lilies is past for the time being and prices have hardened up very considerably. Too many asters and much of the stock not top notch. The many heavy showers nearly every day and then the blaze of sunshine following has been apt to blister the flowers and make them spotty and unsalable to a large degree. Gladioli are selling better—at least there are not so many to throw away at the wind-up of the week's business. The orchid market continues firm with supply slightly increased. Vandas and oncidiums add a little variety to the cattleya standbys. There are oceans of white hydrangea heads and other outdoor flowers.

SAN FRANCISCO

Usual midsummer dullness has failed to materialize here, as shown by the fact that stocks cleaned up as closely the past week as any time since the first of the year. Most lines are plentiful and where slightly short substitutes can be made, so the situation is highly satisfactory all around. Scabiosas, marigolds, mignonette, marguerites, gypsophilas, coreopsis and other summer flowers continue to move in exceptionally large quantities. Small sunflowers are popular. Chrysanthemums are more in evidence from day to day and the quality is excellent for the opening of the season. Monrovia, Golden Glow and October Frost are offered quite freely now, and Unaka, the large pink variety, and the large yellow Crocus will probably put in an appearance next week. A limited amount of new carnations have arrived the last few days, which, however, do not attract much attention as the stems are short. Old cuttings are very scarce and the quality very poor. The supply of asters is enormous, but they all seem to find an outlet, as no surplus is reported in any quarter. Gladioli are hardly so plentiful, although some very nice Mrs. Francis King are still offered, as well as fine Niagara and a few Panama. On the other hand the supply of dahlias has increased somewhat and the quality, if anything, averages better than it has for two or three weeks. Some of the rose offerings are nothing extra in quality and good stock is easily disposed of at firm prices. Not much improvement is expected before the middle of September. Rubrum lilies are plentiful, good quality and cheap. Orchids are in a little better supply, but more could be sold if available. Gardenias clean up particularly well on account of the scarcity of orchids.

ST. LOUIS

It is difficult to write up the market as it really is and the prices obtained for stock. Business among the retailers was at a standstill, so the wholesalers have had a hard time in disposing of their consignments, which have been heavy of late. There are plenty of roses of all kinds, asters, field-grown carnations, tuberose and gladioli. The latter have shortened up since the week previous, with the price a few cents higher this week.

WASHINGTON

This has been a slightly better market for cut flowers during the past week or ten days and conditions are more hopeful. The glut of gladioli and asters is about over and those being received are in better quality. Roses have improved and are now coming in with longer stems. Dahlias have not as yet made their appearance in quantities sufficient to menace the sale of other stock. Carnations are decidedly off. Gardenias are not very plentiful and orchids are extremely scarce, with prices very high. The retailers report many queries regarding prices for decorations and even the placement of orders for execution during the latter part of September and early in October and the prediction is made that business during the fall season will be very good.

PHILADELPHIA NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram L. Pennock are spending a vacation at Ocean City, N. J., with their son Samuel S. Pennock and his family. Abram L. will be 88 on his next birthday.

Paul Huebner of the Reading R. R. system has just returned from the R. R. Gardeners' Convention at Detroit and speaks enthusiastically of the splendid reception given the delegates by the local trade—members of the Florists' Club and others. He says they had a very successful meeting and much good work was accomplished.

The House of Michell has sent out a large number of personal invitations to attend a special inspection trip to their nurseries and perennial gardens, at Andalusia, on Wednesday, September 8th. They have provided a special train, leaving Broad Street Station at 11:30 A. M. on that date. "Recognition tags" to be worn visibly on the lapel of the coat will be distributed so that no one may miss the special train. Refreshments will be served, as well as free transportation.

ROCHESTER TAKES THE STAGE.

All roads lead to Rochester next week, when the results of the zealous campaign by the members of the Florists' Association will, we sincerely hope, materialize in a floral and horticultural exhibition worthy of the occasion. A large trade display is assured and a representative attendance of florists and their allies is expected from far and near. The exposition, of which the horticultural show is a part, will be open from August 30 till September 11. A daily attendance of over 20,000 is counted upon.

The wholesale florists of St. Louis have agreed to close their places at 4 P. M. every week day and to remain closed on Sundays all winter.

THE GREAT STORM IN HOUSTON, TEXAS.

THE RUINS OF THE KERR GREENHOUSES AFTER HOUSTON STORM

- 1.—A Close View of the Wreck of the Kerr Plant. 2.—Showing the Destroyed Fern House.
3.—General View of the Ruins. 4.—Showing Destruction of Steel Tower Which Supported a 15,000 Gallon Tank. 5.—Showing One Corner of the Wrecked Greenhouse.

The accompanying pictures show how completely the greenhouses of R. C. Kerr were demolished by the great storm of last week. Mr. Kerr informs us that his losses at the nursery will amount to about five thousand dollars. H. H. Kuhlmann's losses are heavy, about the same as Kerr's. Mr. Cotney's store was destroyed and the family was caught in the wreck. Mr. Cotney was hurt to some extent, but not very seriously. W. T. Hauser lost about one-half of his greenhouses, which will amount to about $3,000. The Brazoe Greenhouses suffered very little—only three or four hundred glass lights being broken. The greenhouses being modern stood the storm very well.

Downtown the Forestdale Store suffered the loss of three big plate glass windows and considerable damage to the stock. Mr. Kerr's conservatory and store were only slightly damaged due to the protection of several large brick buildings. Two plate glass windows were broken out of Kuhlmann's downtown store. The Gulf Florist (a small greenhouse in the business center) was badly damaged. Henry Blecker at the Glenwood Cemetery, had the top blown off of his store, and some damages to his greenhouse.

Mr. Kerr, in a letter to HORTICULTURE, says, that this storm was a blessing in disguise to the florists of Houston. "While our losses are a little heavy, we will soon recover, and after talking it over, I believe everyone will construct only modern houses. In a year of two from now you will see modern greenhouses around Houston instead of the old shacks they have been using for the last ten or fifteen years. In the course of a week or so all the wreckage will be cleared away, and preparations will be made by spring for the erection of the new greenhouses. It is the consensus of opinion that it is too late to do anything this fall except what is necessary for the protection of the stock on hand.

Houston will be in better trim for the Convention on account of this storm, as we will not have these old unsightly greenhouses to show our visitors, but instead new modern greenhouses, and it is needless to say the impression will be far better for Houston."

BOSTON SPRING SHOW.

In the prize list for the exhibition to be held in March, 1916, as printed in our issue of last week an omission occurred in the paragraph of prizes for tulips. The paragraph should read as follows:

Schizanthus. Six plants, 1st, $12; 2nd, $6. Tulips, three pans each color, white, red, pink, yellow, and any other color, 1st, $6; 2nd, $3. Bed to cover not over 25 sq. ft. arranged for color effect; sand will be provided in which to set the pots; pots can be used for edging, 1st, $20; 2nd, $10.

Obituary

George E. Luffman.

George E. Luffman of Glen Iris, Birmingham, Ala., died suddenly on Sunday, August 15, at his home in Birmingham, aged 58 years and 4 months. He leaves a widow and three daughters, one of whom, Mrs. Amy L. Lambly of Spokane, Wash., is a life member of the S. A. F. Mr. Luffman was a landscape gardener and florist, deeply attached to his calling. He was in business in Philadelphia a good many years ago.

Thomas A. Ivey.

Thomas A. Ivey, of Port Dover, Ont., lost his life on the night of August 14 in a collision between a taxicab in which he was riding and a locomotive. He was a widely-known florist throughout Canada, with a large area of glass in Port Dover and wholesale and retail branches in Montreal, Hamilton and elsewhere. He leaves a widow, three daughters and four sons, the sons being associated in the business. He was 68 years of age.

Lawrence W. Kervan.

Lawrence W. Kervan of the Kervan Company, dealing in evergreens and florists' supplies at 119 West 28th street, New York City, died Tuesday night, August 24, in Roosevelt Hospital as the result of an operation for hernia, performed the previous Thursday.

Mr. Kervan was born in New York City, February 21, 1843, and was a Civil War veteran, having served three years in the Fifth Connecticut Regiment. After living a number of years in Florida he returned to New York seventeen years ago and engaged in the selling of evergreens and ferns, building up the large and prosperous concern known as the Kervan Company.

Mr. Kervan was highly esteemed in the trade for his integrity and straightforwardness and a most likable personality won him many warm friends. He is survived by a widow and four sons, three of whom were associated with him in business.

Funeral services were held at his home, No. 7 West 108th street, on Thursday evening, August 26. Interment was in Montague, Mass., the burial place of Mrs. Kervan's family.

Frank Frank, florist, 1561 3rd Avenue, New York, has lost his young daughter, Rita, aged 22 months.

THE LATE JOHN MACDILL CLARK.

The death of John Macdill Clark, secretary of the Leonard Seed Company of Chicago, was briefly announced in our issue of last week. Mr. Macdill had been unwell for about three weeks. Becoming worse, he was operated upon at the West Suburban Hospital three days before his death, when it was discovered that he was suffering from ulceration of the stomach and recovery was impossible.

Mr. Clark was born in Kirkcudbright, Scotland, May 8, 1860. He came to this country with his parents at the age of 7 years and received his education in the public schools of New York. He first worked for a clothing firm, but soon left this position for one with the seed house of A. D. Cowan, New York. After this he worked successively for the Robert Buist Co., of Philadelphia, and Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, until January 1, 1885, when he cast his lot with S. F. Leonard, and when the Leonard Seed Co. was incorporated in 1891 he was chosen secretary.

For many years Mr. Clark had been prominent in the seed trade as an expert in types, bringing a practical knowledge and experience to bear on the subject that gained for him a high place in the esteem and confidence of seed trade and agricultural circles. He was a member of the farmers' institute of the eighth congressional district, and for several years had been one of its directors. His business associates pay him the respect of stating that to his even temper, untiring efforts and close attention to detail, together with his efficient co-operation with the rest of the organization, is due to no small extent the unflinching advance of the house. In his more than thirty years' connection with the company there has never been a moment of friction. His associates will not try to fill his place; they will merely learn to do without him.

NEWS NOTES.

Shelburne Falls, Mass.—P. R. Burt, who recently bought the original Fife greenhouses, is renovating them with a view to opening up the florist business again there.

Beverly Farms, Mass.—Frank E. Cole is running the once famed Spaulding gardens as a commercial enterprise, under the name of North Shore Nurseries and Florist Company, and is very successful with it.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 500 lbs.

tional botanical gardens will be formally opened on Thursday evening, September 2, when the Governor of Maryland and leading officials of the United States government will come to Frederick and participate in the official ceremonies.

The botanical gardens reflect credit to this community. They are not only a valuable asset to the community, but an illustration of co-operative community work. Mayor Fraley has worked tirelessly with the assistance of Frank
C. Hargett, the superintendent, in making these gardens a successful venture.

The officers of the gardens: Executive committee, William F. Gude, Washington; George W. Hess, Washington; Richard Vincent, Jr., White
Marsh, Md.; Mayor Lewis H. Fraley, Frederick, Md.; Frank C. Hargett, superintendent.

There is now a movement on foot to secure a public park, a part of which will be devoted to the further development of these gardens.

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty. Lasts longer than putty. Easy to apply.

When writing to advertisers kindly mention HORTICULTURE.

As an example of how we can take care of hurry call work, John Reickert, of Union, N. J., wrote us in January: "We had the boiler in our shed within six hours from the time I ordered it. I can't express my appreciation of such quick; or I might almost say "wireless" deliveries. It certainly pays to have a copy of the Handy Hand Book at your fingers quick reach, and a telephone handy by."

The After Convention Heating Hustle How We Can Help It

EVERY year right after the S. A. F. August Convention is over, our heating business picks up with a jump. It doesn't seem to make any difference whether most men go to the Convention or not; they put off their heating until afterwards, just the same. And so it happens that in former years we have at such times certainly had our hands full and running over to keep our deliveries up. This year, however, we have made additional provision to take care of just such rush orders and hurry call work. Of course we are not going so far as to suggest your putting off coming to us until Jack Frost has nipped things and driven you to it; and then expect us to do the impossible. So if you need fittings; and know you need them; what's the use of putting off ordering? Take our Handy Hand Book off its hook right now and order what you want. If your boiler needs repairs, get the repair parts and do the repairing. Or have us do it for you. If you need a new boiler; why spend your time and money looking around at boilers you don't know much about; when you can promptly get a Burnham that you know is absolutely all right? Of course if you want to talk things over with us; say when and where and we'll be there.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Cattleyas

We are likely to have a good deal of warm, humid and cloudy weather before September closes and it behooves us to see to it that the shading over the cattleyas is not too dense. Those who can afford roller or other movable shades have a great advantage in being able to give their plants a maximum of light when it is most needed. Watering should be done in the morning. Plants such as C. labiata, Trianae, Mossiae, Percivaliana and others in active growth, will need a liberal supply more than C. Gaskelliana, Dowiana and others which are just starting into growth. A spraying each clear afternoon should be given the cattleyas. Do it sufficiently early so that it will dry before nightfall. Night temperatures are variable during September. As a general rule it can run from 60 to 65 degrees. Some nights it will be higher and it will do no harm if it falls to 58 degrees on cool evenings. It is not a good plan to shut the house up tightly on a cool night. Leave some air on to keep the atmosphere buoyant.

Cinerarias for Easter

Cineraria seed should be sown any time from the middle of September but no later. Sow in a well screened compost of new loam and peat or leaf mold half and half and a little sand. Have the pans well drained with plenty of crocks, upon which spread some sphagnum moss. Fill the pans to within half an inch and press firm and absolutely level. Water thoroughly before sowing and cover each pan with a pane of glass and place in cold frame under heavy shading, to be made lighter after the plants are up. When large enough, prick out into other pans or flats, and when they have made three or four leaves they can be potted into 2 or 2½-inch pots, using a compost of fibrous loam three parts, leaf mold and cow manure one part each and enough sand to keep it open.

Freesias

Give these little bulbs a good place well up to the glass. Keep the soil moist but not overwet. Provide proper supports to keep them upright. The earliest batch should now be several inches high and to get them in flower as early as possible they should be moved into a sunny house where a winter minimum of 52 to 55 degrees is maintained. It is often possible to use shelves for them, providing saucers where the plants are in pans to prevent drying out later in the season.

Tulips

With the arrival of September it is time to think of tulips. Tulips are more in demand in pans or pots than any other Dutch bulbs. Use a light but moderately rich compost. Two-thirds decayed loam, one-third old hotbed or mushroom manure, with a fair addition of leafmold and plenty of sharp sand will be found suitable, and it is all the better if it is prepared well beforehand. It is safer not to add bone or any chemical fertilizers to soil for bulbs, as it is more likely to injure than to improve the plants. Water thoroughly and place outside and cover with about five or six inches of soil. With some protection they can stay here until wanted. Tulips do not force well until after January.

Winter Flowering Geraniums

Geraniums for winter use should not be allowed to get potbound between shifts. Should they show starvation in their blooming pots, a dusting of fine bone or other fertilizer or weak nitrate of soda water will tone them up. Give an occasional spraying overhead. The regular winter blooming geraniums being grown in pots should have the strong leading shoots pinched as they show any tendency to "run away," also keep all flower spikes picked off. Dead leaves and weeds should be removed and the plants frequently spread out while growing. They like a freely ventilated house. In a musty, ill-ventilated one they will develop bacteria. Let them dry out once in a while and when watering give them enough so as to soak the ball thoroughly.

Watch Out for Frost

While some growers are so crowded that it is next to impossible for them to house all their stock in a hurry it must be remembered that from this out we are liable to have a touch of frost at any time in some of our northern states. See that stock is brought together so they can be given protection at any moment.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Starting the Fires

It has been necessary to start the boilers much sooner than we expected, the cool snap arriving last week, with the thermometer down to 54 outside. A steam pipe through the houses made them feel much more comfortable, and the roses looked as though they appreciated the little heat. The houses should not be allowed to go much below 64, as it is too early in the season to run them at the regular night temperature, and then this cool weather will not last, and there may be nights when it will be hot and the houses will stay around 70. There is nothing in that hardening the plants up, by letting them go without heat, and allowing the houses to drop down to 56. This is all right in the middle of the winter but just now the roses should have heat so that they will make as much growth as possible. They should not be forced, by any means, but kept going all the time with nothing done that might check them in any way. It will pay in the long run to start the fires as soon as it gets cool, even though the night fireman has to be put on the job. It is poor economy to try to save ten dollars or perhaps a little more on the night man's wages, and lose two or three times the amount in the houses.

Ventilation

Do not close up the houses at night because of a cool night. Keep as much air on as possible, and with a steam pipe here and there it will not be necessary to reduce the air very low at night. Eight inches of air in clear weather is none too much and the wider houses should have more. All side ventilators had better be kept closed from now on unless they are looked after by a well skilled grower, and if this is the case he will know when to open them and when to leave them closed. The practice of putting the houses up full, first thing in the morning, should now be stopped and the thermometer used in deciding when the air is needed. It will be best not to put full air on until the houses reach a temperature of 78 degrees. In the cross houses where asparagus or smilax is grown the greens will grow much better if they are kept a little warmer. We find it best to keep these warm until they are almost ready to ship, and then run them cool to harden them off for the market.

Sulphur

As soon as the steam is turned on it will be well to apply a least bit of sulphur to the pipes, every ten or twenty feet as may be needed. This can be done even though there is no mildew to be seen. The gentle fumes resulting will destroy a good deal of fungus, and will not harm the plants or flowers in any way. Care should be taken, however, not to have more than five pounds of steam in the pipes when the sulphur is applied as otherwise it will evaporate too quickly and the fumes would become too strong and would be apt to bleach the flowers even though they did no harm to the foliage. For applying the sulphur we find nothing handier than the common indurated fibre rose jar and some sort of a brush. This must not be too big or too far gone or it will waste a good deal of the sulphur. Add enough water to the sulphur to make easy to apply and it will be better to have a little more water rather than to have the mixture too thick. If there is a crop of roses it will be well to add a little lime to the sulphur, say about one-third. This will keep the sulphur on the pipes longer and prevent it from evaporating too soon, so that the fumes will be much milder and will not be apt to bleach the flowers.

Repairs

If all the broken glass has not been repaired as yet no time should be lost in doing so now. The cool nights of last week would cause cold air to come in on the plants where it was not wanted, and they would likely get specked with mildew as a result. It is best to do the work right when repairing. Some growers have a habit of just sticking the glass in without any putty, leaving the rest of the work for some future day. This day seldom comes and the chances are that the glass gets broken again very shortly or else cracks because it does not lay properly. Do not be afraid to use the glass cutter. A good one can be had for ten cents, and with a little practice on some old glass anyone can become quite an expert at this business so that there is really no excuse for laps in the glass as wide as two inches. The lap should never be more than a quarter of an inch and less is better. If the lap is too wide, dirt will collect between the panes and dark strips will cast shadows over the plants. Then, too, water will get in in the winter and freeze thus breaking one or both panes quite often. Be sure to remove all surplus putty even though you have to get a ladder from the inside to do so. The work will never look finished if the putty is left sticking out after the glass is put in. It is well to paint over the putty a day or so after it is put in, for it will then stay put much better.

Wires

The earlier planted houses of Beauties will now take their last set of wires, and it is best not to wait too long in stretching these. We generally stretch them at the same time that the second tier is put on, unless we are rushed with other work. At any rate, do not let the plants lie around after the first wires are put on as they will come to harm if they are not kept tied up properly. With teas it is much the same. Those early houses on wires will have to get their second set before the tops get too high, as it will then be difficult to put the wires in.

Indigofera decora

The Indigoferas may well be classed among the prettiest and most graceful garden shrubs. They belong to the family Leguminosae and derive their name from indigo, referring to the use of certain species in producing the well known dye.

Indigofera decora, a native of southern China, is, I think, one of the finest of the genus, and although it dies to the ground each winter in the vicinity of Boston it deserves more general planting, for each spring it sends up quantities of new shoots which, early in June, are covered with terminal racemes of large white flowers. These shoots attain a height of from one and one-half to two feet and are well clothed with bluish green compound leaves of a fine texture.

Indigofera kirilowi, a close relative of the above, is another plant deserving of attention. This species, a native of Korea, from whence it was brought by Mr. J. G. Jack, is, if anything, hardier than I. decora for it does not die back each year. It is a fast growing species forming a spreading mass from one to two feet in height with bluish green foliage and rosy pink flowers of the same size as those of I. decora and borne also in terminal racemes. In the Arnold Arboretum it has proven to be one of the best shrubs of its class, remaining in bloom during several weeks.

Among the other species of Indigofera, which have proven hardy or half hardy at the Arnold Arboretum, are I. Gerardiana, a native of the Himalayas, which dies back each year but comes up again like I. decora, and I. amblyantha, a plant of entirely different habit, having slender stems and axillary clusters of small flowers, rose colored, and continuing in bloom for two or three months. The foliage is smaller than on other species. I. amblyantha was introduced from western China by E. H. Wilson. There he found it growing on cliffs above rivers in altitudes of up to six thousand feet above the sea.

The Indigoferas may be propagated from seed or by firm cuttings of young shoots inserted in sandy or peaty soil under glass in slight heat in summer. These plants give promise of becoming valuable material for the use of the landscape gardener when they become better known. The foliage is of a texture which harmonizes well with many other shrubs and they make an attractive addition to the shrubbery, especially since their blooming period is later than most of our native shrubs. Their use should be encouraged where conditions warrant planting shrubs of their class.

A PEST OF THE RHODODENDRON.

Editor HORTICULTURE

Dear Sir: If possible I would like to get some information about a pest which destroys Rhododendrons. In the last couple of years I have lost quite a few of the rarer kinds. At first I could not account for it, but on close examination, I found that in every case an inch or so below the ground the bark had been eaten off the stem. Although I repeatedly examined the plants I was never able to find anything that was likely to do it. Soaking the ground with Vermine did not prevent it. Local gardeners tell me that it is done by the larva of a bug they call Mobium which comes from Holland. The bug also eats the leaves during the night, which is probably correct, as I have observed that parts of the leaves have been eaten, but that is done at an earlier time. At the present time I have not been able to see any.

If there is any remedy against this pest I would very much like to know it.

Yours truly,

ALFRED J. PAULS.

Pallsades Park, N. J.

Editor HORTICULTURE

We have had the trouble which Mr. Pauls writes about, for years. We find it is caused by a little white grub about the size of a grain of wheat, and no doubt the larvae of the bug mentioned—mobium. We know of no remedy. So far our trouble has been confined to nursery beds, none having yet appeared in the larger plantations in the grounds. It is not confined, however, to rhododendrons. Yews are great favorites with the grub, and large plants 3-4 feet high have been killed by it. It eats all the bark off the roots to the ground level, and it is hard to detect, for the plants do not appear to show its work until it is all but finished. Occasionally I have detected its work and moved the plants, and saved them. So far the only way we have successfully combatted the grub has been changing the place every two years, for it takes about this time from the laying of the eggs for the grub to become dangerous. It is practically a fixture—has no locomotion and so moving saves the plants for a while.

We find it attacks all Ericaceae: Azaleas, Kalmias, Leucothoes, Andromedas, Zenobias, Oxydendron and many others.

LANDSCAPE GARDENERS SCARCE IN MISSOURI.

Landscape gardeners are scarce in Missouri. From fifteen to twenty applications have been on file in the Landscape Gardening Department at the University of Missouri during last year. At least seven of these positions remain unfilled at the present time. The work includes supervision of grounds about institutions and parks, planting, designing, care of arboretums and nurseries.

Horace F. Major, assistant professor of Landscape gardening at the University, says that there are great opportunities in this profession. So great are the opportunities, he says, that untrained men are calling themselves landscape architects and are turning to this profession.

About a dozen students are taking the advanced courses in this work at the university. A greater number are taking the more elementary courses. Many university women are taking the work. A course in floriculture, which consists of the care of house plants and gardens, is given especially for women. A course in landscape gardening takes up the principles underlying the ornamentation of public and private grounds. Other courses are given in the history of landscape gardening, theory and principles of landscape design and engineering, elementary landscape design, and ornamental plants. Considerable work is given for graduate students.

ists had about reached the conclusion that a vigorous bombarding of the atmosphere might be productive of local conditions conducive to the precipitation of rain, here we are in the most peaceful section of the globe—where in these “safe and sane” times the exploding of anything bigger than a squib, even on the glorious Fourth, is liable to put us in durance vile—treated to the most remarkable series of downpours ever recorded here, while over in war-torn Europe where bombarding has been a daily pastime for over a year nothing out of the ordinary in this respect has been reported.

After the deluge

We hear of rotting potato crops, mildewed hay fields and widespread injury to many other products of the husbandman's industry as a result of the unprecedented soaking to which the land has been subjected during this unusual summer. Our attention was recently called by a Philadelphia friend to the shoots of ailantus sprouting up through the pavement on one of that city's principal thoroughfares. No old time-frayed reflection on Philadelphia is here intended; we only record it as one interesting consequence of the summer's deluge. It is, perhaps, pertinent to say here that the growths above mentioned are not found in front of any one of the firms that advertise in HORTICULTURE! However this great wet-down may affect us individually, it nevertheless behooves us to be thankful for the good that is to be found in everything, no matter how unpromising it may appear. So let us feast our eyes on the rare green fields and lawns which greet us on all sides, which even the verdant Emerald Isle at its best cannot excel; the luxuriant vigor of trees, shrubs and every other growing thing which goes to make our gardens and landscape presumable reproductions of the first Paradise. It may be that another half century may pass before such a visitation shall come our way again.

The
S. A. F. Some little apprehension has been expressed by members of the Society of American Florists that the action of the Society in holding the successive conventions in territory remote from its centres of activity and main body of its supporters hitherto, is liable to result in a serious shrinkage in membership eastward and that the accretions from the west will not be sufficient to counterbalance this loss. We hope and believe that these fears will prove to have been groundless, and it is our opinion that the majority of the thoughtful, far-sighted members of the organization share this view. The S. A. F. is becoming too influential, too strong financially, to suffer any serious defection in its membership roll due to convention location. The activities of the organization are no longer confined to the proceedings of the annual gathering but spread over the entire year and all indications point to bigger doings in the near future. In consequence of this substantial advancement, membership in the S. A. F. is coming to be regarded as something to be proud of, whether one does or does not appear in person at every convention. Many agencies are working to that end and the prospects are favorable for a much larger numerical representation of the profession in its ranks rather than otherwise and this is as it should be.

Obituary

Edwin Lonsdale.

The news of the passing away of Edwin Lonsdale will bring sorrow home to the hearts of a host of friends who loved him. Mr. Lonsdale's death was not unexpected as it has been well known for some time that there was practically no possibility of recovery from the malady from which he was suffering. The news has just reached us that he passed away on Wednesday afternoon, September 1, at the Naturopathic Institute, Los Angeles, Cal.

Edwin Lonsdale was a native of Litchfield, Staffordshire, England; born on October 6, 1845, and educated in horticulture by apprenticeship and service in several places of note, including Enville Hall gardens, Staffordshire, and Hanover Lodge, Regents Park, London. At the age of 24 he came to America and was employed at Syracuse, N. Y. in market gardening; at Germantown, Pa., with the late Thomas Meehan; at San Francisco, with Miller and Sievers, and San Jose, Cal., with Levi P. Sanderson. At the age of 30 he visited his old home in England where he married Miss Sarah Burton, sister of John Burton of Philadelphia. Returning he established himself as a florist in Philadelphia and five years later went into partnership with John Burton. Later, on the dissolution of the firm, he resumed business on his own account. This he gave up in 1904 and became superintendent of Girard College. Five years later he accepted the position of manager for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., at their seed farms in Lompoc, Cal., where he continued until overcome by the illness which resulted in his death.

Edwin Lonsdale was one of the pioneer members of the Society of American Florists. He served as secretary of that organization in 1887 and as president in 1896. He was also officially connected with the Penna. Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, serving as president of the latter. He was the first president of the American Carnation Society, holding that office for three consecutive years.

Mr. Lonsdale was one of the best informed and well-read men in American commercial horticulture. His name is linked with many movements for the advancement of his profession and the improvement of those specialties in florists' flowers in which he took a direct interest. Some of the finest varieties of crotons ever produced in the world were raised by him. Carnations Helen Keller, Mrs. Cleveland and Grace Battles were produced and introduced by him, also the zonal geranium La Pilot.

In his personality, Edwin Lonsdale was one of the most lovable men the Almighty ever put upon this Earth. True hearted and loyal, he was a shining example of manly nobility. Words fail when we try to express how dearly we loved him. They will bring him home to Chestnut Hill where he may sleep with his daughters in Ivy Hill Cemetery—those daughters so cruelly torn from them in that awful drowning accident at Ocean City a number of years ago and the remaining one who followed them a year or two later.

John Mackenzie.

John Mackenzie, formerly gardener for W. Emerson Cox and later with E. B. Dane when Mr. Dane bought the Cox estate, died on August 25th at the Massachusetts General Hospital, following an operation for hernia. Mr. Mackenzie had been doing job gardening of late, temporarily, for R. & J. Farquhar & Co. He leaves a widow and a large family, most of them grown up.

PUBLICATION RECEIVED.

The Complete Club Book for Women. By Caroline French Benton. A companion volume to "Woman's Club Work and Programs." If women must have their own clubs—and why shouldn't they?—then here is a book that they will find helpful, or, we might say indispensable. The volume embraces in its 300 pages the last word in proper organization and management. A model Constitution is offered which any club may adapt to its own needs. Condensed rules of order and examples of programs, etc., are also given. But all this fills only a minor place in the contents of the book under consideration. Chapters are devoted to Community Improvement. The Business of Systematic House-keeping. Literature, History, Educational Systems. How to Make a Year Book. A Study of Songs, A Study of the American Colonies, Child Labor, Famous Buildings, Great Men and Women in History, etc., etc., topics selected for their educational and uplifting character. Organizations taking their inspiration from this unique volume will unquestionably fill a useful place in their respective communities. The publication is just off the press of The Page Company, Boston. Price $1.25 net or $1.40 carriage paid.

A DEFORMED BRANCH.

The accompanying photograph is a good example of a fasciated branch and was found on Amorpha virgata, growing in the shrub collection in the Arnold Arboretum. This branch was the only one on the plant which was so deformed, the others being normal. In the case of this particular branch the growth at the crown of the plant was normal, but about a foot away the whole structure started to flatten out and continued so to the end of the branch, where it seemed to split up into many small immature leaflets. As will be noticed, the branch is approximately an inch and three-quarters wide for a great deal of its length and about one-quarter of an inch thick. The curious way in which the leaves have disposed themselves is very interesting. The bush on which this occurred is a handsome specimen about nine feet high and has a spread of over six feet. The branch was one of the lower ones but with just as much space in which to develop as the rest on the same level.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

REPORT OF THE ENTOMOLOGIST, SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLOR- ISTS AND ORNAMENTAL HORTICULTURISTS.

By W. E. Britton, Ph. D., State Entomologist of Connecticut.

Chrysanthemum Pests.

All who have been troubled by the chrysanthemum leaf miner or marguerite fly, Phytomyza chrysanthemi Kowarz., should obtain Bulletin No. 157 of the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station, Amherst, Mass., issued recently.

For the past twenty-five years this insect has caused damage to composite plants in the northern states. The adult is a two-winged fly which lays an egg in an incision just under the epidermis of the leaf. This egg hatches in five days and the larva mines in the parenchyma of the leaf for about two weeks when it transforms to the pupa stage inside the leaf. Two weeks later the adult emerges. There are ten generations each year.

Spraying the plants with nicotine solution is a remedy. If "Black Leaf 40" is the kind used it should be diluted at the rate of about 1 part in 400 parts of water or roughly 2 teaspoonfuls in a gallon.

Another chrysanthemum pest new to our continent is the Chrysanthemum midge, a European insect which has recently caused much damage in some large commercial greenhouses in Michigan. The presence of this insect was recorded by Dr. E. P. Felt, State Entomologist of New York, in Florists' Exchange, Vol. XXXIX, page 859, April 10, 1915. It causes a swelling on the main stem near the surface of the ground, galls or enlargements on the mid-ribs of the leaves, and close ill-shaped heads which ruin the plant for commercial purposes. It will probably be difficult to control this pest.

Further injury to chrysanthemums may be here recorded by a mite, Tarsonemus pallidus Banks, mentioned in my report of last year. This time it occurred in October in a commercial greenhouse at Hartford, Conn., and many of the petals had withered and turned brown.

A New Pest of Pine Trees.

During the past year one of the destructive European saw-flies Diprion (Lophyrus) simile Hartig, has been found in this country, where it has apparently become established. The insect passes the winter in its cocoons on or under leaves and rubbish near the ground. There are apparently three broods each year in Connecticut, the cocoons of the first and second broods often being formed on the twigs. The larvae are about an inch long, greenish yellow with brown markings, and have the appearance characteristic of sawfly larvae. They feed upon the needles of several species of pine, including the white pine, Austrian pine, Pinus densiflora, P. excelsa, and P. florilis. It will doubtless be found to attack other species as well.

The eggs are laid in longitudinal incisions in the needles and are placed end to end.

The cocoons are brown oval bodies about three-eighths of an inch long and of a tough leathery texture.

The adults have a wing-spread of from about half an inch in the male to three-fourths of an inch in the female. The male is black, but the female has yellow thorax and abdomen.

Though this insect occurs in four towns in Connecticut it will probably be found in other states. Just how it was brought to this country is not known but probably cocoons came over on nursery stock and either passed the inspectors or perhaps came in before the inspection system was established. Parasites of this sawfly have been observed in Connecticut. Spraying the pine trees with lead arsenate (3 lbs. in 50 gallons of water) is the best remedy.

A preliminary illustrated account of this insect may be found in the Journal of Economic Entomology, Vol. 8, page 379, June 1915.

A Juniper Web Worm.

Several samples have been received by the writer of juniper twigs webbed together by this insect. On rearing the adult it proved to be Dichromerus marginellus Fabr. Dr. E. P. Felt* has recorded this insect from Long Island and from the Hudson River Valley in New York State. This is also a European species which has appeared in the United States during the past few years. The real damage from it will be in ornamental plantings in parks and on private grounds, and doubtless may be prevented by a thorough spraying of lead arsenate early in spring and again late in summer.

REPORT OF THE SCHOOL GARDEN COMMITTEE.

Benj. Hammond, Chairman.

Our country is so large that to nationalize any movement is no small work, and to hold the interest of each section in any particular work or object is difficult, but one effort to stir up common interest certainly meets with a well nigh universal appreciation, and that is—"School Gardening."

The florists of this country are in a trade that helps greatly to develop beauty all around, and in the efforts made by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists to stimulate interest in some practical labor by teaching in our schools a little gardening and floriculture, the answers come from many points which show without question that the effort is having a helpful result.

This season our letter sent to every school board or school superintendent where is located a member of the S. A. F. and to each and every state commissioner of education, had, as a leading picture the beautiful statue and surrounding of Washington in the Grand Avenue Park at Milwaukee.

This picture with its spirit of emulation represented by the mother and her boy as she directs his attention to Washington as his pattern, certainly seemed to strike a responsive chord.

In one place where efforts are made to have the children interested in gardening the report comes—"the children want flower seeds, and the flower beds wherever started set an example. The demand comes for geraniums, coleus, dahlias and roses."

The newspapers of the country are paying more and more heed to this flower gardening, and small yards of the cities show the effect.

Schools can never take the place of parental oversight and encouragement. In one dark back yard overshadowed by other buildings two boys came to invite us "to come see our garden." Sure enough those youngsters had dug up a bit of waste ground, planted it, weeded and watered the ten or dozen feet square which looked like an irrigated patch near Denver, Col., so prolific it was, and those lads were pleased. This kind of work aids to develop American citizens of character. In many villages and small towns improvement societies exist, and these societies are usually excellent supporters of the florist craft directly and indirectly. By small prizes well distributed the children are encouraged to keep up the home yards.

In San Francisco this year Superintendent Thomas L. Heaton has been busy in his efforts for a School Garden Exhibit at the Exposition. In San Diego and Los Angeles these cities of the Pacific Coast stand out boldly in the common efforts of the school authorities to fix up and look nice, and to encourage the children gardening at home. This year in Los Angeles we learn in a letter recently received from Morris M. Rathbun that cash prizes ranging from five dollars ($5.00) to the individual student home gardener to five hundred dollars ($500) for the school making the best showing in the Exposition year in 1915 were distributed. This work cleaned up many neglected lots, turning waste places into beauty spots. Los Angeles to do this work well employed an expert teacher florist, and this work and its effects is seen in many of the cities and towns of the Pacific Coast. At Portland, Oregon, work of this kind is being carried on under the direction of a landscape artist from Chicago who is specially employed to give instruction in this line.

In every State in the American Union this good work is being carried on. School Gardening has its greatest application in our great cities. School Gardening aims to take hold and interest the city boys. At a flower show held in New York City in the Museum of Natural History, the school children came in classes to view the exhibits. There were children born in congested sections of New York and some of them never had been in the country, and their wonder at seeing so many flowers was expressed without reserve.

In the city of Philadelphia the Only part of the 1915 Araucarias were received from Belgium the past season, but it is probable that the usual season's requirement of these plants should come through this fall (which is the season in which they appear likely) newly imported stock would not be available for this season's sales as it takes fully three months for this stock to become established and be fit to sell after its trip across the Atlantic.

We are pleased to state that we have a splendid stock, not sufficient to last the season out, but we offer as long as the stock lasts exceptional values as below.

committee in charge of the garden all School Garden work is well organized, and the back yards of the thousands of little houses reveal a taste and industry of great importance to any one. No one city probably is doing more by organized effort to make up home and public gardening instruction than is Toronto, Ontario. Here is a climate the opposite in its make-up to that of Southern California, yet the same appreciation of the beautiful and the value of economic thrift is evidenced in both sections. Down the Ohio river, in city after city its entire length, this school gardening and home gardening is being carried on. At Evansville, Ind., our old friend and pioneer member of the society, J. D. Carmody, has encouraged this sort of work and lately given valuable land for garden and park use. This illustration serves simply to show the interest in this great work. It is one that grows, and no craft can do more to encourage it and profit by it than the florists of America, and in so doing the homes of the people of America are made the more beautiful.

FROM THE S. A. F. CONVENTION CITY OF 1916.

One week has passed since the storm, and the florists have about cleaned up the wreckage, and are beginning to rebuild. After checking up the stock we find the damage to extend to about 25 to 35 per cent. In about two or three weeks we will not know we had a storm. Everybody is working a large force of men and will soon have things straightened out.

All the florists are enthusiastic over the S. A. F. Convention for next summer. Very shortly we shall name our committees, and get busy early in the game. We propose to make this a record breaking Convention for the Society. I firmly believe it will come right up to the best Convention the S. A. F. has ever known, if it is not a record breaker. In view of the line of publicity we are going to give the Convention the coming year, it will stir up interest throughout the United States, and very few of the members will feel like staying at home.

As far as trade exhibits are concerned, we have a large auditorium, and I am sure it is going to be packed to its capacity. I cite you for example our Texas State Florists' Association, which is as yet a small organization, and we were enabled to stir up enough interest to fill a good sized building with exhibits. Now compare, if you please, the Texas State Florists' Association and the great S. A. F. and you will have in comparison the kind of an exhibit we shall have at the 1916 S. A. F. Convention in Houston.

THE PROBLEMS ATTENDING THE ESTABLISHMENT OF PERMANENT CONVENTION GARDENS.

(Paper by Theodore Wirth.)

There can be no question as to the importance and desirability of arranging for Convention Gardens wherever our annual meetings are to be held. The usefulness and value of such gardens as a medium of publicity and education will not be doubted by any one who gives the subject due consideration.

There is, to the best of my knowledge and belief, no great difficulty in establishing such a garden for each convention, and the only real problem, it seems to me, is to make it permanent. This necessarily is a question which, in the main, must be solved by the local promoters of the garden. The same spirit that was employed in its creation, should be able to solve the question of its future existence, permanency and growth.

I have, in the past, presented the question whether or not it would be possible to select the Convention City two years in advance, instead of one, in order to provide for two years' growth of the hardy material, which could be used to advantage in the planting of the garden.

Personally, I wish this could be done, because I realize the great and resulting benefits that would accrue; and I believe that all plantmen will agree with me. There can be no doubt but that the value of the gardens, from every point of view, would be greatly enhanced by this additional time given them in preparation; and that the interest of professionals and the public alike, before and after, as well as during, the Convention, would be correspondingly increased.

However, if this plan is not deemed feasible, there is still one advantage open with the present arrangement, which has not been made use of in our past undertakings along this line.

If our brother florists and horticulturists of the city ambitious of securing the next Convention are real anxious to have the best garden thus far made, they will select a piece of land for that purpose, far in advance, and will submit a well arranged plan to the Convention at which they make their bid for the next meeting. If they land the prize, they should prepare the grounds at once, and secure without delay all planting material that can be transplanted to advantage in the fall. In this way, most of the perennials, shrubs, and trees will be well established in the spring, and make a very good showing by Convention time.

Early solicitation amongst prospective exhibitors is, for many reasons absolutely necessary. A time limit should be set for allotment of space in the garden, and the special attention of such prospective exhibitor must be called to this. All space not applied for by a certain date, should then be offered to nearby and local growers with a slightly extended time limit. This limit should be set so as to give the committee in charge an opportunity to secure suitable planting material for filling the unsold spaces in the garden in good time. It is absolutely necessary, in my opinion, to give the necessary power and means, and to concentrate the actual direction and supervision in one active, experienced, dependable man. Tell this man to go ahead, and then do not interfere with him; but give him all the assistance he needs, when he asks for it. I believe it would be a good investment, generally speaking, to send him on a two months' trip to visit personally the principal growers in all parts of the country for the purpose of soliciting exhibits. Let him start right at the Convention. The right man will thereby awaken the general interest of the trade and secure the desired support. Correspondence would not be nearly as effective.

I cannot lay too much stress on the necessity of giving all exhibits the best possible attention and care, and of guarding the interests of the exhibitor in every possible way. Be sure that he gets the space he bought; that his plants are properly labeled, and his firm's name is properly displayed. Give him all he is entitled to and as much more as you can.

It is too much to expect that very many distant firms will keep up their exhibits after the Convention year. Yet some of the wide-awake and progressive growers will undoubtedly be glad to permanently make use of our gardens and thus exhibit their goods and special novelties in different parts of the country at the same time. In most instances, it will, therefore, become desirable and necessary, after the first year, to change the layout of the garden and to devote the larger part of the grounds to hardy material, and a much smaller portion to the tender annual bedding plants. This we have now done at Minneapolis and the new layout will be as beautiful and instructive to our people from now on as the real Convention Garden was to us professionals two years ago.

The Convention Garden must, in my opinion, always be created and maintained under the auspices of the National Society. The price for space should, if at all possible, be the same wherever the Garden is, and same should be high enough to defray the expense of maintenance. The chairman of the local garden committee should be appointed a member of a similar committee of the National Society and as such could act as the executive officer of both committees.

The garden should be located on public land in order to make its future existence possible and I know of no good reason why every city park administration should not only be willing, but really anxious, to cooperate with us in the establishment of such trial and exhibition grounds which cannot help but be of educational value to the people of their city.

Our esteemed President, Mr. P. Welch, has assigned to me the subject herein presented, but I am not sure that I have covered the ground to his entire satisfaction. There are really no great problems, no great obstacles, that I can see, attending the establishment of permanent Convention Gardens, and I believe that if the old saying—"where there is a will, there is a way"—is applied at all times, there can never be any doubt as to our ability to establish such Convention Gardens wherever we may go, and to make them successful in every instance.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. have a field of 50,000 phloxes in bloom at their Dedham nurseries at the present time and it makes a gorgeous sight. There are a good many seedlings of much merit among them. We were particularly impressed with one vivid scarlet which in brilliancy far outranks the old favorite Coquelicot.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. are enlarging their seed establishment by taking in the building No. 8 and 9 South Market street, adjoining their old quarters. There are four stories with basement. All the floors are being thoroughly renovated and equipped. Part of one floor will be used for a draughting room in connection with their landscape planting department.

The directors of the American Forestry Association flashed through Boston's parkways, saw Boston's midsummer finery in a series of quick glimpses, snatched a bite of breakfast at the Algonquin Club, and caught an afternoon train for the White Mountains at the North Station on Tuesday, Aug. 31. Among the visitors were Dr. Henry S. Drinker, president of Lehigh University; Prof. H. H. Chapman of Yale; S. B. Eliot of the Pennsylvania State Forestry Commission; P. S. Ridsdale, secretary of the association; Alfred Gaskell, New Jersey State Forester; and Charles Quincy of New York.

The Boston trade will not lack for fine home grown plant stock during the coming season judging from what is already in sight at Thomas Roland's Nahant greenhouses. There are upwards of 4000 Erica melanthera planted out in the fields and a lot more in pots plunged in frames. The latter are the best for Christmas blooming. A house now full of early chrysanthemums mostly Golden Glow will be filled up with plants which are now outside as soon as the flowers have been cut. Begonia Lorraine and cyclamens are many and there is a good stock of ardisias, which are scarce this year. Crotons are being pushed as a specialty and there is a grand stock of that finest of all crotons, Reidii. Mr. Roland finds that the red foliaged varieties sell much better than the yellow. Mr. Roland's place might be aptly termed "the place of no bugs," everything looks so spotless and trim.

PHILADELPHIA

The latest advice from the sick bed of our good old friend George Anderson is: "A little better this morning (Aug. 30), but not able to sit up yet, and cannot see anyone." Mr. Anderson has been ill for three weeks. Something wrong with the circulation—which does not respond readily to medical treatment. One side of the body has been entirely numb and useless.

Horticulturists, flower specialists and vegetable gardeners, of Norwood, assembled last night in the headquarters of the Norwood Horticultural Society to receive prizes for the best-kept place in the borough. There were ten prizes offered, six of which were contributed by the Henry F. Michell Company, seed merchants, of Philadelphia. The judges, all of whom are authorities on flower and vegetable raising, were Fred Cowperthwaite, C. Vander Breggen and Mr. Michell. (Here follow the names of the winners.)

The Norwood Horticultural Society is an enterprising organization and has done much to boost the "town beautiful" campaign in Delaware County. Dr. John A. Borneman is president of the society.

The death of Edwin Lonsdale, recorded in another column of this paper, recalls the many social and convivial occasions in the early days of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia when "Ned's" buoyant personality, merry laugh and jolly humor counted for so much. "The Brave Old Duke of York" as sung by him, never failed to bring down the house and receive encore after encore. But let Ned tell about it in his own artless way:

"I remember the first time I ever sang that song. It was a long time ago, before the club was organized or anything, back in '81 or '82—somewhere along there—and the boys didn't know each other very well. Craig and Fancourt, I think, were the committee and they were getting up a supper. I said to Craig that day, 'I know a kind of a nice little song and I'll sing it for you tonight if you like; it's a simple little thing and I guess they'll like it. It's got a chorus.' Well, when the time came, I thought he would just call me up and ask me to sing, but he told them I had volunteered to sing a song and I didn't like that; it didn't please me a bit. I thought he would just ask me to sing it."

Syracuse, N. Y.—The Fairview Seed Farms have been merged with the F. B. Mills Seed Co.

Faribault, Minn.—O. J. Stark has purchased the Faribault Seed Co. and will continue the business under that name.

The Blue Ribbon stock farm near Clayton, Mo., was purchased last week by Arthur Schisler of the Schisler & Kaercher Seed Co. The farm comprises 377 acres, all under cultivation except thirty acres, and will be used by the firm as a seed experiment station. Mr. Schisler says the price paid for the farm was $60,000. Their store is now located at 708 N. Fourth street, St. Louis, where they do a general seed business.

The St. Louis Seed Co.'s employees held their annual picnic on Sunday, Aug. 29, at Waterloo, Ill., and with their families spent a most pleasant day. This is an annual affair given by the officials of the company, who pay all expenses. A splendid chicken dinner was served and the usual number of games took place. Miss Frese won the ladies' egg race, Ray Pantler the men's race, Mrs. Martin Moran the time-walking race, Miss Frese the young ladies' race, Mrs. Ripple the married ladies' race, Freddie Henselmeyer won the little boys' race, and Mrs. Blase the ladies' ball-throwing contest. The tug-of-war was won by the shipping force. Jeff Payne won the boys' race, Sylvester Pantler the cigar race and Miss Mildred Sonderman the calico contest. Miss Frese for the third time was declared a winner, this time in the needle-threading contest. The ball game was won by the office force from the salesmen by a score of 6 to 3.

Seeds for Serbia.

Following the recommendation of the Society's special commissioner, the Council of the Royal Horticultural Society has decided to send out to Serbia seeds to the value of £500 for distribution amongst the distressed small farmers. The Royal Horticultural Society is appealing for further contributions to the Allies' War Relief Fund. Many of the nurserymen in Belgium and France have been ruined by the war, and they will need all the financial assistance which can be given them by their confreres in this country.

Thirty-five Miles of Glasshouses.

Recently I had the pleasure of visiting one of the chief English centres of the glasshouse industry, viz., Worthing, in Sussex. Here are grown tons of grapes, tomatoes, cucumbers, and flowers for the London and provincial markets. Some indication of the extent of the industry can be gathered when it is stated that if the glasshouses were placed end to end they would reach 35 miles. In the height of the season on three days a week the packages despatched average from 2,500 to 3,000 per day. Worthing, owing to its favorable climate, is able to place strawberries on the market at Christmas, when big prices are made, as well as securing the trade for grapes when they are the luxury of the wealthy. The cost of growing is minimized to the lowest possible limit, whilst a rapid succession of crops keeps the growers busy all the year round. In the spring a big business is done with peas, beans, marrows, and other early vegetables, and in the autumn there is a tremendous out-put of cut bloom. Another branch of growing associated with the district is the culture of green figs. One of the show places which attracts many visitors is a garden in the old-world village of West Tarring, where Sir Thomas a'Becket is supposed to have planted the first fig tree introduced into this country. The remains of a fine old White Marseilles tree in the garden is stated to have been planted by Sir Thomas.

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

Editor HORTICULTURE:

Could you give me any information as to how to prepare the ground for a bed of cucumbers in a hot house for winter growing, and when is the best time to plant?

Los Angeles, Cal.

W. J. S.

The ground for cucumbers should be composed of 60 per cent. turfy loam and 40 per cent. fresh horse droppings. This compost should be turned over several times to prevent heating. Start the seeds in pots—say, three seeds to a 4-in. pot, and as they develop pull out the two weakest plants. When the first two rough leaves have grown to about three or four inches turn the plants out of the pots, being careful not to break the ball, and plant in the bed made of the compost as above directed. The bed should be eight or nine inches deep. Maintain a humid atmosphere at all times, which will prevent red spider, the greatest pest of the cucumber. At no time should the temperature fall below 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

The shop at 1328 Polk street has changed hands, Yamato the Florist being succeeded by Warlow's Flower Shop.

A. J. Burt of Spokane, Wash., is among the last of the conventionists to get away. He is still in San Francisco visiting the exposition and picking up new ideas for his business.

C. Kooyman has improved the appearance of his wholesale establishment on St. Ann street, by adding large glass cases in the front of the store for the display of supplies. He reports a good shipping demand for calla bulbs.

Special prizes for asters and sweet peas in baskets and dahlias in addition to the regular prizes will be offered this year by the Spokane Floral Association, which will be in charge of the flower show at the Spokane, Wash., Interstate Fair, September 13 to 18.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society met in the Phelan Building, on the afternoon of August 25, at which time plans were consummated for the holding of regular meetings on the last Tuesday of each month, alternate meetings to be held in conjunction with the men to get their co-operation and interest.

A jolly party of conventionists accompanied Chas. W. Ward to Eureka, Cal., for a ten-days' hunting and fishing trip, leaving here immediately after the S. A. F. festivities were over. Most of the time will be spent at the famous Ah-Pah ranch. In the party are Daniel MacRorie, Frank Pelicano, H. Plath, Peter Rock, Frank Shearer and John Morley, park superintendent of Southern California; Mr. Urquhart of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and Prof. Stephens of the University of California.

NEW YORK.

Percy Richter of 55 W. 26, formerly employed by E. Asmus as salesman, has taken the position of manager for the United Cut Flower Co., of 111 West 28th.

Hitchings & Co. have erected at Bound Brook, N. J., for Charles Smith's Son of Woodside, a greenhouse 48x400. Asparagus plumosus has already been planted and it required 36,000 plants to fill the house. The product will be handled by Phil. Kessler, with whom this is a specialty.

Phil. Kessler gave his annual outing to the boys of the Coogan Building on Thursday, Aug. 26th. About twenty of them indulged in a base ball game and bowling, and after that enjoyed a fine spread of eatables such as Phil. Kessler delights to provide, under the trees at Fuhrer's Park, at Elmhurst. All had a good time and went home at about 7 P. M. There were three prizes for bowling and these were won by: A. Radice, 1st, 172; D. Cantillion, 2nd, 172; J. Cook, 3rd, 149.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A meeting of the American Rose Society was held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, August 19, at the Civic Center Auditorium at San Francisco, Cal. In the absence of Wallace R. Pierson, due to his illness, Robert Pyle, of West Grove, Pa., was made chairman pro tem, Benjamin Hammond, secretary, being in attendance.

Action was taken confirming the action of the Executive Committee with reference to the publication of the Annual Bulletin, which will be in charge of the J. Horace McFarland Company, Harrisburg, Pa., with Mr. McFarland as editor, and Mr. Hammond, chairman of the Bulletin Committee; the scope to be practically doubled, and circulation to be obtained through the medium of offers in florists' catalogues as well as through affiliated societies. Action was taken inviting affiliation of the Pacific Coast Rose Society and general approval was expressed of the adoption of such a policy.

It is usual at these meetings of the Rose Society to install the officers-elect; but Mr. S. S. Pennock took office at the last meeting of the Executive Committee in Philadelphia. The absence of Ex-President Pierson was universally regretted.

Among those present were Professor Beal of Cornell, and Professor Mulford, of Washington, D. C. The meeting adjourned to reconvene at the Cleveland Flower Show in November.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The club will hold a field day at the nurseries of the Breck-Robinson Co., Lexington, Mass., on Sept. 11. Transportation will be provided for all members and friends, who can take the train leaving the North Station, Boston, at 1.51 P. M. The train stops at the nurseries. Those preferring to travel via electric cars can take a Cambridge tunnel train at Park street, transferring at Harvard Square to an Arlington, Lowell or Lexington car, all of which pass the nurseries.

Club meetings at Horticultural Hall will be resumed on Sept. 21. There will be special exhibits of gladioli and dahlias. Several prominent members, some of whom have recently visited the Pacific slope, will give vacation experiences which should prove interesting.

CONNECTICUT HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

On Friday evening, Aug. 27, this society held its first regular meeting succeeding the usual two-months vacation. Vice-President Hollister presided. A collection of asters by G. Ogren, gard. for Mrs. W. H. Bulkeley, was awarded a certificate of merit.

The subject of bleaching celery was brought up for discussion, one member advocating the paper collar, so-called, inasmuch as one man could cover more plants in one hour by its use than he could hill-up in a day. The chairman stated that the elm leaf beetle was not in evidence around Hartford this year. He had found eggs but they were dead.

At the close of the meeting the executive committee went into session to discuss plans for the Dahlia Show

A SAN FRANCISCO FLOWER STORE

SPECIAL CONVENTION DISPLAY

By Art Floral Co., San Francisco, Showing Front of Store

In the accompanying picture and the frontispiece of this issue, we present interesting views of one of San Francisco's leading florist stores as decorated for Convention week in honor of the visit of the Society of American Florists. This was by the Art Floral Company at its Powell street shop and was one of the most notable displays made for the occasion. The sides of the store, which do not appear in the pictures shown were lined with lattice work with two panels set in on each side. In each panel was the figure of a girl carrying a bouquet, painted on heavy cardboard, set against a background of ferns, with 16 electric lights illuminating each from behind the edge of the panel. The first figure was a bride carrying phalaenopsis and the frame of the lattice around her panel was adorned with white hydrangeas. Next came the bridesmaid carrying a bouquet of Ophelia roses, with roses of the same kind used around the panel. On the opposite side was the Senorita, dressed in yellow, carrying Ward roses, with yellow chrysanthemums forming the panel decoration. The other figure was the Corsage girl. She carried an appropriate bouquet of orchids, and rubrum lilies were used to good advantage around her panel. The general effect was very striking and was the subject of much favorable and well merited comment.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON Colder weather than usual at this season has retarded crops in some lines and to that extent reduced the daily oversupply which has encumbered the wholesale markets for the past month or more. Roses are distinctly benefited in consequence and there are none too many on some days. The outdoor product, such as gladioli, asters, gypsophila, etc., etc., is still in somewhat obtrusive evidence on the sales counters. Asters are much better than they were, some of the long-stemmed branching stock being very handsome. Gladioli are fine also but their abundance makes them almost an eyesore and it is not easy to admire anything which persists in accumulating until it is in everybody's way. Some of the growers have evidently overdone the gladiolus business and spoiled the game not only for themselves but everybody else. Lily of the valley is good property just now. Lilies are having a fair market. Of cattleyas there are very few in evidence. Seaside and mountain shipping trade is dwindling and should the cool weather continue, it will soon come to its finish.

CHICAGO Very cool weather prevailed the past week. In consequence there was a marked lessening of stock in every line. Beauties are active, the select long ones bringing $3.00 per dozen. The rose market in general is good for this season of the year, and the quality was never better. Some especially fine Killarney Brilliant is offered; these run in all lengths up to 36 inch stems. Russell continues fine and so does Ophelia and Sunburst. Pink and white Killarney show a marked improvement. In the red varieties, Hoosier Beauty and Milady are the best. Richmond also may be had of very good quality. Bulgaria, which for a number of years has been one of our very best sellers, in summer, is in very little demand this season, Ophelia apparently has taken its place to a considerable extent. Carnations continue scarce and short in stem. The market in asters is quite active. Some very fine stock is offered. The glut in gladioli for the present, at least, seems to be over although there is plenty for all demands, but prices have advanced somewhat, particularly on the better grades. Chrysanthemums are increasing; besides Golden Glow we now have Smith's Advance in white. Lilies are quite plentiful and move rather slow. Lily of the valley is still very scarce, the wholesale houses finding it difficult to fill orders at times. Dahlias are more plentiful but this market has never taken much of a fancy to this flower. In miscellaneous garden stuff there is gaillardia, candytuft, cornflowers, coreopsis, daisies, etc. Demand for green goods is fairly active.

NEW YORK The arrival of September finds the flower market in normal condition as to supply, but still a little behind hand as to demand. New roses are gradually improving in quality and the outlook seems good for an unprecedented variety and perfection of roses for the coming season. Lilies are selling fairly well, for a change. Gladioli are still plentiful. Asters sell very well, the later varieties coming in very fine. Carnations are not yet in evidence. A good many dahlias are seen and they are good. A few chrysanthemums have made their appearance, as a sort of reminder that fall is approaching and the next symptom due to develop will be the irrepressible annual scout from "up-the-Hudson" with the first bunch of violets. Little activity is apparent as yet in the wholesale district and the amount of business done after 10:30 A. M. is very small.

PHILADELPHIA Stock cleaned up pretty well last week except on the poorer grades of asters. It was hard to move the latter at any price and many of them remained unsold at the end of the week. Gladioli are selling better and the supply is considerably shorter. The demand is particularly good for America, this one being especially fine at present. Cattleyas are still scarce and there are not many other orchids arriving—the Oncidium varicosum being the most conspicuous. Roses continue to improve in quality, the leaders at present being Russells, Sunbursts and Beauties. The latter hung fire early in the week but recovered later. Sweet peas are best from northern points and are as good as could be expected, but the demand is only so-so. What few carnations arriving are mostly from field-grown. No new indoor as yet. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are to be seen around, also some dahlias, but it is too early for these yet. They will go better after the middle of September. Same may be said of tritomas. Lots of the latter to be seen but they meet with little attention. Much outdoor stock is still coming in—except what they call "small stuff"—achillea, feverfew, candytuft, etc.

Samuel Murray had as guests last Sunday President P. Welch and Mrs. Welch and friend of Boston, on their way home from California. The party arrived several hours late, thus curtailing somewhat the hospitalities prepared for them, but they were in good lands and were given an opportunity to see some of the attractions of Kansas City under most congenial circumstances and company.

Dear Sir: Some time ago we ordered a copy of Thomas' Book on Roses. We promised to send you postage as soon as we learned the amount. The book was so good that we forgot all about postage until today. Please forgive our lapse of memory.

We loaned it to a friend and he likes it so well we're afraid that we will have to buy another.

Who Reads Horticulture?

The man with a serious object in life, of progressive purpose and broad business aims; who is interested to know what the other successful men of the trade are doing and how they are doing it; who reads to learn and improve.

Find a regular reader of Horticulture and you will find he fits the foregoing qualifications.

If you have stock to sell, he is the man who wants to know about it; who is in a position to become a customer if you can suit him; who has the ability to pay for the goods.

Do you want to get in touch with him and do business with him?

If you do,

You Know the Answer

Your advertisement in Horticulture will get the attention of a larger percentage of such readers than in any other publication in this country.

Get Busy

THE NECESSITY OF NATIONAL PUBLICITY TO ADVANCE THE INTERESTS OF COMMERCIAL FLORICULTURE IN THE UNITED STATES.

(A Paper by A. Pochelon, Presented at the San Francisco Convention.)

This subject has been given to me and I shall try to treat it from the standpoint of Secretary of The Florists' Telegraph Delivery, an association which has done a great deal of work in the way of publicity. So far, of course, every member has been doing his or her share in their different localities to draw their patrons, or would-be patrons' attention to the telegraph or out-of-town service, and the results gained in the past few years have been very much beyond expectation.

This much for the introduction of the points which I will bring out now. If the florists throughout the country can be indorsed by a national advertising campaign drawing the public's attention to The Florists' Telegraph Delivery shops all over the country, and the public impressed that F. T. D. does not only stand for telegraph orders, but for the best service, prompt pay, sure and honest delivery—that means progress.

Immediately after reading the above lines you may think that I am too much F. T. D., but that is not at all so. Just remember that every good retail florist in the United States and Canada has the same right to join the F. T. D. and work with us, not alone for his or our benefit but for the good of the florist trade.

Today you may consider the F. T. D. a pretty good organization of the sales department in the florists' trade and if you want to make a start for a national campaign, you have to get a body of retailers who are businesslike enough to see the benefit of such a campaign and who will have to get up a fund to spend for this advertising and this fund must be guaranteed before any attempt at spending it is made. This campaign must go through periodicals as well as local daily papers.

For many years this relaying of orders has been, you might say, limited to steamer deliveries in New York or for funeral work, but the day is here when this relaying can be applied to every occasion for which we sell flowers in our shops. Many a retailer has shipped flowers from his town for one hundred or more miles and felt that he would rather make the sale than relay the order; has he gained anything by so doing? No, he has hurt the florist trade; in almost every instance, these shipments have arrived poorly, where, if the man in the respective town would have made this delivery the patron would have received the full value for his money beside advertising the florist out-of-town service.

Do not forget for one moment that you may do $10,000 worth of advertising and then not be able to deliver the goods right and faithful. By such methods you will do more harm than good to the florist trade. I, therefore, advise, first of all, before any national advertising campaign is undertaken to investigate who can handle and deliver the goods the best and so back up his advertising. I would hate to think that an order sent by me to a brother florist in another town would not be handled as conscientiously as I would want to fill it myself.

There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that our florist trade is still one of the least advertised trades, but it seems a lot of retailers are waiting for someone outside the trade to advertise their goods and you may rest assured they surely will have a long wait coming.

If we had five hundred retailers around the country like Henry Penn and a few others whom I could name who have spent money on a large scale for advertising and yet doing this cautiously, the whole florist trade would gain a lot, but just now instead of being thankful to such men what do a great many narrow, jealous retailers do? They knock, criticise and run down the many advertising florists; at the same time forgetting that if all the people they have made flower buyers of, would go back to their shops for everything they need, they could not handle the business. Many a man or woman have I induced to use flowers on their tables and if all would come and trade with me alone I would not care to handle all that amount of business.

Let each retailer make up his mind to cultivate a want for flowers at occasions where people now do not think of using flowers, instead of watching with jealous eyes his florist neighbor's store and criticising his way of doing business, and we all will be better satisfied aside from being better men and better florists.

I think it is folly for the New York men to dictate to the man in Detroit how to advertise; it is a much safer way for each man to study a plan or system of how he can get the most publicity in his locality. After this is done an indorsement by a national campaign is absolutely in order but before that it would be throwing away money. National advertising is a good deal like co-operation advertising. It is up to a few to do the work to the best of their ability and even after they can show the best results it is hard for the few to collect the money from the others.

There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that Mother's Day would never have become the great benefit to the florist trade had it not been for the florists in different localities taking this proposition in hand and following it up so that some day I hope Mothers' Day will become the same as Easter or Christmas is to the florist trade. Yet, ask the fellows who do the actual work and see and hear what they have to say about plugging to get even a hearing with some of their brother florists. You might be surprised when I tell you they sometimes almost have to beg and plead for the other fellows to come in with them, aside from doing the hard work, and I venture to say right here that if they were not successful and got results they would never be forgiven and even the best of us can make a misjudgment sometimes.

Cleveland is going to have a big Flower Show next fall and the way they go at the advertising is a study worth while being appreciated by a great many. In the florist trade not just one or two individuals will get the largest benefit from some and the men who are doing the work should be honored and appreciation shown by their brother florists and I sincerely hope they will get this without any curtailing.

If publicity and advertising in the florist trade will keep on increasing as it has within the last five years I can safely state that in another five years the trade will be on more of a business basis than it is now. The time has past where a merchant or business man could not be a florist unless he was a graduate from a greenhouse. Today the most prominent retail florists have graduated from merchants' office or business institutions.

The grower, of course, does not like this as well, but let the grower raise a pretty plant, or cut flowers, then add the artistic taste of the up-to-date retailer, and let him place it in his method on the market, and watch the success.

The success of the Ford automobile organization is not so much the mechanic who puts it together but the merchant's ways of publicity. You will find that the largest part of the publicity was studied out by not so much the practical and theoretical man as the man with the most modern up-to-date business ideas.

Of course, I have to come back to my first saying that advertising must first start by getting up an article which will stand on its merits, and which you can fully back up before you reach out for the publicity. I could keep on writing on these lines, but the same substance will always lead me back to my first saying, that before we can think of a national advertising campaign we must have, first of all, representative retailers in every town who will back up our preaching and give the best of service, followed up with a prompt payment of their bills and not allow them to run along for three, four or six months, or even longer. It is to be regretted that there are many florists in this country who seem to forget that prompt payments of bills is one of the greatest reputations a man can get.

Yours in hope that within the next few years advertising publicity will be increased so that no town will ever be able to report in the florists' trade papers about a glut or overstock of the market. It is up to the retailers to get rid of the grower's production, and not up to the grower.

RED SPIDER REMEDIES.

Koster & Co., of Boskoop, Holland, write in reply to an inquiry by one of our correspondents, that they fight red spider on azaleas, blue spruce and other conifers, etc., with a preparation called there Emulgated Carbolineum. They syringe thoroughly with this in early spring before the buds swell. They claim to have had very fine results and have practically eradicated red spider from their nurseries, whereas previous to its use they were badly overrun.

We understand that this preparation, or a similar material (Carbolineum), has been tried in this country but it did not seem to take very well. Prof. Surface, economic zoologist of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Department at Harrisburg, is authority for the statement that any preparation that has sulphur in it will kill red spider. In a bulletin issued last March he said:

Among the very common pests of plants are those commonly known as Mites or Red Spiders. As a matter of fact they are not Spiders, although they belong to the same general order of animate life as do the Spiders. Neither are they always red, as, in fact, they are generally grayish or whitish. These pests are properly called Mites. There are several species of them, some of which are the most serious pests of vegetation, while others attack stored fruits, and still others are the common Red Lice of poultry.

Those Mites which attack vegetation generally accompany Mildew, and where the leaf or other part of the plant looks powdery or whitish, as though it were more or less covered with flour, the plant disease known as Mildew is doubtless the cause, and Mites are generally present.

Mites on plants are also best destroyed by spraying with dilute lime-sulfur solution or the self-boiled lime-sulfur formula. One pint of strong lime-sulfur solution in ten gallons of water is generally enough to have the desired effect for Mites and Mildew of growing vegetation. The spraying should be done with an up-turned nozzle held beneath the leaves of the plants, in order to strike the under side of the leaves, and also turned so as to cover the upper side. A few varieties of plants may be so tender as to require a dilution which is a little greater, but most plants when in leaf will stand even a stronger application than this, which should consequently be made.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little oftener than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt. Sacks, at:
$4.00 per 112 lbs.; $17.50 per 560 lbs.

Some Unusual Points In Thos. Young, Jr.'s, New House at Bound Brook, N. J.

MR. YOUNG has, what we believe to be, a model rose house of our Reconstructed Construction.

It is 48 feet wide and 500 long; and divided in two compartments by a central passage. There are seven lights of 20 inch glass between rafters, making a spacing of 12 feet 2 inches. This extra wide spacing reduces the number of columns and posts by a third and the number of glass laps by a quarter, over the old 8 ft. 4 inch spacing.

The ridge sash are operated in lengths of 5 continuously connected sash, with a light of glass between the lengths, so the ends will not bind or stick. This makes so good a fix, that we recommend its use to you.

A strong point about the sash operating apparatus is that there are three instead of two arms attached to each sash, which, of course, greatly stiffens them, preventing warping, and insuring their closing evenly and snugly.

In addition to this rose house, we have also erected for Mr. Young, from time to time, six orchid houses each 30 x 500.

To our notion he has one of the most up-to-date ranges in the country. The way it is run, would be a joy to any efficiency crank.

The Reconstructed Construction of the big house is fully described in our New Supply Book, that has just come from the printers. Send for it.

The fine radial brick chimneys indicate the superior character of the entire heating system.

Mr. Young's residence is charmingly located among a rare bit of planting so skillfully done that it has the air of a Colonial home, established long ago.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Carnations

There is more to the growing of carnations than to ventilate faithfully and water regularly. Keep your eyes open and take a walk through the houses whenever there is a chance. Hardly ever do we do this without finding something requiring attention. If there should happen to be a little let-up in the rush you couldn't take better advantage of it than to get the supports put in place for the carnations. Which is the best kind to use? The kind which in your judgment will hold the plants up well, make the cutting of flowers an easy matter and will let the sun and air into the rows. The winter months are not the ones to attempt to get a stunted plant into condition. If healthy field-grown plants have been housed, try to keep them so; get a bench full of live stock and busy tops by the middle of October. Look over the beds every day and water where they show dry. Keep on ventilating all day and even at night, as this tends to produce growth that is hard and robust.

Geranium Cuttings

Where a big amount of these cuttings are wanted, lose no time from this out. By rooting the cuttings in benches in sand, a greater number of plants can be raised in a given time than by either of the other methods and if at all times the cuttings are kept cool enough, good salable plants will be the result. Another method is that of putting the cuttings, to the number of fifty or more—the number depending on the size of the flats—into flats. This method, which is generally practiced by private growers and by some commercial growers also, possesses many points of advantage. Those adopting it should, however, count on losing ten per cent. of the cuttings put in if these are allowed as they often are to remain in flats three or four months. The cuttings should be thoroughly watered after being put in the flats and then shaded for a day or two.

Lifting Hydrangeas

It is now about time to lift field grown hydrangeas. Many make the mistake of lifting them too early, when the wood is not nearly matured; but as each location differs in temperature and other climatic conditions, in one or more particulars, it is impossible to advise as to the exact date for lifting and potting. Give the plants a good watering directly after potting. After the plants are potted they should be placed in as exposed a situation as can be found for them outdoors, until safety demands their removal to other quarters. A cool cellar is a good place for resting hydrangeas, but care should be taken that frost does not reach them. You will need to look at them about every two weeks and see that they do not become dust dry.

Midseason Sweet Peas

A much larger number are planting sweet peas as a succession crop to chrysanthemums. The importance of these flowers commercially is yearly increasing as better varieties are introduced. Any florist who cares to plant sweet peas in benches can get good flowers for a long period if they are kept well fed and watered. It is, however, in solid beds that the really fine long-stemmed flowers are to be had. The finest sweet peas under glass are grown in solid beds, as in these they have a deeper root run and the roots are cooler and moister than is possible in raised benches. The soil must be thoroughly prepared. For best results trench the beds twelve to eighteen inches deep, working in plenty of well decayed cow manure. Be sure that the drainage is good. Sow the seed thinly, letting individual plants stand two or three inches apart in the rows. Some people prefer to sow the seed in the rows, other to start in flats of sand or fine loam and transplant singly.

Preparing Soil

The present is a good time to look to the turning over and preparing of the soil to be used for benches, etc., the coming season. The compost should have been got together some time ago but should be turned over and well broken up now so as to be in readiness when wanted. It is necessary that it be finely chopped so that the ingredients are evenly mixed. If barnyard manure was put in the compost at the time it was stacked up nothing else will be necessary. Bone meal or tankage (the latter a mixture of blood, bone and the waste from slaughter houses which is dried and then finely ground up) we have found very good for this purpose. Either of these added to the compost at the rate of about fifty pounds to the yard of soil will make a good, strong soil and also has the advantage of causing the compost to heat sufficiently to destroy the larvæ or grubs of insects that would prove a detriment to the growth of the plants later.

Firing

There are quite a few growers that let all their warm-blooded stock go too long without fire heat. This is not a good plan as it always works harm when the nights become cool. I know some growers who start firing by the 20th of August within fifty miles of New York City. So it is safe to begin firing for this locality now.

ROSE GROWING UNDER GLASS

CONDUCTED BY

Arthur Ruzicka

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Ruzicka. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

Mulching

The houses that were planted a little earlier in the season and have made considerable growth must not be allowed to suffer from lack of mulching. After the plants have grown up nicely and the soil in the benches is full of roots it is best to keep sufficient mulch on to keep the surface of all benches rough so that water will not run all over when you water but will stay where it is applied. If this is not so then the benches will always have dry spots and some plants will fairly shrivel up for want of water while others are suffering from over watering. With liquid manure always on tap we do not depend on this mulch to give the plants much feed, although they do get a good deal out of it even at that. As soon as any bare spots appear in the benches more mulch is applied to these. It is better to do this than to mulch the whole house for the whole house may not need it and the plants would come to harm if mulched. Do not apply too much at the one time, especially if the manure that is used is not well decayed. Not only would a good deal of it be wasted but harm would likely result, for the ammonia and other gases from the manure would be almost sure to burn the leaves. Apply just enough to cover the surface of the benches nicely and when more is needed it can always be applied later.

Bonemeal

If bonemeal is to be used as fertilizer fall and early winter is the best time to use it, especially on places where the old greenhouse soil is not used on the fields for growing field crops. The bone, although a very good fertilizer and plant food, is rather slow in action, especially the coarser grades, and the plants will not get the full benefit if it is applied too late in the season. The best time is just before a mulch is applied, as very little of it will be lost then. It will mix in with the manure and the little roots will find it there when they are after it. And they will be, too, especially if the benches have not been heaped with soil which stays wet most of the time and gives the roots a poor chance to work.

Watering

Watering will play an important part in growing now and the plants that are growing well in only two or three inches of soil will have to be watched very closely as they will dry out in a few hours once they begin to go. These benches will all have to be watered oftener than those that carry six or more inches of soil. Should the plants be allowed to get too dry while they are growing it would check them quite a bit, and should the soil be heavy and crack a good deal it would tear the roots as it did so. In the spring this would do little harm; in fact it would be a help to the plants as all the main roots that would lose their laterals would at once send out countless number of new roots and these would be far more active in securing water, nourishment and so on. Now in the fall, however, with winter on it is best to make it as easy for the plants as possible and keep them going all the time, but not to force them to any extent.

Liquid Manure

It is still very early in the season but the early planted houses that have been cutting quite heavy and are growing well will not be hurt by a liquid manure now and then, being very careful not to use anything but good cow manure in making this. Make sure that the houses are wet enough before it is applied. Better water with clear water first and then apply the liquid later. Watch the plants carefully, and should they show any sign of becoming soft stop using the liquid at once and use no more until the plants starve a little.

Electricity in Rose Growing

Why so many places continue to use the old fashioned steam pumps, which require a lot of care and give unsatisfactory service at their best is more than we can see. The modern electric pump with a motor of sufficient size will not only do the work quicker and better, but pressure can be had on a minute's notice without stopping to get steam up for an hour or more. Once these pumps are started they will work unattended for a very long time. One place we know saves nearly a hundred dollars a month on their water bill by making use of a pump which takes water from a brook running past the place. This pump works for hours at a time without anyone looking at it. The water is pumped into a large concrete reservoir, and another pump with a large motor forces it for syringing when it is wanted. As many as twenty-five men use the hose at the same time, and there is good pressure for them all. The best part of it is that the pump is not damaged in any way should nearly all the faucets happen to be turned off at the same time. Pressure can be regulated by opening or closing the suction valve. Liquid manure can be handled as easily as clear water. Electric lights are very handy to have around, and a small electric motor with brushes to wash pots will clean them up as fast as the men can handle them. They will wash much quicker and save the brushes if the pots are allowed to soak a day or two before washing. A little caustic soda in the water will also help to clean them, but the amount used should be very small, as it will burn the hands of the men who have to handle the wet pots.

Some Practical Inquiries

Gentlemen:

I am a yearly subscriber to your paper. I wish to ask of Mr. Ruzicka, and if possible to get his answer in your next issue if I can use the ammoniated copper solution for Blackspot on Roses that have been sprayed with Fungine? The spot is not bad and is mostly on the old leaves; I use Fungine about once a week at this time of year to ward off mildew. I also wish he would give us some pointers on

THE FERN GARDEN

The present season has been very favorable to the ferns. Loving moisture and shade they have revelled in the overcast, weeping skies of the summer of 1915. To the uninitiated the number and beauty of the ferns which are absolutely hardy in any part of the United States would be a great surprise. Some of the many crested and feathered forms of the Asplenium Filix-femina for example are not excelled in striking beauty and diversity by any greenhouse fern in existence. For the plant lover there can be no more attractive spot than the rocky grotto where these dainty gems display their charms. They demand but little care after they have been once ensconced in congenial soil, sheltered from the sun rays and wind and provided with abundant moisture above and below. Their variety is infinite and their appeal to the artistic eye is irresistible. Some of these hardy sorts are evergreen but this is not material as they shrink from winter exposure and prefer to hug the ground under Nature's blanket of fallen leaves and snow during the inclement season.

The accompanying illustration and the one which serves as a frontispiece for this issue of HORTICULTURE are from photographs taken in the fern corner of the editor's little suburban garden in Winchester, Mass.

pruning the new rose Ophelia. How low may the first growths be pinched? By pinching off the flower bud and one leaf only, the next three eyes all start. Can these in their turn be pinched back to one good leaf one at a time to give a succession of blooms, or would it have been better to pinch back all strong shoots coming from low down on the plant, to one, two or three eyes from the ground while still soft? Plants are in raised benches and were planted last of June, first buds just showing color. We want plenty of cut flowers; long stems not required. An answer on these points will much oblige
J. E.

Norfolk, Ct.

The ammoniated copper solution can safely be used on the same plants that have been sprayed with Fungine, although the latter when used regularly will go a good ways to keep out blackspot. Do not apply the two at the same time, but use one one day and the other a day or so afterward. We find Ophelia a good mildew resisting rose. Regarding pinching this rose we never pinch any buds save the short breaks, after the plants have grown to a nice size. If the three eyes that break are at all strong it will be better to let them come on rather than pinch the strong shoots away down low. This is more so when you want more cut flowers and the stems so much. When all these three shoots come up on a stem, and bear a flower, more care will have to be taken in cutting, for if all the three were to be cut so as to leave two eyes, or even one, and these were to break it would be too much for the one stem to carry. Usually the top break will bloom first and then it should be cut away down to the next break, without leaving any eyes at all. Then if the shoot is strong eyes can be left on the next two, but should the shoot be inclined to be weak it may be better to cut the second flower down near the third break and then leave two good eyes on the stem when the third rose is cut. If the flowers are not wanted when these shoots begin to show bud they can be disbudded again, but this work should be done while the buds are still very small, just barely visible. Taken with one leaf when they are very small the break will grow right on and there will be no hard joint. Should any of these break with three eyes it will be best to remove the top break with a sharp knife right down to the second shoot. This will give the other two a better chance to form good flowers. In pinching we take the buds with one good leaf. If this were not done and the bud only taken the growth that the top eye would make would have a bud before it was more than two inches long which of course is not desirable. Should these breaks be taken away down to one good leaf it would be wasting the plant we think as this method would not build up the plant very much.

fertilizers as also in that of certain bulbs and plant stock we have been contenting ourselves hitherto with working on the lines of least resistance and now we find ourselves "up against it," whereas our natural resources and commercial possibilities are abundant and ample in both instances. "Where there's a will there's a way," is a proverb which we feel applies with pertinence to the fertilizer problem as it confronts this country. American enterprise seems to lag woefully in the handling of this all-important subject.

In advertising their big flower show as "the next horticultural exhibit of national scope" the Cleveland people have hit upon a slogan which should insure an interested reading of their prospectus by all in the horticultural industry who take a more than merely local interest in trade matters. The Ohio Horticultural Society and the Cleveland Garden Club, under whose direction jointly with the Cleveland Florists' Club the show will be given, include among their 200 members practically every wealthy owner of a large private estate within a 75-mile circuit of Cleveland. Dealers and manufacturers who are looking for business from such estates will no doubt be quick to recognize the opportunity thus presented and take advantage of it. The adoption of the trade exhibition feature should have an inspiring effect and the experiment, if successful, will have the result of opening up some new angles of vision for the horticultural jobbing trade.

Progress
slow but sure

Movements for great reforms as a rule are apt to advance but slowly. The campaign to suppress the roadside billboard certainly means a great reform for it strikes at a great nuisance well-entrenched and difficult to reach. But it is making progress nevertheless, and it is possible that the high tide of this inflection has now passed. We read that a certain lady has adopted a method for getting rid of these disfigurements of the scenic beauty of Lenox, Mass., where she is a summer resident, by making long contracts for the lease of the land on which billboards have been located. This is of course an expensive proposition, but it has been successful to the extent that the approaches to Lenox station have been freed from the gaudy and obtrusive advertisements which stood there, and there can be no question that the improved appearance thus acquired will make a favorite impression with the people and do much to develop and crystalize that public sentiment without which no great general movement can make much headway. On Sept. 1st a statute went into force in the state of Rhode Island forbidding billboards or advertising signs of any description on "trees, poles, fences, stones or stumps" on the public highways. Here again, while the use of private property for advertising purposes is not interfered with, yet the good example set by the state will go far to influence private interests to join in the reform which is so much to be desired.

Resources
undeveloped

The fertilizer question is recognized as one of paramount importance as it now stands, its seriousness due not only to the fact that importations from Europe are (not possible but also to our unpreparedness to supply ourselves from our own resources. Quite at variance with our reputation abroad as a nation of shrewd commercial fasteners, on the matter of agricultural

EDWIN LONSDALE

It was HORTICULTURE's privilege to be the only one of the trade journals to announce the death of Edwin Lonsdale in last week's issue. As an addenda to the quite complete record and obituary notes there presented we have the honor to place before our readers, herewith, a few testimonials from men who knew and loved Ed. Lonsdale, as a garland worthy of his memory and a heart tribute to one of Nature's noblemen.

FROM PATRICK O'MARA.

The news of Edwin Lonsdale's death came as a shock, although not unexpected. The passing away of such a man leaves deep regret with all who had the pleasure of knowing him.

His work in horticulture was of great value to the cult and it will no doubt be fully dwelt upon by those who were in close touch with him.

It is the removal from among us of such a kindly, lovable man which will cause unusual sorrow throughout the trade for there was hardly another so universally beloved for sterling qualities of mind and heart.

Successful business men come and go without leaving a deep impression; but men such as Edwin Lonsdale leave behind them a memory which inspires others to do better things. Men such as he supply that "Touch of nature which makes the world akin." He will be deeply mourned and his memory will remain fresh and green for many a year. He loved the flowers and his life was like them, giving forth brightness and cheerfulness without stint.

PATRICK O'MARA.

New York.

FROM J. OTTO THILOW.

In the career of Edwin Lonsdale, the horticultural world is impressed with the persistent conformity of one's love for his vocation. In his exit from the stage of life's activities, we are impressed with the stern reality, that life is made up of coming and going. His friends and all who knew him, keenly feel the loss of one so genial, kind and affectionate and rigidly loyal to any trust imposed upon him, conforming to the wishes of those he served.

While Providence was kind in many ways, yet sorrow fell upon him when responsibilities were heavy, but he emerged from the weight of distress, resigned entirely to conditions over which he had no control. The genial Lonsdale has left his impress never to be erased from our memory. His sterling worth won for him honors he so well deserved.

Philadelphia. J. Otto Thilow.

FROM SARAH A. HILL.

We have always felt very closely attached to Mr. Lonsdale, and have been deeply pained over the series of misfortunes which have befallen him. Many a time we have wondered why they were permitted in his life and in the life of his dear, good wife. His memory will be cherished for many a year by a large circle of affectionate friends.

FROM WILLIAM BURNS SMITH.

Ex-Mayor of Philadelphia.

EDWIN LONSDALE.
Born, Oct. 6, 1845. Died, Sept. 1, 1915.

"And the stately ships go on,
To their haven under the full moon,
But O for the touch of a vanished hand
And the sound of a voice that is still!"

—Tennyson.

Every light has its shadow and every sorrow its balm, and as we journey through life we meet occasionally people who impress themselves upon the tablets of our memory and leave a sweet and indelible impress of their personality, character and distinguished virtues.

This is the realm which Edwin Lonsdale created for himself. Here his magnetic personality and great heart filled with social qualities of good fellowship adorned him, and were reflected back in the hearts of his associates.

It was my good fortune to become acquainted with him soon after his arrival in Philadelphia, and I was at once impressed with his most excellent qualities. In organizations such as the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, the Philadelphia Florists' Club and the Society of American Florists, abounding in men of cultured taste and sweet simplicity, it required more than ordinary capacity to make its mark, but here he was in his proper element. Dignified, humorous, logical and amiable he was the boon companion of all, and his personality, like the perfume of the roses he grew, was over all. Such men are worth much to the world and their departure leaves a void which cannot be effaced by the tears of affection or the most sincere love of our sorrowing hearts either expressed in words or by memoriam.

Adieu to the noble hearted, generous, social friend and companion, who made us all happy as he in his own inimitable way and led us into that old refrain—sweet with the memories of his dear personality, when we recall how he would re-commence after each assumed interruption, his good old song—

"Oh! The brave old Duke of York!"

The echo of his manly voice will steal in unbidden through the long years which will be consecrated to his memory and let us join with the poet Longfellow, when he says

"The friends who leave us do not leave us Sorrow
Of parting, as we feel it when a friend
Lamenting day by day
And knowing when we wake upon the morrow
We shall not find him at our side place
The one beloved face"

Farewell! Old friend, your memory is a sweet heritage.

WILLIAM BURNS SMITH.

FROM PATRICK WELCH.

I am grieved to learn of the death of Edwin Lonsdale. While visiting in Los Angeles, Aug. 24, it was my intention to call on him but I was informed that he could not be seen. When I returned to Boston, Sept. 2, I learned of his death.

Edwin Lonsdale was a splendid type of a man and did much to advance horticultural interests in this country. He was a gentleman who had many excellent qualities—always a good natured, jolly, pleasant companion whose personality earned for him a host of friends who I am sure deeply regret his loss. I wish to express my sympathy for those whom he held dear.

PATRICK WELCH.

Boston.

FROM W. A. MANDA.

The body of the noblest of horticulturists is gone; no more the bright, smiling face to behold nor the wise and learned words to listen to, yet the never-fading memory will be with us all who had the fortune to know personally this man. Yes, man, every inch of him, a gentleman without a peer, horticulturist in all the different branches, of the highest standard, surpassed by none, deserving the first niche in the Hall of Fame of our profession. Modest to a fault, most unselfish, either privately or in business, devoting his whole life to his family and the profession he so loved, nobler in character and deeds than the Duke of York, with whose song he used to delight us on festive occasions, the best tribute we can offer is to follow his example and thus raise the standard of manhood and horticulture.

W. A. MANDA.

South Orange, N. J.

FROM GEORGE C. WATSON.

Good old Ned! He was a prince of good fellows. We never shall see his like again. But Edwin Lonsdale was far more than a prince of good fellows—full of wit and geniality and human kindness! He was also an inspiration for every one he came in contact with. The most unselfish and tireless worker for the uplift I have ever known. He was always a leader in everything aiming to advance horticulture. He had initiative and enthusiasm and carried us all by storm. It was not only what he did himself; but what he made others do—a vastly more important thing. When I came to Philadelphia from Boston twenty-seven years ago Edwin Lonsdale was one of the first warm friends I made, and I am proud to say we remained so to the end. We worked together, played together, fought together during all these years and I feel today that I have lost a tried, true, trusted and loving comrade. Blessings on his memory. He made some noise in his day and generation, and the beauty of it is, it was all for the benefit of mankind.

GEORGE C. WATSON.

FROM ROBERT CRAIG.

Edwin Lonsdale will be remembered as one who had a great fund of information in all lines of horticulture, which he was always ready cheerfully to impart to ready listeners. He delighted to instruct young gardeners in the intricate processes of how to hybridize and to graft in the different methods with the best stocks for the various subjects. He had a hobby for importing, as soon as offered, any new plant that had promise of merit, so that his place at Chestnut Hill was always of interest to those who wished to see the latest introductions. As a man he had more good qualities than any one I ever knew. He was honorable, unselfish and always cheerful, although he had, in late years, to drink deeply of the cup of sorrow. He left for his friends a rich legacy of pleasant memories.

Philadelphia.

ROBT. CRAIG.

FROM JOHN WESTCOTT.

It is with deep sorrow that I write these few lines in memoriam, I and others having lost by death our dear old friend and companion, Ned Lonsdale. It was my privilege and pleasure to have known him for a great many years, not only in a business way, but socially. He was honest and true, and with his happy smile and sunny disposition it was always a real pleasure to meet him. He helped to brighten many a corner where he was, and the sincere and fervent prayer of one of his old chums is that he and the ones that he loved may find and occupy a bright and happy corner in Heaven.

Obituary

George F. Thomas.

Salem, Mass., Sept. 7.—George F. Thomas, aged 75, was found lifeless in bed at his home, 23 Southwick street, today. He was a gardener. Three daughters and three sons survive him.

Thomas Alfred Hewitt Rivers.

British horticulture has lately lost one of its best known men in the death of T. A. H. Rivers, of the firm of Rivers & Son, nurserymen, Sawbridgeworth, Herts. Deceased, who was in his 52nd year, was the eldest son of the late Thos. Francis Rivers. In 1886 he went to Colorado, U. S. A., where he spent eight years in ranching and mining. In 1894 he returned to Sawbridgeworth and took an active part in the business. Mr. Rivers skillfully followed in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, who had done so much to forward the British fruit growing industry in the raising of new varieties. He was a member of the Management Committee of the Horticultural Club, and had acted as a steward at the festival of the Gardeners' Royal Benevolent Institution, besides usefully filling a number of public offices in his own particular district.—W. ROCHESTER FLOWER SHOW

The Flower Show which is being held in Rochester in connection with the Rochester Industrial Exposition is making an excellent record.

Building No. 5 where the Floricultural Exhibit is held, lends itself particularly well to artistic treatment. The building is 100 ft. in width and a clear span, the roof being supported by an arched trussing and the center portion of the roof itself is glass. The trussing is most artistically decorated with smilax and large quantities have been used in this decoration. Suspended from each truss are great baskets covered with smilax and artificial wisteria. The side walls are masses of smilax and at each column are grouped a profusion of arborvitae. For the background the color scheme is beautiful as the difference in the two tones of green gives a very artistic effect.

As visitors enter the building from the main entrance, they are confronted with a beautiful display by the Rochester Park Board. It is of pyramid effect built up with palms, bedding plants, with a border of begonias, ferns and sod and the effect is most pleasing. Immediately to the right and at the end of the hall is a display by Schlegel & Sons who have a miniature pool well grouped with foliage, plants and palms. Farther along a very large and elaborate exhibit is made by James Vicks' Sons. Artistically grouped here are gladioli in beds, cannas in beds, dahlias, asters, perennial plants, annuals, flowering bulbs, etc. This exhibit has a riot of color and presents a splendid effect.

On the left are the exhibits of John House and Frank Lavigne, showing foliage and flowering plants. Next to them is the display of Jacob Thomann & Sons. Their exhibit of gladioli and particularly the "Rochester White" for which they took a silver cup from Cleveland, is a work of art. A bed of "Rochester White" circular in shape, is the foremost and center feature. George Boucher has an excellent exhibit of palms, foliage plants, ferns, etc., grouped in pyramid form with baskets of blooms to lend a touch of color. Next comes H. B. Wilson with foliage plants, palms, etc., massed. They are showing design work each day representing the different classes of this type of work which they do. Their floral horseshoe at the opening of the horse show elicited much pleasing comment. All the foregoing exhibitors are of Rochester.

Immediately in the center of the horticultural exhibit is an immense fountain filled with aquatic plants, by H. A. Dreer of Philadelphia. This exhibit is the center of attraction, as the basin is some 30 ft. in width, built up with rocks and richly colored foliage plants, from the center of which the fountain flows. The adjoining exhibit is also H. A. Dreer's and is composed entirely of decorative plants, palms, pandanus, dracaenas, ferns and crotons, with a profusion of cibotiums.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. of Boston occupy most of the space in the center dividing the flower exhibit from the fruit and vegetable section. They show paintings of their new Liliun myriophyllum. Their exhibit of scotch heather is attracting quite a little attention. A. N. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn. is showing cut roses, ferns, etc.

A most pleasing display of J. B. Keller & Sons, Rochester, consists of palms, decorative plants, roses in baskets, etc., the center feature being a table with a miniature fountain in the center and small favor decorations, etc. The Burt Olney Greenhouses, Albion, N. Y., show two massive beds of geraniums and numerous vases of roses. Their display is a demonstration of what can be done in the rose line in the lake country.

Next to J. B. Keller & Sons come the exhibits of George B. Hart of Rochester and Ed. Brockman of Irondequoit, Mr. Hart showing flowering plants, decorative stuff, cut flowers, etc., a beautiful display. Mr. Brockman is showing geraniums and various flowering plants which form a tastefully gotten up color scheme.

The Sunnyside Dahlia Farms show some of their new dahlias. Salter Bros., Rochester, make unique displays of baskets, together with cut flowers, small ferns, palms, etc. The Crescent Seed Farms show some splendid asters, and John Lewis Childs has a good display of plants, decorative material, etc. C. Kuer & Son make a display of bulbs, etc., with Thomas Cogger in charge. F. R. Pierson has, as usual, a fine exhibit of ferns, plants, etc.

Table decorations are being arranged each day by the various local florists, during the entire time of the Exposition.

The attendance at the Exposition has been very large and one can hear pleasing comments for the two big departments, the Horse Show and the Flower Show.

New varieties from the Society's trial ground were brought before the Committee, and the following received an award of merit:—

Vanessa, Nonpareil, Picotee, Mrs. Swainson, Princess Patricia, and Mrs. Robert Wordsworth, raised by Kelway and Sons, Langport, Somerset. Wil-

EDWIN JENKINS AND HIS SWEET PEAS

Royal Botanic Society's Affairs.

At the annual meeting of the Royal Botanic Society, some of the speakers contended that it was inadvisable that dog shows, for which the Society's grounds at Regent's Park were made use of, should be allowed to overshadow the main purport of the organization, which was to advance the cult of flora and not the canine race. The treasurer stated that the moment the Society's financial position was secure the Council would agree to get rid of the dog shows, and would revert to flower shows.

W. H. ADSETT.

EDWIN JENKINS AND HIS SWEET PEAS.

The recent exhibits of sweet peas at Boston and Newport by Edwin Jenkins of Lenox, Mass., were indeed the triumph of much care and attention to detail in cultivation. The photograph shows how Mr. Jenkins' sweet peas respond to the liberal treatment he gives them. The vines were grown to single stems and reached a height of eight to ten feet, with vigorous dark green foliage and flowers of magnificent size and depth of color.

The results accomplished bear out the principle that if a thing is worth growing it is worth growing well and anyone looking over this lot of plants could but gather inspiration to improve his own methods of culture and not feel satisfied until he had at least tried his best to attain such perfection as exemplified by the plants and flowers in the accompanying picture.

PARK SUPERINTENDENTS' CONVENTION.

The seventeenth annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents was held in San Francisco Aug. 18-20, sessions being held in the new Municipal Auditorium.

About sixty park executives from forty cities of the United States and Canada were present and with ladies and visitors made up an attendance of over one hundred. The convention program provided one day of papers and discussions and two days of inspection tours of the recreation facilities of San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley, as well as the landscape features of the Panama-Pacific Exposition and a number of private estates adjacent to San Francisco. Practically the entire convention party toured the Pacific Coast inspecting recreation features at Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma, Portland, Los Angeles and San Diego, including the Panama-California Exposition.

New Orleans was selected as the city in which the 1916 convention will be held, the time to be decided by the executive committee, but October as the month tentatively agreed upon.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Emil T. Mische, Portland, Oregon; vice-presidents, J. W. Thompson, Seattle, Wash., John T. Walsh, New York City, Alexander Stuart, Ottawa, Canada, Emmett P. Griffin, East St. Louis, Ill., Eugene V. Goebel, Grand Rapids, Mich., L. P. Jensen, St. Louis, Mo.; secretary-treasurer, Roland Cotterill, Seattle.

Twenty-four new members were admitted to membership, the by-laws were amended to require five years' practical experience as a qualification for active membership and the admission fee was raised to $10.

GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' CLUB OF BOSTON.

The club, on invitation of the Breck-Robinson Co., will hold a field day at their nurseries in Lexington, on Saturday, September 11, 1915. Transportation will be furnished to all who can take the train leaving the North Union Station at 1.51 P. M. Those who may prefer to go via electric should take a Cambridge tunnel train at Washington or Park streets, transferring at Harvard Square to cars marked Lowell, Arlington Heights, or Lexington, all of which pass the nurseries.

We hope we may have a large attendance at this field day. Nurseries are specially attractive in September, and the weather is invariably comfortable. Ladies are always welcome on these occasions.

Club meetings will be resumed on September 21. A varied and attractive programme has been arranged for this meeting. Circulars will be forwarded in a few days.

NEW HAVEN COUNTY HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society, with headquarters in New Haven, Conn., is one of the best known societies of its kind in the Eastern states. It is an organization that had its inception over eighty-six years ago. In 1832 it was incorporated by the Connecticut Legislature and for over three-quarters of a century has held a commanding position in the horticultural field. Throughout its history it has been officered by some of the best men in the commercial life of New Haven—men who today subscribe liberally for the society's support.

The New Haven County Horticultural Society gives many exhibitions during the summer months, but the annual exhibition is held this year on September 16th and 17th. These annual exhibitions have become famous for showing the largest and best displays of dahlias, gladioli, etc., in this section of the country. Last season over four thousand specimens were shown. The society is planning for a still larger exhibition this fall and at the present time it looks as if its plans will mature successfully. In the schedule of prizes just issued is the society's "New Classification of Dahlias." Interested persons can obtain a copy by addressing W. C. McIntosh, secretary, 925 Howard avenue, New Haven, Conn.

The list of prizes is complete. Section A, for professionals only, has eleven classes for dahlias, one for cosmos and one for gladioli. Section B, for amateurs only, has five classes for dahlias, three for dahlias, one for asters and two for gladioli. Section C, open to all, has twenty-one classes all dahlias. Section D, open to all, has four classes for asters. Section E, open to all, consists of special prizes and has eight classes, principally dahlias and gladioli. Section F, open to all except where noted, has twenty-nine classes for fruits and vegetables. Section G, open to all, has four classes for bees.

Among the contributors to the prizes are Peter Henderson & Co., Stumpp & Walter Co., Pierson U-Bar Co., and J. M. Thorburn & Co. of New York City; Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., and R. & T. Farquhar & Co. of Boston, Mass.; Henry F. Michell Co., W. Atlee Burpee & Co. and Henry A. Dreer of Philadelphia, Pa.; Hitchings & Co. of Elizabeth, N. J., and Bobbink & Atkins of Rutherford, N. J.; S. D. Woodruff & Sons of Orange, Conn.; W. W. Wilmore of Denver, Col., and Elm City Nursery Co. of New Haven, Conn. Lord & Burnham Co. of New York City contribute a gold medal which is presented to the member of the society making the highest number of points at the bi-weekly exhibits throughout the year.

FLORISTS' CLUB OF PHILADELPHIA.

The regular monthly meeting was held in the club room, Horticultural Hall, on Tuesday evening, and in spite of the warm humid night there was a very good attendance, the attraction being an informal talk by Robert Pyle of the Conard & Jones Company, West Grove, Pa., upon his observations along horticultural lines on the Pacific Coast while visiting the two expositions. Mr. Pyle entertained the club for one hour, giving a good account of the planting, and of all the chief things that were used for producing effect at the two expositions. He stated that the month of August was really the worst month of the whole year to go to California, as anything not under irrigation was dried up and brown, it being practically their winter season. He stated that some wonderful results were attained in the plantings of the past three and four years. He dwelt at some length upon the color scheme which was carried out with such telling effect at San Francisco, even the uniform of the guards being made to accord with the color scheme of buildings, and the black asphalt walks were covered with red sand in order to harmonize. The planting in the different courts was all made to harmonize with the surroundings. Yellow narcissi were followed by yellow tulips and these were followed by yellow iris; in another court rhododendrons were followed with hydrangea, in another court peonies were followed by gladioli, all in proper colors to harmonize with the buildings surrounding them. To an eastern man many things were a disappointment; for instance, cannas that make such a splendid showing in the East, although they make good growth on the Pacific Coast, suffer from the strong winds that blow all the flowers to pieces. The speaker seemed to be most impressed during his twenty-five days' travel with the flora and scenery of the Canadian Rockies, through which he passed on his return, and stated that anyone going to the far West should make his trip so as to pass through these regions either in going or coming back, and should stop off and spend a day at Lake Louise and another at Banff.

This being nomination night of the club, all the present officers were renominated, George Burton, president; John C. Gracey, vice-president; George Craig, treasurer, and David Rust, secretary.

The secretary announced with much feeling the death of Edwin Lonsdale, and stated that at the request of the president of the club he had prepared suitable resolutions as follows:

"In the death of Edwin Lonsdale the Florists' Club has lost another of its original landmarks. He was a charter member, and the first secretary of the club. He served as secretary in 1886 and 1887, and again from October, 1898 to May 1907. He was president in 1894, 1895, being the second president of the club, the first president of the club having held office for eight years. He was at all times deeply interested in all the affairs of the club, and when not holding office was always on important committees. His work was greatly appreciated and he was held in such high esteem by our members that when he decided to go to California, a testimonial banquet was given him on October 28th, 1909. This was attended by eighty-three of our members together with three prominent florists of New York and three from Boston. This banquet was the most successful ever given by the club, and we know that it was greatly appreciated by Edwin Lonsdale, and he went forth to his new work with bright hopes for the future, and now we are brought face to face with the fact that he has been taken away from us by death, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the members of the Club desire to put on record their sense of loss and to extend to his widow their sympathy.

Edwin Lonsdale was a diligent and faithful worker for the interests of the Club. In his intercourse with members of the Club, he was always courteous, kind and modest, and thus endeared himself to us all. He did much to advance the interests of Horticulture, and was always ready to help along anything that would benefit our cause.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes and a copy sent to Mrs. Lonsdale."

The reading of these resolutions was listened to with marked attention and they were at once approved by the club.

The outlook for the meetings for the coming season is a very bright one. There will be a very prominent lecture at the October meeting, a ladies' night and entertainment in November, together with interesting matters pertaining to the National Flower Show at every meeting.

Both Robert Craig and Adolph Farenwald gave a detailed account of what was being done for the National Flower Show. A contract for heating the building has been let, the advertising campaign is well on its way, and the city authorities are now working in harmony with the flower show committees, and everything looks promising for a successful exhibition.

DAVID RUST, Sec'y.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

The County Growers' Association held a very pleasant meeting on Wednesday night, Sept. 1, at the Eleven Mile House. They had extended an invitation to the five wholesale houses to send representatives for a conference, and Messrs. Berning, Kuehn, Smith, Windler and Angermuller were present. It was mutually agreed that the wholesalers are to keep open daily and remain closed on Sunday for the coming season.

CLUB AND SOCIETY NOTES.

The mayor officially opened the exhibition on Wednesday evening. The exhibits included plants, bouquets and vases of cut flowers, fruits and vegetables, a large number of prizes being offered both to professional gardeners and amateurs.

The Bean Crop.

Since issuing our last crop news, later information fully confirms the rather pessimistic information we gave out at that time regarding the bean crop, as frost has aided in the destruction of what remained of the crop. So serious is the situation as reported by several growers, that already a number of wax-pod varieties are classed as crop failures, and some of the green-pods as nearly so. Fortunately there is some mitigation of this situation, in the fact that the demand for seed beans from truck farmers and market gardeners, particularly in the south, promises to be much lighter than usual. This is due in great measure to the light demand for green beans the past summer, and the very low prices secured. As a consequence hundreds of acres were allowed to ripen, and of course the seed will be saved. This condition has seemed so serious to many southern seed merchants that they have made application to their growers for permission to cancel a large part of their contracts for beans. Such requests have been granted with alacrity, as the growers realize that under the most favorable conditions that can possibly be expected their deliveries will be very unsatisfactory. It is hardly necessary to say that the dealers who are thus seeking to escape from their contracts are not well informed on crop conditions, as every bushel of seed beans will be worth double the normal price. As a further evidence of the bad conditions of the bean crop, we are informed that hundreds of acres are being plowed up in Michigan, and winter wheat planted instead. A considerable acreage of beans were planted in Wisconsin the past season, but we are advised that while better than the average in Michigan, the crop is very poor both in yield and samples. It may be well to say here that average samples of this year's crops are likely to be much inferior to last, owing to last year's shortage being due to drought, while this year's is due to excessive rain, developing anthracnose to an alarming extent. To this disease, coupled with a lack of humus in the soil, is due the failure of the bean crop quite as much as to weather conditions. The growers are said to be making every possible effort to overcome these conditions.

Notes.

The value of horticultural imports at the port of New York for the week ending August 28 is given as follows: Fertilizer, $171; clover seed, $4388; grass seed, $3820; trees, bulbs and plants, $65,886.

Corn has made good progress during the past two weeks, and it seems that the light frosts which have visited many sections of the middle west, did little if any damage and the outlook is much more encouraging. Vine seeds are also promising much better.

W. B. Van Eyk, for nine years U. S. representative for G. W. Van Gelderen, Boskoop, Holland, has gone in as a partner and the house will now be known as Van Gelderen & Co. The new firm will take charge of all the assets and liabilities of the old house.

The Jerome B. Rice Seed Co. inform us that they are developing seed stock free of anthracnose but it is a slow process, and requires much painstaking care to accomplish the desired results. However, they are much encouraged by conditions already attained and intend to continue until completely successful. We assume other growers are working along the same lines, but none of them have told us how they are going to put humus in the soil. May be they know; we hope so.

The Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas has provided a correspondence course in Agricultural Journalism, 10 lessons, by S. G. Rubinow. The aim of this course will be to prepare students for writing articles for agricultural journals and magazines. Emphasis will be placed upon style and make up of articles, "leads," appropriate subjects, seasonal material, etc. The character of the leading agricultural papers and journals will be discussed with particular reference to the kind of material they desire. Students will be expected to prepare articles of various kinds and will be constantly referred to concrete examples in various publications.

I want to congratulate you on the continued improvement of Horticulture. It is first class in its high-class contributions and other "number one" qualities. Very truly yours,

NEWS ITEMS FROM EVERYWHERE

SAN FRANCISCO.

Mr. Kuentzel is preparing to open a new florist shop at 1462 Sutter street.

W. S. Marshall, president of the Marshall Nursery Co., Fresno, Cal., has just returned after an extended visit in the east. He was gone about three months, most of which he spent in New York.

At the Chas. Navlet stand at the rear of the ground floor of the Emporium, an early opening of the bulb season is reported. The tourist trade is being catered to especially and with very good returns. A large shipment of Holland bulbs is expected about the middle of the month.

C. W. Ward of Eureka, Cal., is preparing to extend the Cottage Garden Nurseries at Humboldt and C streets, which he operates, having purchased the remainder of the Eden tract adjoining his property. He has already completed plans for two more greenhouses to be erected shortly on the newly acquired property.

The party of florists and nurserymen who went up into Humboldt County as the guests of Chas. W. Ward, following the convention, returned the first of the week after a most enjoyable outing. Daniel MacRorie, H. Plath and Frank Pelicano, who made the trip, have apparently all turned ardent admirers of the northern part of the state. Mr. Pelicano says he had no idea there was such scenery in this part of the country. Going up they spent two days at Eureka, Mr. Ward making sure that they saw all the principal points of interest near the city before they left on the 100-mile automobile trip up the coast, which culminated in a 30-mile ride up the Klamath River in canoes paddled by Indians. They camped at the mouth of Ah-Pah creek for a week, there being sixteen in the party which left Eureka.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Edward Bowers, who has been employed at the store of the S. S. Pen-nock-Meehan Company practically since it was opened here, has resigned, it is said, to accept employment with the Hammond Company, Inc., Richmond, Va.

William J. Boas & Co., Philadelphia, have brought suit against Z. D. Blackstone for flower boxes sold to the latter during the period from January 25 to July 16, inclusive, amounting to $622.46, in addition to which interest is claimed.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized a refund of $223.94 by the railroad companies to J. A. Morris & Son, of Los Angeles, Cal., covering an unreasonable rate charged upon dormant shrubs and plants imported and forwarded from Jersey City to Los Angeles last November. The Commission has also authorized a refund to the Aberdeen Fruit Commission Company on account of an unreasonable rate applied to a shipment of Christmas trees from Trego, Wis.

George W. Hess has practically completed the restoration of the Bartholdi fountain in the Botanic Gardens, so that it now is as it was during the Centennial Exposition. It will be illuminated at night during the fiftieth annual encampment of the G. A. R., which commences September 27. Special flower beds are being set out around it for this occasion. W. F. Gude, who is chairman of the committee of citizens in charge of this encampment, desires that all visiting florists register at his store during their stay in the city. Mr. Hess, who was largely instrumental in the establishment of the botanical garden at Frederick, Md., which was formally opened on September 2, is having designed a handsome gold medal for use as a first prize in competition under the auspices of this garden.

ST. LOUIS.

E. A. Kalish, of Kalish Bros. Floral Co., F. C. Weber, Jr., Frank Windler, C. C. Sanders and Vincent Gorly have returned from their summer vacations.

M. S. Newman's store which was closed for the past two months is again open for business. Miss Newman has as yet not returned home from her summer trip to Colorado. Miss Armstrong is in charge until her return.

C. H. Thompson, botanist at the Missouri Botanical Garden for the past sixteen years, has resigned his position to become assistant professor of horticulture at Amherst, Mass. Mr. Thompson has many friends here in the trade.

William Seeger, president of the Mullanphy Florists' Company, was married on August 31 to a charming widow, Mrs. B. K. Ranford of Chattanooga, Tenn. Mr. Seeger and Mrs. Ranford had known each other only twenty-four hours.

On Saturday, Sept. 4, Superintendent of Parks E. Strehle escorted twenty-five members of the Park Superintendents' Association on their way home from San Francisco, through all the parks and show gardens and a dinner was enjoyed at Sunset Inn.

Cincinnati—Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett again have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer and Master Jim Ohmer of West Palm Beach, Fla., who have just returned from an auto tour through Ohio.

P. J. Olinger went to Chicago, Ill., last Saturday. He and Mrs. Olinger who have been spending some time with relatives at Evanston, Ill., will return to this city at the end of this week.

CLEVELAND.

C. E. Russell, of the Jones-Russell Co., is spending his vacation at home, superintending the rebuilding of a portion of his residence, as more room is necessary to accommodate his family, which is increasing in numbers.

The Gasser Company has now under construction a $10,000 store building at 527 Huron road on a site leased several months ago. The work is being pushed rapidly. The store will be occupied for their wholesale business and will be much more central than their old location.

F. C. W. Brown, manager of the Gasser Co., accompanied by F. C. Bartels, manager of the greenhouses of the Gasser Co., left on August 28th, taking the water trip to Toronto, where they will visit the Canadian Exposition and some of the large growers near Toronto, including the Dale estate.

Among the magnet events that will draw all live commercial and private growers and retail and wholesale florists to Cleveland, November 10 to 14, are the following: Annual Exhibition and Convention of the Chrysanthemum Society of America; Fall Exhibition and Meeting of the American Rose Society; Adjourned Meeting of the Florists Telegraph Delivery Association; Adjourned Meeting of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio.

Michael Bloy of Detroit, who was in the city from Sunday until Tuesday, was kept busy by the various members of the Cleveland Florists' Club seeing the improvements and additions that have been made to the Sixth City, since he was a resident here eight or ten years ago. On Tuesday Herb. Bate and Frank Friedley accompanied Mr. Bloy to Storrs & Harrison Co.'s plant at Painesville, and they also called upon Carl Hagenberger and Merkel Bros. at Mentor, and inspected the private estate of James Corrigan at Wickliffe. Mr. Bloy is to be one of the judges in the coming flower show.

Herbert Bate spent a few weeks down at the Lakes south of Cleveland, and is now back on the job, getting the final premium list for the big November Flower Show shaped up. A lot of fine special prizes are being received from the owners of private estates in and near Cleveland, all of which will go to make the premium list more interesting to the growers. Mr. Bate figures on not less than 500 prominent dealers and growers in attendance. The campaign for the next four weeks will be to get exhibitors that have been withholding their decision regarding taking display space for trade exhibits; telling us how much space they really want and arranging for it before it is too late for them to get the full advantage of having time enough to make plans to get the best results out of the show.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO., 1129 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

NEW YORK.

The New York Florists' Supply Company are about to move from 127 West 28th street to 103 W. 28th.

Harry A. Barnard, amiable and earnest representative for Stuart Low & Co., is at the Hotel Albert, New York City, and any communications about choice material such as that firm has been supplying to discriminating buyers in past years will receive a prompt and zealous attention if sent to that address any time during September and October.

The Elliott Auction Company have received a full quota of Dutch bulb consignments and will offer them in handy lots at auction at their rooms, 42 Vesey street, on Tuesday, September 14. To make this sale particularly interesting a fine collection of palms, ferns, dracaenas and other foliage plants by local growers of repute will be offered at the same time.

In the official report of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, New York State wins the bulk of awards. The landscape treatment surrounding the New York State Building was awarded a gold medal, the only prize given for landscape treatment in the entire Exposition. This work was done by Siebrecht & Son, of the Rose Hill Nurseries, and all the stock for the landscape work was shipped from this city last December. The plans were made by Henry A. Siebrecht, Jr., and the work was executed by Henry A. Siebrecht, Sr., who was four and a half months in California.

PHILADELPHIA

George Anderson continues to improve a little and the family are now a bit more hopeful in their reports.

The last rites over Edwin Lonsdale were held on Wednesday, Sept. 8th, from the residence of his brother-in-law, John Burton, at Chestnut Hill, and were largely attended by representatives from all branches of the trade as well as many personal friends. Interment was in the Lonsdale family lot at Ivy Hill Cemetery.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

New York Show Promises to Be a Great Success.

A tremendous amount of enthusiasm is being shown in every section of the country in The American Dahlia Society, which was formed in New York City in May by Ex-President Vincent of the Society of American Florists and other dahlia lovers. It is the pleasure of the secretary to advise that over a hundred dahlia lovers have joined as charter members, and that there is every prospect of this number being increased to 250 before the annual meeting.

The annual meeting will be held during the first show of the organization on September 24th, 25th and 26th, at the Museum of Natural History in New York City. Here will be held what is expected to be the largest and grandest dahlia show ever held in the United States. Expectations are that over $300 will be offered for competition at this show. Copies of the preliminary schedule have been issued, and may be obtained by writing to either George V. Nash, secretary of the Horticultural Society of New York, Bronx Park, or Joseph J. Lane, secretary, The American Dahlia Society, 11 West 32nd street, New York City. John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists will take charge of the Exhibition.

Among other things which are being done to promote interest in this show and make it a success, may be mentioned the fact that the executive board at its last meeting, authorized the secretary to prepare 2500 double post cards, to be sent out through the co-operation of dahlia dealers in various parts of the country to the best customers of the dahlia. These 2500 cards have already been mailed, and great returns are looked forward to. This card is an urgent appeal to the dahlia lover to join The American Dahlia Society, now in its infancy, and so get charter membership. All joining before September 24th become charter members. The dues are $ for initiation, $2 for active membership and $1 for associate membership. It is stated in this post card that it is the intention of the society to publish an information bulletin for members as soon as the events of the organization permit. As has been stated previously, President Vincent has offered to supply the dahlia blooms to any florist who will enter into the competition for the various prizes offered for dahlias shown in use for decoration.

The Michell Seed House of Philadelphia, have offered gold, silver and bronze medals. The Society of American Florists has recognized the society, and also offered one of their medals for competition for showings of new and rare varieties of dahlias. Peter Henderson & Co., H. A. Bunyard Co., Stumpp & Walter Co., Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., The Garden Magazine, John Lewis Childs Co., Henry A. Dreer and W. Atlee Burpee Co., have all contributed prizes and the Horticultural Society of New York has offered $100. Everything points to this being one of the most successful individual flower shows that has ever been held in this country. Intense enthusiasm is being manifested among the trade, and the amateurs are certainly doing their share to make it a successful show. An attempt is being made to get together flowers from all the growers possible and to make an exhibition of one flower of each of as many varieties as possible. This, I believe, will be of very great interest to the visitors.

It is expected that guides will be on the floor of the Exhibition to inform and help visitors in acquainting themselves with the dahlia and the varieties. The secretary and the executive board are desirous of securing prompt and early co-operation from the trade and from amateurs in general, and will appreciate hearing from those who are willing to co-operate. As the show will be held September 24th, 25th and 26th, prompt action is necessary.

Flower Market Reports

BOSTON A combination of excessively sultry summer weather this week in combination with the Jewish New Year abstinence from business has had a decidedly soporific effect upon business at the time of our going to press. The holidays will pass, but the weather is not so easily predicted and so we are in some doubt as to the outlook for the balance of this week. It is a fact, however, that the few cold days last week seemed to have a decidedly stimulating influence and the markets where flowers are wholesaled took on a lively hue quite in contrast with the drowsy inactivity which has blanketed the district since General Humidity opened headquarters in Boston. Nothing needs to be said about the stock on sale. It is asters, asters, asters. Gladioli are materially shortened up. Cattleyas are still scarce, but every day shows a loosening up of the stringency and the prices tend downwards. Quality of roses is excellent.

A marked improvement BUFFALO was shown in business conditions on Friday and Saturday of last week. There was nothing stirring earlier in the week though a heavy supply of all stock was received and the outlet hard to find. Roses were a little scarce for a few days but the supply on these is now again normal and demand a trifle better. A few weddings have helped things along and lily of the valley, white roses and other wedding material have had a slightly improved demand.

Bright and warm weather CHICAGO the first part of last week caused a largely increased supply of roses. Beauties more than doubled in quantity. The market held up stiff, however, until the end of the week, when prices began to sag, particularly in open stock. Good sound shipping stock held its own at current quotations. Roses are offered in all lengths and in quality are the best this market ever saw at this season of the year. The list includes all the novelties as well as the standard sorts. Shipping demand continues quite active and in local circles also there is a little more life. On the whole, stock is clearing at fairly good prices. Asters continue in active demand and are clearing well, really fancy stock being often short of demand. Gladioli are much less in evidence and as to quality leave much to be desired. Most of the stock is short in stem excepting Mrs. Francis King, which is still very good. Carnations are in good demand, the offering being very light; the quality is improving. Chrysanthemums are quite plenty and move slowly. Orchids are hard to find and lily of the valley continues extremely scarce. Green goods have enjoyed an active demand, plumosus and Sprengerli especially so. This week opened with cool weather and a steady downpour of rain with prospects of decreasing supplies.

CINCINNATI The supply is holding up well and is giving us more than the usual share of flowers we are accustomed to having as the middle of September approaches. This supply is more than sufficient for present needs although shipping business is good. The receipts in asters are very heavy and generally very good. The offerings in roses are large and of a much better quality than they were. The shorter ones are not selling very well. Carnations are coming in steadily and show some improvement in quality. Lilies are plentiful. Other offerings include gladioli, dahlias and cosmos in quantity.

NEW YORK A tour of observation around the wholesale district at present during the past week would not tend to inspire anyone with a great desire to get into the wholesale flower business or even into the flower growers' domain. The Jewish holidays now on do not tend to improve the situation which has been anything but encouraging for some time past. Aside from the asters, which are now at their height, the quantity of desirable material in sight is not very large but it is far beyond the requirements of the drowsy market. Gladioli continue to shrink in number. Cattleyas are moving the other way and probably will soon be down to panic prices as the abnatis begin to come forward. There are heaps of lilies, lots of roses and a supply of dahlias of rather medium quality which increases in volume daily. Chrysanthemums are gradually coming into line as staples of the market and they are very nice in quality. This does not seem to account for their movement. Like everything else they seem loth to move.

Very little
SAN FRANCISCO change has occurred in the stock offerings since our last report. The supply of asters has dropped off rather abruptly and the best offerings are readily absorbed at higher prices. Carnations show improvement, but the stems of the new crop are still short. Sweet peas are a negligible quantity, the supply being limited and the quality poor. Dahlias continue to arrive in ample supply. Minnie Berger, Delice, Geisha and Mrs. Kitwell are to be seen everywhere and show excellent quality. Lots of them are being sold at fair prices. There is a drop in the supply of gladioli, while amaryllis floods the market. Lots of zinnias are appearing, but they do not move so well as many other kinds of flowers. Chrysanthemums are beginning to play an important part in the daily business. The quality is improving rapidly, and the supplies are now sufficient for all requirements. There is plenty of Golden Glow, October Frost and Monrovia and other varieties are beginning to arrive. So far the supply has all been consumed in the local market, but shipments will start about the middle of the month. Violets are improving, but they are still very soft with little prospect of eastern shipments starting much before the middle of October. A real scarcity of lily of the valley was felt the past week. Lilium speciosum rubrum still appears in great quantity and maintains its popularity well. Roses show better quality, but good stock is still rather scarce.

The daily market during the last week was all that could be expected of it at this time of the year. Business is reported poor in all parts of the city by the retail florists. The wholesale market is kept well supplied with stock. Prices are low in all grades. Roses are many. Carnations are coming along fine and show marked improvement, color, size and stems. Lilies and lily of the valley sold well all week. Asters are too many. Gladioli and tuberose are nearing their end and dahlias, cosmos and chrysanthemums are coming on.

The general tone of business shows some little improvement over last week—in fact, better this year than last. Many orders for future dates have already been placed and it is predicted that during the coming season business will be exceptionally good. There is still far more stock to be had than the market can possibly consume. Dahlias are making their presence felt by reason of the quantities in which they are received, but it looks as though asters were about on the wane and the majority of these flowers are below A1 quality. The dahlias themselves are not of the best by reason of the earliness of their season. Huge quantities of all flowers daily go to the refuse piles, even including roses which for this season of the year are quite good. American Beauty roses from the north

The Santa Cruz Bulb and Plant Co., Santa Cruz, Cal., is reported as being embarrassed and its business is under attachments from a number of creditors.

The Cowee gladiolus farm at Berlin, N. Y., has been made use of for some time past as a scenic setting for some movie photo plays. No more beautiful setting could be imagined for a rural romance than the resplendent fields of blooming gladioli on the Cowee farm.

SCOTCH SOOT

Where there is a house that is just full of buds almost ready to show color, nothing will turn better color into the flowers than a little soot, that can be scattered over the benches before watering. The amount applied should not be excessive, as the soot is very strong and may damage some of the foliage somewhat. Apply just enough to blacken the surface of the soil in the benches, and let it go at that. Better a little often than too much all at once.

We offer the genuine in original cwt.

THOMAS J. BENWELL.

We mentioned in our issue of last week the gift of a purse of gold to Thomas J. Benwell by A. Hews & Co., in recognition of his fifty years' faithful service in the employ of the company. We now present a portrait of Mr. Benwell, familiar to a generation of flower pot buyers in and around Boston as local salesman for that well known concern.

Mr. Benwell was born in Birmingham, England, on December 15, 1851. He came to this country in infancy with his parents, who settled in Cambridge, Mass., and was educated in the Cambridge public schools. At the age of 14 he went to work for H. Hews & Son and learned the fundamentals of the pottery art. The concern was a modest one in those days, the entire force consisting of H. and A. H. Hews—father and son—and two boys, of which Benwell was one. All hands worked at the wheel and in delivering orders, etc., as necessity demanded. Five thousand flower pots was considered a fair week's sales, all being hand made. Last year's output was twenty million. Clay ground sufficient for the wants of the firm for the next fifty years has recently been secured and we hope that popular "Tom" Benwell may live to see the greater part of that clay supply used up.

On May 13, 1902, Mr. Benwell met with an awful accident. His clothing got entangled with some shafting in the factory and before he was finally released from the machinery his right arm, muscles of the shoulder and flesh on his chest had been slowly torn away and ground up, fifteen minutes having elapsed before his panic stricken fellow workmen managed to shut off the power and release what was left of him. On his return from the hospital he was given by Mr. Hews the option of a continuation of his salary without work for the remainder of his life, but he preferred to stay in the harness and, as he says, "work his life out rather than to rust out."

The Heating Problem Solved

Judging strictly according to mechanical merits, it's the METROPOLITAN PATENTED BOILER you want.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel, and less attention than any other boilers on the market. The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface. Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit.

Smooth, perfect finished castings.

Push nipple connections.

Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals.

Deep ash pits, making the removal of ashes a slight task.

Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean.

Grates that are made for hard usage and long service.

And above all, they are Fuel Saving, Not Fuel Wasting.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50% in coal.

PUT YOUR HEATING PROBLEMS UP TO US.

WE'VE BEEN AT IT FOR 44 YEARS.

Burnham heated vegetable house of F. W. Cheney, at So. Manchester, Conn. That's Mr. Cheney by the partition.

When we say a Burnham grate measures 30 inches; it measures 30 inches. You can measure it yourself and get exactly the same measure. It is honest from start to finish.

From Set-Up to Fire-Up It Saves Money

HAVING reached the point where you now fully realize, that for ranges up to 30,000 feet there are certain economies; certain certainties about a CAST IRON BOILER that are impossible to obtain in any WROUGHT IRON BOILER YET MADE; then you are just in the right frame of mind to consider THE BURNHAM Cast Iron Sectional Boiler.

That you will get in that frame of mind sooner or later, we haven't a doubt, because keener competition in your business requires closer economies, and the Burnham is an economizer.

To save every cent possible you will naturally first turn to your coal expense; watch your boilers closer and come to more logical conclusions.

You will appreciate that when a greenhouse boiler is made expressly for greenhouse heating, it stands to reason it should be the best for heating a greenhouse.

The BURNHAM being the only Cast Iron Sectional Boiler made expressly for greenhouse work; you will finally take the question up with us, and give us a chance to "show you" why from set-up to fire-up, it saves you money.

If you wish to talk it over, say when and where and we'll be there.

If you have already made up your mind; but haven't yet made out your order; then do it and send it along. If in a hurry wire at our expense. We can ship at once.

NOTES ON CULTURE OF FLORISTS' STOCK

CONDUCTED BY

John J. M. Farrell

Questions by our readers in line with any of the topics presented on this page will be cordially received and promptly answered by Mr. Farrell. Such communications should invariably be addressed to the office of HORTICULTURE.

"If vain our toil, we ought to blame the culture, not the soil."—Pope.

Canterbury Bells

Now is the proper time to lift and pot plants from the field. As a rule 7-inch and 8-inch pots will suffice, but extra large plants will need 8-inch and 10-inch pots. Give these plants a generous compost, stand them out doors in an open sunny spot and leave them there until sharp frost endangers the pots when they should be placed on a bed of coal ashes in a cold frame. Leave them exposed to the weather for some weeks yet. A few degrees of frost will do them no harm but cover with sashes when cold becomes keener. They can be buried in perfectly dry leaves and kept over winter in frames if desired. They can be started in gentle heat for spring flowering any time after the middle of December. There are no finer spring flowering plants for the country florist than Campanula Medium.

Chrysanthemums

What feeding is needed must be done during the next few weeks as it is impossible to continue feeding much after the buds show color. The question of feeding chrysanthemums is an especially important one and many otherwise good growers seem to be all at sea as to what and when and how much to feed their plants. I prefer a natural fertilizer such as cow or sheep manure. The proportion of natural fertilizer is at a rate of about a bushel to a barrel. This information is more for the small grower or beginner, as the big grower, with his large tanks and pumping supply, is able to figure out his own formula. This fertilizer can be allowed to stand in the barrel for a couple of days and after the water has been drawn off the barrel can be filled again. Where you use chemicals such as nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of potash, a safe proportion of any of these fertilizers is at the rate of a 4-inch pot to a 50 gallon barrel of water making sure that the crystals are all dissolved before applying to the plants. Give weekly fumigations for fly.

Gardenias

If the plants show any white roots on the surface give them a thin mulch of old decayed cow or horse manure but do not apply any liquid manure or chemicals; these may produce plants of great vigor but it will be only at the expense of buds. It is unwise to rush the plants in any way. From 60 to 65 degrees at night
